House Votes To Freeze D.C. Rents at Jan. 1 Level

Senate Committee To Meet 'Probably Friday' to Speed Bill, McCarran Says

The Senate District Committee late this week will consider the bill freezing Washington's rent rates at the January 1 level which the House passed yesterday with two amendments. The measure passed without a record vote.

One amendment, introduced by Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, would empower the local rent administrator to reduce rentals below the January 1 level if they are found not to have been "fair and reasonable" at that time.

Bill Would Be Model for U. S.

The other amendment, proposed from the floor by the House District Committee, would place the cost of the Rent Administration on the shoulders of the District government.

If the measure becomes law, it will be the first local rent control act in the country during this emergency and is expected to serve as a model for other communities.

Following a consultation with Chairman McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, Senah F. Camalier, the Senate District Committee municipal adviser, announced that the full committee will meet "probably Friday" to consider the House-approved measure.

Debate Lasts 2 Hours.

The committee meeting will be open to the public, he said, although only testimony which would throw a new light on the measure will be heard. He emphasized that the group will not "go over the ground again" considered by the House subcommitte in its hearings on the bill.

Two hours of discussion and debate preceded the passage of the bill yesterday by the House. Only 46 of the 435 members of the House were on the floor.

Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee and author of the bill, told the House, "The committee has consolidated the best thought on the subject. This bill is a sane and proper approach to the problem of rent control in the District."

Guided by the experiences of rent control measures in the first World War, the committee worked with the advice of the Office of Price

Officer Removed After Nap Delays 3-Mile Convoy

Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commandant of the Twenty-ninth Division now on maneuvers in South Carolina, yesterday took drastic steps to prevent recurrence of a convoy which he described as "unsatisfactory," "disgraceful" and "deplorable."

He ordered a lieutenant of the antitank battalion relieved of command for going to sleep in a vehicle in the road, blocking three miles of trucks. As a result of this and other incidents of inefficiency, Reckord said, a trip from base camp to field bivouac took 13 hours. It was scheduled to take 12 hours, and could have been made in 11 hours, he said.

Fireman Saves Own Child, Perched on Bridge for Leap

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 3.—If Fireman Leroy McIntyre fights a thousand fires and saves a life in every one of them, he is unlikely to make another rescue like the one he did today.

For Fireman McIntyre was called to stop a man from jumping off the 70-foot-high superstructure of the Sixth Street Bridge which spans the Allegheny River and that man turned out to be his son.

Edwin McIntyre, 25, the son, disheartened by a squabble with his wife, climbed the superstructure in midafternoon then stopped to think. Pedestrians saw him and called the fire department.

Firemen form No. 1 station quickly put a ladder up to the steel beams and called to Edwin to come down.

"I'm not going to come down and don't come near me," Edwin shouted back. The conversation kept up until the man on the bridge top disclosed his father was a fireman.

A police squad car hurried over to Leroy McIntyre's station, where it had to wait 15 minutes for him to return from a small fire.

Taking a quick look up the ladder upon arriving at the scene, the Senior McIntyre shouted:

"I'm coming up, son!"

Then the father walked up the ladder, calmly with no show of hurry. What he said to his boy upon arriving at the top was lost in the wind streaking through the steel girders.

Soon Edwin put a cautious foot on the ladder. When he seemed to falter, the father climbed down around him. Then holding on to the ladder with one hand and supporting Edwin with the other arm, he came down.

When they reached the street the father embraced his son. Their words were lost once more, this time in the applause of the thousands who had gathered to watch the drama.

Edwin was white and trembling when place din a police car. He was taken to the police station to rest overnight and tomorrow will be given a hearing on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Edwin McIntyre didn't see her husband. She was busy at home caring for their three-week-old son.

Grand Jury Digs for Source Of Hill's Cash

Nazi Agent Inquiry Calls for Bank Data Of Fish's Clerk

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Still on the trail of the mysterious man who gave $12,000 to George Hill, indicted employe of Representative Hamilton Fish, the special grand jury on German agents yesterday dug into the records of Hill's banking transactions for the last two years.

Other developments in the expanding investigation of Hitler's propaganda machine included:

1. On technical grounds, two of the five counts of the indictment against George Silvester Viereck, top Nazi propagandist in this country, were quashed. The Government served notice that it planned to try Viereck on the other three counts November 17.

2. Representative Martin Dies, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activity, revealed that his group has turned its fire on the use of Congressional franks by German agents. Dies said, "The evidence shows a well-organized Nazi movement with leadership by persons in high places.

3. Three young women familiar with preparation of mailing lists for antiinterventionist groups appeared before the special grand jury.

4. Also questioned in the grand jury room was Anthony F. Junga, "magistrate" of a New York Steuben Society unit, which last summer invited its members to mail franked propaganda to their friends. Junga will be questioned again today.

When the special grand jury summoned an alleged henchman of Viereck's on September 19 Hill sent him a House truck which hauled off a ton of franked envelopes. Hill had eight mailbags full of such envelopes placed in a storeroom used by Fish. When he denied this and also denied knowing Viereck,

Lack of Signs Holds Up New Parking Rules

Regulations Scheduled To Become Effective Today on 32 Streets

Parking Situation

DISTRICT COMMISSIONERS recommend reorganization of Capital's traffic-control setup into a single unit headed by Highway Director H. C. White-hurst. Page 17.

New Ban Put On

early

Washington's new rush-hour rules on parking, stopping and standin along 32 arterial highways becomes effective today—but there won't be strict enforcement for some time because the Traffic Department hasn't enough "don't" signs to go around.

It will take an estimated 2000 signs to adequately warn motorists of the new rule, said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. On hand yesterday when the time came to start erection were less than 500 signs.

The new 18-by-12-inch red and white markers are being manufactured at the Lorton Reformatory, and the entire supply will not be available for about ten more days, according to Van Duzer.

Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly has instructed members of his command to "take it easy" and issue only warning notices until all streets have been properly marked.

William Harland, sign shop chief, yesterday took what signs had been delivered and scattered them throughout the affected area where they would least conflict with existing "do and don't" placards. The heaviest concentration is along Rhode Island Avenue Northeast between North Capitol Street and Lincoln Road.

The new regulations, promulgated by the Commissioners primarily to prevent rush-hour commercial deliveries, prohibit parking on the streets from 7 to 9:30 a. m. and 4 and 6:30 p. m. and standing or stopping between 7:30 and 9 a. m. and 4 and 6 p. m.

In numerous instances the bans apply to only one side of a street—

Quit After Quarrel

Former Italian Embassy Clerk Found Ill of Sleeping Potion

An attractive 37-year-old Italian-born woman who claimed to know so much about the inside affairs of the Italian Embasy that national magazines have made her attractive offers to "tell her story," lies in an observation ward at Gallinger Municipal Hospital, suffering from an overdose of sleeping tablets, it was learned last night.

The woman, Miss Maria Volpi, of 1717 Columbia Road Northwest, has been in the hospital since the night of October 27. She was formerly employed as a secretary entrusted with the job of gleaning news of significance to the Italian government from American newspapers, but quit her post there about two months ago after violent disagreements with officers of the embassy whom she felt were mismanaging the affairs of the Italian government in this country.

Her story was pieced together yesterday from accounts told friends during the last two months. Hospital authorities refused to permit a reporter to interview her, although they have allowed a number of friends to see her and talk with her in the last few days.

According to police records, Miss Volpi told Detective Robert Bryant that she attempted to commit suicide because she had lost faith in humanity and was despondent be-

'Have Cause' For War, Says Sen. Connally

Contention Made After Sen. Maloney Comes Out Against Freedom of Seas

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Administration's top Senate spokesmen on foreign affairs yesterday entered vigorous denials that modification of the Neutrality Act "means war" as the Senate entered the closing days of debate on the President's free shipping bill.

Chairman Connally of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a clash with opposition leaders said Hitler "has given us cause for war," but passage of the bill "does not mean a declaration of war any more than did the other steps we already have taken."

Earlier, Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, former Foreign Relations Committee chairman, said the United States "will undertake to prevent submarines or planes from sinking our ships," but any question of an "all-out, shooting war" would certainly be put up to Congress.

In an unscheduled, impassioned speech, Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, declared against the grant of authority for American merchantmen to sail through combat zones and into belligerent ports. He made his stand clear after a sharp verbal clash with Senator Connally.

Gurney Asks Repeal

Maloney, hitherto not publicly committed, said he would vote only for House-approved power to arm merchantmen. The Connecticut Democrat said he believes that "the die is cast," that there is no turning back but that "I believe we are going too far too fast."

Administration leaders continued to claim votes in hand for three-point modification of the Neutrality Act but Maloney's speech appealed to a doubtful fringe of Senators who have declared to date only for ship arming.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi, one of these, immediately after the Maloney speech asked permission to take the floor today. Opposition leaders said the vote for wide modification as against ship arming only, will be held to a very narrow margin.

During one bitter round, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared it would be "a blessing to the American people if President Roosevelt would call for the resignation of his swashbuckling Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, who is a disgrace to the Administration and who is constantly making statements that we are going to war."

Mimicking Wheeler, Connally accused the Montanan of expressing

Nazis Ignore Reparation Claim of U. S.

Decline to Consider Demand for Payment For Torpedoing Of Robin Moor

By Charles Hurd
Copyright by New York Times

The Nazi government has declined to consider a demand by the United States for compensation for the torpedoing of the American freighter Robin Moor, sunk in the South Atlantic May 21, the State Department announced yesterday.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull made public this declination five weeks after it was handed to the Government here. At the same time, he released copies of correspondence with Hans Thomsen, German charge d'affaires, which included notification by Thomsen that he would not send to his government a copy of a message to Congress by President Roosevelt in which the sinking was termed an act of "piracy" by an "international highwayman."

No Reuben James Details

While State Department officials said that the messages made public had not necessarily closed the technical record on the Robin Moor, it appeared that this incident is one which will be in abeyance until the end of the war. It obviously has far more importance on foreign policy than is indicated by the demand for compensation, which the Government figured at $2,967,092.

The State Department made public the correspondence with regard to the Robin Moor while the Navy Department waited through the third day for details about the sinking of the destroyer Reuben James, which was torpedoed west of Iceland Thursday night.

On Friday came word of the torpedoing. On the night of that day a brief message reported the rescue of 44 survivors, leaving the inference that the remainder of the crew of about 120 men, including six officers, had gone down with the veteran destroyer.

Deliberate Sinking

It was not expected that details would be received until the convoy of which the Reuben James was a part reached its destination, since radio silence is imposed on ships at sea for all but the most vital messages.

While the sinking of the freighter Robin Moor did not involve loss of life, it represented the first deliberate torpedoing of an American ship flying the American flag. Other American ships sunk before it had flown foreign flags, principally the one of Panama.

The loss of the Robin Moor did not become known until almost a month after it occurred. Its crew and passengers first drifted for long periods in lifeboats and then were

Senator's Fitness Investigated

Ex-Aide Says Langer Tried To Influence Federal Judge

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Senator William Langer, of North Dakota, yesterday heard a once trusted political lieutenant tell the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee that he passed out $100 bills in an attempt to influence a Federal judge trying a criminal case against him.

He heard the same witness declare that a former law associate of the Senator said he believed he knew a way the same judge might be assigned to the trial of Tom Pendergast, Kansas City political boss, and that an attempt was to be made to have Langer appear as attorney for Pendergast for a $10,000 fee.

The committee spent a full day taking testimony as it opened hearings on the fitness of Langer, twice Governor of North Dakota, to sit as a member of the United States Senate.

James Mulloy, Langer's confidential assistant and former secretary of the North Dakota industrial and securities commission, told the committee that between $1700 and $1800 was paid by the present Senator to C. N. Leedom and Gale B. Wyman, son of A. Lee Wyman, Federal judge who presided at trials of the Governor and associates.

Leedom, former United States marshal, "on a number of occasions had told me that he was, in part, responsible for Wyman's appointment to the Federal bench," Mulloy declared.

Under cross-examination, the witness admitted that he is now a special investigator for John Moses, Democratic Governor of North Dakota.

Leedom is dead, and Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, committee chairman, observed as the hearing was adjourned until 10 a. m. today that "under no rule of law" would Mulloy's testimony be admissible. He made the observation, he said, "in justice to Judge Wyman." The judge and his son were in the committee room.

Throughout the testimony, Senator Langer's face was expressionless. Occasionally he whispered to his attorney, Francis Murphy, but for the most part he listened intently, chewing on unlighted cigars and puffing at unlighted cigarettes.

Mulloy's testimony concerned the trial of Senator Langer, a Republican, and some associates on a Federal indictment charging conspiracy to collect certain percentages of the salaries of Federal relief clients and employes. Conviction on the charge

Names of 45 Rescued, 2 Dead Announced; Vessel Carried 142

The Navy Department early today announced that "little hope" now is held for the seven officers and 88 of the enlisted men aboard the destroyer Reuben James when the United States warship was torpedoed and sunk west of Iceland last Thursday night.

At the same time, the department made public the names of two known dead, one whose body was recovered and another who died after rescue, eight injured survivors and 37 rescued unhurt.

The compilation disclosed for the first time that 142 men were aboard the destroyer when she was sent to the bottom by a German U-boat. Previously the number had been placed at about 120.

Apparently the department had waited until ships in the convoy of which the Reuben James was a part had time to reach port or otherwise report on the full extent of the disaster to the destroyer before releasing the names of the survivors and announcing practical abandonment of hope for the other 95.

'The Navy Department Holds Little Hope'

The official announcement was as follows:

"Of the crew of 142 officers and men one body was recovered, one man died shortly after being rescued, eight were injured and 37 men were uninjured. The Navy Department holds little hope for rescue of the seven officers and 88 men who have not been accounted for."

Names of the seven officers of the destroyer were announced Friday as follows:

Lieut. Comdr. Heywood L. Edwards, San Saba, Calif., commanding; Lieut. Benjamin Ghetzler, Annapolis, Md.; Lieut. (Junior Grade) Dewey G. Johnston, El Cajon, Calif.; Lieut. (J. G.) John J. Daub, Saltsburg, Pa.; Lieut. (J. G.) James M. Belden, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ensign Craig Spowers, East Orange, N. J., and Ensign Howard V. Wade, Glen Ridge, N. J.

Names of the enlisted men not accounted for were not made public.

All Aboard Lost

12 Die as Navy Bomber Crashes on Atlantic Patrol

The Nation has lost 12 more men in the battle of the Atlantic, it became known last night.

The Navy Department announced that a Navy bomber had crashed in an "Atlantic flight," presumably Sunday, and that its crew of 11 officers and men and an Army officer had been killed.

Wreckage of the plane has been found, the Navy announced. The craft had been missing since midmorning Sunday. Where the crash occurred was not revealed.

It was announced only that the plane "was operating in the Atlantic Ocean area."

While the department gave nothing but barest details of the loss, it was learned that the plane was on patrol duty in the Navy's effort to drive the Nazi "rattlesnakes" out of the Nation's defensive waters. It was the first loss of a plane on the Atlantic patrol.

Conceding the possibility, in answer to questions, that the craft might have been shot down, officials insisted there was nothing to indicate such a cause for the crash.

The department announced definitely that the 12 men aboard had been killed, in contrast with the usual word in case of such a crash that those aboard are "missing." Officials declined to explain the departure from custom, but insisted

Aid for Convoys

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy announced last night that 50 warships of a new type will be built in American navy yards for Great Britain.

The craft, to cost an estimated 300 million dollars, are called "escort vessels" and are especially designed to protect merchant convoys from U-boat and airplane attack.

No details were given as to the characteristics of the ships, but it is understood they will resemble destroyers, though smaller, slower and less heavily armed than the newer American craft of this type.

Although no vessels of the class contemplated have ever been built in the United States, it is estimated that the craft can be turned out in quantity much faster than the more complex destroyers.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, chief of the Bureau of Ships, recently told Congress that it would take about six months to provide the ways and other facilities for building such ships and that after the program got underway they could be built in ten months time.

The Navy shipbuilding chief testified that plans called for building 20 ways for constructing escort vessels. Diesel-electric propelling machinery

Reds Gain on Moscow Front, Armies Split In Crimea; U. S. Warns Finns to Quit War

Make Peace or Risk Loss of Friendship, Hull Tells Helsinki

By Arthur F. Degreve
United Press Staff Writer

The United States yesterday moved to immobilize Finland as a cobelligerent with Germany by openly warning her to make peace with Russia or risk the dual loss of her own security and American friendship.

The peace offensive was revealed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, along with a tersely phrased, explanatory press conference statement.

The Finnish Legation had no immediate comment. Minister Hjalmar Procope said, however, that Hull's declaration had been transmitted to his government.

Hull said that on August 18 the State Department had conveyed to Procope a Soviet offer to negotiate a peace under which Finland would receive territorial concessions.

He said the Baltic government had not responded and disclosed that more recently he had instructed H. F. Arthur Schoenfeld, United States Minister to Finland, to remind the Finns that their war with Russia is thwarting the United States policy of aiding nations resisting Adolf Hitler.

This Government, Hull added, is still awaiting the outcome ofSchoenfeld's overtures.

Finland's failure to respond is believed to have inspired Russia's current plea that Britain declare war not only on Finland but on Rumania and Hungary, which are assisting in the Nazi drive into the Soviet.

Russia wants another front created in the west, British help in the struggle with Finland, or demilitarization of the Northern Front so that urgently needed troops and material can be shifted to frontal defenses around Moscow and in the Ukraine.

Germany, on the other hand, has profited by Finland's keeping Russia fighting on the Northern Front, and Hull recognized that Nazi leaders would bring pressure upon the Finns to continue their war.

Without specifically revealing the underlying motives of the peace offensive, Hull associated it directly with this Government's policy of providing all-out aid to nations resisting aggressors.

Recently manifested Finnish policy, he said, appeared to forecast continuation of military operations in Soviet territory. This, he said, would seriously impair the United States war-aid program, and, he added pointedly, it will not contribute to Finland's ultimate security.

Progression of the policy, Hula said, would contribute to bringing the war nearer to the United States. He predicted that it would lead to the transformation of Finland into a puppet state, subject to the whims of Adolf Hitler.

He took the position that, if Finland cannot overcome German pressure and other difficulties, it would signify that the Finnish government is no longer a free agent or that its war policies are approved by the poeple.

He cited the long period of friendship between the United States and Finland—period marked by Finland's prompt payment of her war debts and United States aid in the republic's first war with Russia—and said that, because of this friendship, this Nation hesitated until now from drawing final conclusions about Finland's present policies.

He indicated plainly that the time has come for a showdown. Schoenfeld's instructions, he said, called on him to inform Finland's leaders that satisfactory evidence of her desire to keep the friendship of the United States most be given promptly. This evidence, he said, would be immediate discontinuance of offensive military operations in Russia.

Latest European dispatches show that the Finnish army, helped by German troops, has reconquered areas about the Karelian Isthmus previously lost by Finland to Russia and is taking part in the fighting around Leningrad. The Murmansk-Leningrad railway reportedly has been cut by the Finns at Petrozavodsk.

The reported new drive launched by the Finns against Murmansk and Archangel interests this country especially, because these are the principal Arctic depots for United States war aid being sent to the Soviets. These ports would become of increasing importance if Far Eastern conditions made it necessary to route all war shipments to the Soviet via Archangel, eliminating completely the port of Vladivostok, which until recently was the main depot.

Dryden Accuses Economy League Of Smear Attempt

By the Associated Press

F. H. Dryden, acting commissioner of Work Projects, accused the National Economy League yesterday of "a clumsy effort to smear the Administration's policy of giving useful work to the unemployed."

He asserted in a statement that a study of relief spending published by the league, a private organization, was a "clear-cut case of statistical misrepresentation."

This study concluded that only 59 cents of each relief dollar went to the worker. Dryden, saying the league alleges that 41 per cent of work relief money goes into overhead, asserted:

"The league arrives at its figure of 41 per cent by the absurd practice of including under this heading the cost of materials, the contributions of sponsors and even such items as disability compensation.

"This figure is completely at variance with the facts, which show that of the Federal dollar spent for work relief in 1941, 87 cents went for wages, 9.4 cents went for materials and equipment, and only 3.6 cents went for administration."

Petain Replaces 16 Advisers

Vichy, Nov. 3 (AP)—A decree by Chief of State Petain today replaced 16 members of France's national advisory committee, including Emmanuel Celestine Cardinal Suard, Archbishop of Paris, and Gen. de la Laurencie, who was Fernand de Brinon's predecessor as Ambassador to the Germans in the occupied zone of France.

An announcement said Cardinal Suhard asked to be replaced. Gen. Laurencie and Gaston Dupard, minister of navy under former Premier Leon Blum were said to have "resigned by request."

Among others replaced were the crusading editor, Louis Oscar Frossard, former member of the French cabinet, whose mother was Jewish, and the French writer, Andre Siegfried.

The new members are rightists and National Union leaders.

'Mr. Vickers' Passes

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—A hearse with a coffin draped with the Union Jack approached an English town during military maneuvers today. The commander of the defending regiment ordered a snappy "eyes left" as the cortege passed.

A somber, frock-coated undertaker said the deceased was "Mr. Vickers." The mourners looked very sad.

A few minutes later "Mr. Vickers" was quickly taken out of his coffin and put to work by the undertaker and the mourners, who, it turned out, were an invading force of home guards.

"Mr. Vickers" was a machine gun. This modern "Trojan horse" experiment failed, however. The invaders were captured in a counterattack, "Mr. Vickers," too.

Jury Delves Into Hill's Accounts

he was indicted on two charges of perjury.

Questioned by the grand jurors Hill admitted that he received $12,000 in the last five months, but he would not tell who gave it to him or what he did with it. His pay is $2000 a year.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., of the Department of Justice propaganda squad, yesterday renewed the quest for the true story of the $12,000, calling D. M. Grant, assistant cashier of The City Bank, who was directed to produce:

"All cancelled checks and any papers, letters or documents pertaining thereto on the account of George Hill for the years 1940 and 1941."

Since Fish said in a public statement that it was "ridiculous" to suppose Hill got the money from subversive sources the Congressman may later on be invited to tell the grand jury why he thinks so.

The Government setback in Viereck's prosecution came when Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, of the District Court, ruled that the law requires no detailed statement of the activities of an alien agent when he files his initial original registration with the State Department.

Viereck was accused of concealing the fact he set up and financed the Make Europe Pay and Islands for War Debt committees so he could use them and their secretary-treasurer, Prescott Dennett, to get German propaganda carried postage fee, under Congressional frank.

Since two of the five statements filed by Viereck were "initial registrations," Justice Goldsborough ruled that he was not required to make these disclosures. However, Viereck must stand trial on the other three, the possible penalty for which would be $3,000 fine and six years in prison.

Representative Dies said his agents have gone deeply into the use of the franks for propaganda purposes. Records are being collected, said Dies, of all reprints from the Congressional Record, of who ordered them, who paid for them and who mailed them out.

Dies said the propaganda money also is being traced through the bank accounts of known pro-Nazi organizations. In Philadelphia, he said, agents have been busy for months copying thousands of checks issued by one "bund" group.

Mrs. Esther Van Sciver, New York, who testified before the grand jury yesterday, made an affidavit several months ago in which she described the preparation of a mammoth mailing list, from the names signed to letters written to Charles A. Lindbergh, Representative Fish and former Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia.

Mrs. Van Sciver said in her affidavit that a year ago she was employed by Gladys La Vance to work on the mailing list, which was done in the premises of the Ford Motor Co., in New York. Directing the work, the affidavit said, was Bessie Feagan, of Scribner's Commentator.

Peninsula Garrison Being Pushed Into Sea, Germans Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 3.—The Russian defenders of the Crimea have been split and are being pushed into thte sea, the German high command announced today.

Military commentators declared the Germans soon would have control of the Black Sea to wage the fight for Caucasian oil.

Once more the German air force bent its fury on ships attempting to transfer troops in a Dunkerque-like evacuation, German reports said. Dive-bombers hammered Sevastopol, Russian naval base, and Kerch, on the southwest and east coasts of the pendant-shaped peninsula.

Remaining Base Bombed

The German command was devoting every energy to driving the Soviet Black Sea fleet from another home after its withdrawal from Odessa and Nikolaev.

Guessing where the Red fleet would go next, the Germans picked Novorossisk at the extreme eastern end of the sea, and included that Caucasian port in the zone of intensive air operations.

Declaring that conquest of the Crimea was far from a local matter, one military commentator said "the fight for Caucasian oil will be chiefly a question of supplies promptly following the troops. The power controlling the Black Sea will have a great advantage over whoever comes up from the Persian Gulf." (The British-American supply line.)

"The Crimea, through Kerch and Sevahtopol, controls the Black Sea," he continued. "Add to this that we will have Taganrog and soon Rostov and it's fair to deduct that the Black Sea will be free for the German supply service to troops."

Germans have repeatedly called the Crimea a "mother ship for Soviet planes" and it was evident that they assumed the peninsula would serve as well for German planes massed for attack on the Caucasus.

Military authorities estimated 14 Soviet divisions—about 210,000 men—were stationed in the Crimea when the Germans stormed the peninsula. Some of these already have been wiped out, it was declared, and others thoroughly beaten.

The Hitler command also announced a straightening of its lines on the Central Front with the capture of Kursk, 280 miles south of Moscow.

This city of 100,000 is on a line with Stalino, Kharkov, Orel and Moscow, and is important for its railway communications, artificial rubber factory and antitank gun works.

The Germans described capture of the city as a coordinated tank and infantry attack, "against the Russians and the weather," and said Italian troops had taken other industrial objectives in the Donets Basin farther south.

Moscow, however, continued to be in the German news blackout, and a spokesman only remarked when questioned about it, "don't be so impatient."

Germans pictured the two-way Russian retreat toward Kerch and Sevastopol in the 100 by 200 mile Crimea as too disorganized to make a clean getaway possible at either place.

The communique said 53,175 prisoners already had been taken, along with 230 tanks, 218 cannon and several armored trains.

Ten ships had been bombed to destruction and 14 others damaged among the massed transports at Sevastopol, it was claimed, while Yalta, one of the three small bays to the East, also was reported under air attack.

Troops leaving Sevastopol would have a long journey while exposed to German bombing and machine-gun attacks, Germans observed. They said troops fleeing eastward to Kerch would have a better chance, because the straight there is but 2 miles wide at its narrowest point and a couple of ferryboats could carry many soldiers across to the Caucasus in a short time. Kerch is but a short distance from Novorossisk.

As for troops taking refuge in the Yaila Coastal Range, German informants said these mountains had but few peaks over 4000 feet high and moreover were approached from the north on a comparatively level plateau. They regarded them as no great obstacle to forces driving from inland though they might present difficulties to an attack from the sea.

On the Leningrad front, the Germans reported the partial destruction of 40 or 50 boatloads of Russians who tried to force a crossing of the Neva River.

Russians Storm And Recapture Part of Kalinin

By the Associated Press

Kuibyshev, Russia, Nov. 3.—Russian troops have stormed and recaptured a part of Kalinin, at the northern anchor of the Red line defending Moscow, and counter-attacks about Tula below the capital likewise have improved the Soviet position at the southern wing, military dispatches reported today.

In Kalinin, a city on the upper Volga River which the Germans had reached two weeks ago, thousands upon thousands of the invaders were declared to have been buried under flaming ruins as the Russian columns put the city under supreme assault in an effort to break the northern arm of the encirclement maneuver upon Moscow.

Reserves recruited in Moscow itself had hurried to that sector, about 95 miles northwest of the capital, where the Germans, reported reinforced by Austrians, Rumanians and Hungarians, were nevertheless beaten back to defensive positions at some points.

Part of City Retaken

Dispatches to the official press indicated that Red forces had occupied Kalinin's northern section in their first series of wild thrusts and had subsequently engaged the invaders in a battle for every block and street.

About Tula, 100 miles south of Moscow, which the southern German army was attempting to take in a similar bloody embrace, overnight Russian charges smashed 40 German tanks in a single sector, the Soviet command declared in its midday communique.

It said nothing specific, however, of the situation in the three other old sectors of Mozhaisk, 57 miles west of the capital; Moloyaroslavets, 65 miles southwest, and Volokolamsk, 65 miles northwest.

Strengthening Lines

In all these areas earlier advices had told of feverish work on fortify stabilized Russian positions and unending artillery and bomb attacks on the apparently growing German concentrations.

Nothing further was said officially of the Crimea (where the Germans had claimed to have split the Soviet forces and to be driving them into the sea.)

[At London, the Moscow radio according to the United Press, was heard broadcasting a communique which said 13 German and 2 Russian planes were shot down Sunday; two German planes near Moscow Monday, and that on Sunday Soviet planes destroyed 30 German tanks, 280 trucks, several armored cars and field guns, many motorcycles and more than 100 horse-drown vehicles, and also dispersed two battalions of infantry.]

Moscow Has Daylight Raid

London (Tuesday), Nov. 4 (U.P.)—The Moscow radio reported today that German planes raided Moscow by daylight yesterday, several penetrating to the metropolitan area and dropping bombs which fell on dwellings and in open spaces and caused some casualties.

Germany Ignores Robin Moor Claims

rescued by two different ships, one of which was bound for South America and the other to South Africa.

When the landing of the first group of survivors, in Brazil, was reported, President Roosevelt asked the country to withhold judgment, but he withdrew that request when the testimony of the survivors proved that the sinking of the ship was deliberate, occurring after a German submarine had hailed the freighter.

On June 20, the President recited the details of the sinking in a message transmitted to Congress. He accused the Nazi government of attempting world conquest "based on lawlessness and terror on land and piracy of the seas."

This message was sent immediately to the German embassy, the State Department announced yesterday, "for the information of the German government."

Four days later, Thomsen wrote a note to Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, which read, in part, as follows:

"In reply to your note of the 20th of this month, I have the honor to advise you that I do not find myself in a position to pass on, in accordance with your request, the text sent to me of a message to Congress from the President of the United States of America for the information of my government."

The Department waited until September 19, meanwhile assessing the value of the cargo aboard the Robin Moor, when Secretary Hull wrote to Thomsen, as follows:

"Sir:

"Reference is made to the Department's communication of June 20, 1941, with which there was transmitted, by direction of the President of the United States, a copy of a message addressed on that date by the President to the Congress of the United States in which it was stated that the German government would be expected to make full reparation of the losses and damages sustained by American nationals as a consequence of the unlawful sinking of the American vessel Robin Moor by a German submarine on May 21, 1941, in the South Atlantic Ocean.

"I now have to inform you that after an investigation undertaken for the purpose of ascertaining the extent of the losses and damages sustained, and with a view of effecting a prompt liquidation of the matter, the Government of the United States is prepared to accept for appropriate distribution by it, the lump sum of $2,967,092, currency of the United States, in satisfaction and full settlement of all claims of the United States and its nationals against the German government for losses and damages sustained as a consequence of the sinking, subject, however, to the condition that payment of that sum by the German government be effected at Washington within 90 days from this date. While the sum mentioned includes an amount representing the value of property of this given[illegible] ment which was on board the ve[illegible] seen no item of punitive damages included.

"Accept, sir, the renewed assurances of my high consideration.

"CORDELL HULL."

This last note was acknowledged by the German Embassy on the same day with a statement that the contents of the note had been transmitted.

On September 26 the German Embassy sent the following communication to the Department of State:

"Mr. Secretary of State:

"On the 19th day of this month you sent me a new note with reference to your communication of June 20 of this year concerning the American steamer Robin Moor. I have the honor to reply to you herewith that the two communications made are not such as to lead to an appropriate reply by my government. In this regard I refer to my note of June 25 (June 24) of this year.

"Accept, Mr. Secretary of State, the renewed assurances of my most distinguished consideration.

"THOMSEN."

U.S. Has 'Cause for War,' Connally Says

fears that "the country is going to lose confidence in two of its leaders, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Willkie." Connally charged "that's what he (Wheeler) prays for every night."

In four scheduled speeches for and against the bill:

Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, declared for outright repeal of the Neutrality Act, and charged "isolationism" among labor leaders, in Congress and "in higher places" is "the basic trouble that has so far sabotaged our defense efforts." Not to repeal the Neutrality Act, Gurney said, is "trifling with our very existence as a free people."

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, charged pressure is exerted for Neutrality Act revision not because the statutes are ineffective "but because they are effective and now stand in the way of our full war involvement." Opposing any revision of the law, Gillette said he would never have it said to him: "You authorized these steps."

Senator George told the Senate that particularly in the sinking of the Robin Moor and the Lehigh Hitler had challenged the American doctrine of freedom of the seas and "if America does not accept that challenge she must be prepared to abandon that doctrine forever." He termed that "an unthinkable position for a great Nation like the United States to assume.

Senator Shipstead (Republican), of Minnesota, argued that the United States got nothing out of the last war except "the sneers and laughter of our allies." He said American ships should be given to Britain and sailed under the British flag because "we have given Britain almost everything else under provisions of the Lend-Lease Act."

High lights of the afternoon were the speeches by George and Malonely. The Georgian took the position that with passage of the Lend-Lease Act "we definitely threw out the window the whole concept of neutrality," and the law as it now stands "forces us to become hypocrites."

George said he realized that revision of the act might lead to a course of conduct bringing the country closer to war, but asserted "war cannot come to America in these days when Americans know how to value incidents unless and until the Congress declares war."

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, accused George of inconsistency with his position on the lend-lease bill. He said George contended at that time that he was opposed to convoys until the time had come for war.

George replied that at that time "the free right to sail the seas had not been challenged by Germany. The picture is different today."

Connally Joins In

Charges of inconsistency leveled at George brought Connally to his feet in late afternoon in a four-cornered fray with opposition leaders.

Connally touched off the bout with a quotation from Emerson sent to the desk to be read by the clerk:

"A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds, adored by little statesmen, philosophers and divines. With consistency a great soul has simply nothing to do . . ."

Senators Taft, Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Wheeler, wanted to know whether the United States would be justified in entering the war because of ship losses. Connally turn asked how many ships have to be sunk before op-[illegible] of the bill would support [illegible]ack and forth went the ques-[illegible]n, with Connally, a master of antomime and caustic wit, jabbing at the questioners.

Wheeler asked Connally if he favored a declaration of war and he said that he did not and would "cross that bridge when we come to it." The Texan said the bill meant American ships would move over a wider area and more ships might be lost but such sinkings would give "no more cause for war than we already have."

Here Maloney asked Connally how many more ships would have to be sunk before he favored a war declaration. Connally accused Maloney of trying to "embarrass him" but replied he would not favor war until the American people "are so aroused" that they ask Congress to declare it.

Maloney heatedly denied he was trying to embarrass Connally, adding: "I don't appreciate this Gilbert and Sullivan atmosphere at a time when we're near war and lives are endangered." When Connally put the "how many sinkings" question to Maloney, he said he would answer it in his own time.

Then the Connecticut Democrat made the extemporaneous speech formally opposing repeal of Sections 2 and 3 of the Neutrality Act.

Maloney said the President had asked for arming of ships in his message and that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had gone beyond this.

To "don't rock the boat" warnings he said he replied: "Better rock it now than send it into the storm."

"It is not too late," said Maloney. "We will not repudiate the Administration if we pass the House bill."

Kearny Crew Met Crisis Heroically

Ensign Describes Calm Behavior In Bedlam of Torpedoing at Sea

(The Unitde Press has just received from its staff correspondent in Iceland the first account of the story of the torpedoing on October 16-17 of the United States destroyer Kearny as told by survivors who reached port with the crippled ship. Eleven members of the Kearny's crew were killed and 10 injured.)

By Phil Ault
United Press Staff Writer

Reykjavik, Iceland, Oct. 19 (Delayed).—The shattering explosion of a torpedo in her forward fire room changed the U. S. S. Kearny from a sleek new fighting ship, desperately dueling a pack of submarines around a convoy in pitch darkness, into a howling bedlam.

A siren screamed uncontrolled.

Men were hurled from battle stations to the deck and struck by flying debris. The destroyer shuddered, then wallowed in the rough Atlantic like a "lame duck."

Below in the torrid depths of the fire room seven men were working frantically to keep up steam for the strain of battle. They never knew what hit them.

Four other men simply vanished, probably blasted overboard.

Such was the story told today by exhausted survivors of the 1630-ton destroyer when she limped into port escorted by the destroyer Greer, herself the object of an unsuccessful attack by a German submarine in September.

A jagged hole amidships on the starboard side of the Kearny was mute testimony of her struggle. Eight injured men were taken ashore and placed in an Army hospital.

It was a story of heroism under desperate conditions in which men trained by months of Atlantic patrol duty met their crisis calmly, shook off the shock and, through a dark night of determination, patched their crippled ship so she was able to reach port.

Likewise it was a story of medical skill and ingenuity in which the life of one man was saved by a naval doctor who boarded the Kearny after an emergency trip on another destroyer and gave three transfusions with plasmaflown from Iceland by airplane and dropped by parachute in waterproof wrappings.

Ensign Henry Lyman, of Ponkapoag, Mass., propped up in a hospital bed, his face covered with beard and eyes shiny with excitement, told graphically how the Kearny was fired at three times after she had dropped depth charges to drive off submarines from an eastbound convoy she was escorting, at 1:30 a. m., October 17, about 350 southwest of Iceland.

"We had been escorting a westbound convoy but were ordered to swing back and joined an eastbound convoy protected by Canadian corvettes which had been under attack," he said. "We joined that convoy late Thursday afternoon just as it was reforming from the first attack and took a position on the port quarter. We also were hunting survivors."

Three Tankers Burn

A new attack began after dark, he said. Flames from three tankers pierced the blackness. Submarines lay awash, ramming "fish" (torpedoes) into the slowly moving body of ships.

Lyman said the Kearny had dropped several depth charges "to scare the hell out of the submarines."

"A U-boat came to the surface between the Kearny and the convoy, with the motors cut off so we couldn't detect her," he said. "She must have been very close.

"She fired at us three times. One torpedo went off the bow, another missed the stern, but the third hit us amidships just at the break in the forecastle.

"I was executive officer on the bridge and Lieut. Comdr. Al Danis also was on the bridge. We were tending hard left when the torpedo struck.

"The explosion knocked back the forward stack and snapped the siren cord. The howling sound was so extreme we were unable to hear anything. The starboard wing of the bridge was pretty well shot and the captain was badly shaken up because he was standing on that side.

"We tried to send up rockets, but they failed, so we shot off a Very pistol. But it was every ship for itself, and all other destroyers kept going ahead to protect the convoy."

Controls Shattered

The explosion shattered all the controls from the bridge to the engine room and steering apparatus, ruined the compass and knocked out all lights forward, Lyman said. The captain left the bridge and went to control the ship from the auxiliary controls.

Waves swept over the tilting deck and blew away the starboard whaleboat, which hit Chief Boatswain's Mate Leonard Frontakowski, of Norfolk, Va., seriously injuring him.

Everywhere men were dragging themselves to their feet, fingering their bruises in the darkness.

"The ship sat for several minutes like a lame duck," Lyman said. "I think the submarine would have given us another fish except they thought they had got us. Finally she began to move forward slowly.

"I went below for inspection and to get some lifejackets. When I returned to the bridge we were moving faster. Our compass was knocked out and we had to use the hand sterring mechanism. The navigator was steering by judging the direction of the wind blowing against the flag.

"A corvette signaled us but it was so dark we were hardly able to see anything and couldn't tell whether she was standing by us or merely signaling. All we got was her name."

By this time a repair party was at work, clearing debris from the bridge and throwing it overboard.

The sick bay had been smashed, and with it most of the medical equipment, but the pharmacist's mate treated the injured with the few remedies available. They had no further treatment for 18 hours until Dr. R. W. Rommel, of Oneida, N. Y., was transferred from the destroyer Munson in a whaleboat.

Salt Water in Fuel Lines

"We almost lost our power entirely," Lyman said, "because salt water entered the fuel lines and was pumped into the engine. The chief engineer and his crew did a trojan job keeping both forward and aft engines in operation.

"I received word that there was an electrical fire in the forward engine room and sent men with extinguishers and rescue breathing apparatus. The fire was quickly extinguishd.

"The forward fire room with the dead men in it was shot to pieces and flooded. The bulkhead between it and the forward engine room was sagging dangerously and it looked for a while as though the sea water would get into the engine room. We spent the rest of the night shoring up that bulkhead.

"When I came on deck again it was daylight and we were proceeding faster. The men had restored the electric lights and all other services except the forward fire room and power for ventilation.

"There were no other ships anywhere near us, but we established radio communications and were told the Greer was coming up to escort us to Iceland. We made up a pool at 5 cents a chance to guess the exact hour she would reach us."

"Damn Glad to See Her"

"She finaly got to us at 2 p. m., about 12 hours after we were torpedoed. We would have met sooner, except that we were unable to find the rendezvous because of our damaged navigating apparatus. We were damn glad to see her."

The Munson, carrying Dr. Rommel, reached the Kearny that evening. Two planes were dispatched from Iceland with the plasma for Frontakowski's transfusion. One plane failed to make contact with the Munson, but the second dropped its cargo near the ship by parachute.

"Some water penetrated the wrappings and I had to resterilize everything before I could use it," Rommel said. "I was transferred to the Kearny in a whaleboat and gave Frontakowski three transfusions in a little cabin in the superstructure with about an inch of water in a container.

"The pharmacist's mate did an excellent job considering the poor materials he had to work with."

R.A.F. Wrecks 24 Nazi Ships In Three Days

London, Nov. 3 (AP).—American-built Hudson bombers were credited by the British air ministry tonight with having sunk or destroyed at least 24 vessels off the Norwegian and Dutch coasts in the last three days in a stepped-up offensive described by Britons as a form of direct aid to Russia.

Most of the ships bombed, it was said, are believed to have been carrying supplies to northern Finland for German troops fighting in Russia.

A fish oil factory on the Norwegian coast also was attacked, along with a radio station, a warehouse and a small supply ship. Norwegian coastal fish oil factories have been attacked repeatedly to check shipments of oil to Germany.

British fighter planes carried on the attack against the Axis by daylight today, concentrating on the Channel and northern France. A radio station, a number of motor trucks, a motor vessel off Cherbourg and a patrol ship were attacked, the air ministry said.

The R. A. F. intercepted and damaged three bombers which were attempting to attack British shipping, a communique said.

In Cairo, the R. A. F. Middle East command announced successful raids last Friday and Saturday nights on Naples, Italy; Palermo, Sicily; Bengasi and Derna in Libya, and on Axis ships in the Mediterranean.

Gen. Wavell Reaches Singapore to Study Defenses of Malaya Against Possible Attack

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 3.—Gen Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in chief in India, has arrived in Singapore apparently to check on the adequacy of Malayan defenses before concentrating a major part of his military strength in or near the Russian Caucasus, informed quarters said tonight.

Britain's growing anxiety about German gains in Russia was reflected in this trip, and also in former War Secretary Hore-Belisha's call for "some precise military action, some muscular effort," which could break "the grip now fastened on the throat of Soviet Russia."

India is one of the main suppliers of man power for Britain's Far Eastern and Middle Eastern defenses, hence Wavell's concern with Malay's needs to withstand a possible Japanese thrust from Indo-China.

The commander is up against a tough decision, these quarters pointed out, for once it is made it is almost final because of the vast distances and poor communications between the two troubled areas.

Many observers here insisted, however, that it was unlikely the British would send their Middle East armies into southeastern Russia at present because, they said, "the Russians need equipment, not men."

"And there certainly is not a chance," they said, "of the Russians inviting British troops into the Caucasus unless British comply with the Soviet request that they declare war on Finland, Hungary and Rumania."

Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard today editorially clamored for a British declaration against those countries which were called "the flunkeys of Nazidom."

The difficulties of trying to supply Russia are immense because of the great distances and few routes available, but informed quarters here said a steady stream of munitions and supplies were moving from Britain to Russia by way of the far northern port of Archangel, which Russia hopes to keep cleared of ice throughout the winter.

As for the military situation in Russia, a reliable source said that the Germans had changed the Russian railroads to standard gauge, and that Nazi supply trains were rolling to within 50 miles of the Soviet capital.

A Reuters report from Stockholm said that German and Finnish troops were only 14 miles from Murmansk, and that heavy gunfire heard out in the Baltic led to the belief that the Red fleet was trying to shoot its way out from Hango, penninsula fortress off Finland.

London (Tuesday), Nov. 4 (INS).—British press advices early today reported that Japan has served a demand on Portugal for joint control of the strategic Portuguese port of Macao, just west of Hongkong on the south China coast, and is moving troop reinforcements to frontier areas adjoining China's Kwangsi Province, Thailand and Burma.

These reports followed the appearance of a potential menace to British and American Far Eastern strategy in an announcement by Premier U. Saw of Burma, through which country China is supplied over the "lifeline" Burma Road, that his London negotiations to get a British pledge of self-government for that colony had failed.

Premier Saw, who for weeks has been negotiating in London, hinted at a possible swing in Burmese publice sentiment in favor of Japan and the Axis due to Britain's refusal to pledge dominion status for Burma after the war. He said ominously:

Ex-Aide Says Langer Tried To Influence Federal Judge

in 1934 was set aside and a retrial ordered by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

Judge Wyman presided at two subsequent conspiracy trials, one of which ended with a hung jury and the other in acquittal, and at a perjury trial in which he directed the jury to bring in a not guilty verdict.

Mulloy Testifies of Juror

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, examined Mulloy as counsel for North Dakota citizens who initiated the hearing by petitioning the Senate not to seat Langer. Burke asked the witness about a member of the hung jury.

Mulloy replied that about the time of the trials he had met George Schoenberger, a Langer friend, who "said he had somebody talk to Reich (the juror) and that Reich was all right."

"He (Schoenberger) wanted me to pass that on to Bill (Langer)," Mulloy added.

Wyman, a South Dakota Federal district judge, was assigned to the Langer trials after District Judge Andrew Miller, of North Nakota, excused himself when the defendants filed an affidavit of prejudice against him.

"I told Bill (Langer) that if he could get Wyman appointed I knew someone I thought had great influence with the judge," Mulloy said.

"Got to Save Langer"

With the approval of Langer and Frank Vogel, one of the defendants and former president of the North Dakota State Bank, Mulloy went to Deadwood, S. Dak., to see Leedom, he declared. The late marshal's first words when they met, Mulloy said, were: "My God, Jim, we've got to save Langer."

Wyman and Leedom, Mulloy declared, "impressed me with the good they could do and the influence they had with Judge Wyman." It was agreed that young Wyman was to get $500, "subject to the approval of Gov. Langer." When Burke asked the witness why the money was to be paid, he replied:

"The idea was that he was to use his influence on the father."

Later, Mulloy, Leedom and Gov. Langer conferred in a restaurant booth in Bismarck, the witness said. At the conference, Langer agreed that it was "all right" to send Wyman $500 and an understanding was reached that "Leedom was to be paid," Mulloy testified.

Mulloy said he saw Langer hand Leedom five $100 bills. Later Wyman said he had received only $250, Mulloy testified.

"The Governor sat down and wrote a check for $275. . . . I endorsed the check and turned it over to Gale Wyman," Mulloy testified.

"Figured Leedom Delivered"

It was during the same restaurant conference, Mulloy asserted, that Leedom told Langer:

"I can get the old man (Judge Wyman) to make a speech from the bench for you, Governor, that would be worth 30,000 votes."

When he heard Judge Wyman's remarks in directing acquittal in the perjury trial, said Mulloy, "I figured Leedom had delivered."

Mulloy testified that "on more than one occasion" he saw Leedom enter Judge Wyman's hotel room. Once, said Mulloy, Leedom said the judge remarked that the prosecution was showing that assessments of employes was impairing the efficiency of the highway department and that "the boys should get busy."

On another occasion, Leedom reported, according to Mulloy, that Judge Wyman had said "Langer should get six months on general principles."

The witness declared that on several occasions Langer had paid Leedom in $100 bills and that, "including the Wyman money," the total "would amount to $1700 or $1800."

Mulloy was asked by Burke why he split with Langer after an association that began when Langer was first a candidate for Governor in 1932. He replied that when "they tried to audit my office (of secretary of the Securities Commission), I could plainly see that I was going to be the goat."

Mulloy also testified that after Langer became Governor, the late Hugh McCulloch, Langer's former law associate, negotiated a $18,000 settlement against the State. He said he was told that Vogel got $5000 of the settlement.

The same McCulloch, Mulloy testified, went to Kansas City with him to see Pendergast. During a conference with Pendergast, McCulloch, said Mulloy, asked for $50,000.

"I have never heard anything more about the deal," said the witness.

Denies Connection With Nye

Mulloy admitted that he told his brother-in-law he was getting $5600 from Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, but that this was because he knew the statement would get back to Langer and that the whole thing was a "joke."

"I have never discussed this with Senator Nye, nor have I received any money from Senator Nye," he declared.

Under cross-examination by Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, Mulloy said he told Attorney General Alvin Strutz of his suspicions of Langer, but that nothing was done. He said he was "confident that this was wrong," when Lucas asked him his motive "back of all of this."

"You are a confessed criminal before this committee," Lucas said.

"That is right," responded Mulloy, and later, when Lucas remarked that Mulloy had been fortunate to stay out of jail, the witness replied "I consider it so, too, Senator."

Mulloy explained to Senator Stewart (Democrat), of Tennessee, that he had waited five years before telling his story because he wanted to make sure that the statute of limitations would operate to protect him from prosecution. He said he consulted an attorney on this point before writing an affidavit for the committee.

Spending Cut Drive Shaped

A three-way attack on nondefense spending, by the President, the Treasury and the newly organized Nondefense Expenditures Investigating Committee appeared shaping up last night, with some conflict impending on amounts to be cut.

Key members of the new joint Congressional committee were reported seeking cuts approximating 1½ billion dollars, but the committee has held only one meeting and no public commitments have been made.

Ahead of joint committee action, the President was reported ready to move through the Budget Bureau to prune nondefense items by ordering impounding of nearly a half billion already appropriated for this fiscal year.

Before Congressional committees, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau earlier this year declared for a billion dollars in nondefense spending cuts. Budget Director Harold D. Smith, who like Morgenthau is a member of the joint committee, is not committed on amounts because the Budget Bureau is a White House agency. At the request of the Senate Finance Committee he recently prepared estimates for from one to two billions in reductions, but made clear it was not a bureau recommendation.

The committee, under chairmanship of Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, has called for more detailed estimates and pending their submission has not met for further study.

Advocates of rigid economy on the 14-man group meanwhile appeared about evenly divided with members who have not hitherto advocated such a course—so closely that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau may hold the balance of power in final recommendations.

Besides Morgenthau and Smith, the committee includes three members each from the House and Senate appropriations and taxing (Senate Finance nad House Ways and Means) committees.

Seven of these have been closely identified with former economy bloc momements, but would need another vote to effect drastic curtailment of nondefense costs. Those believed likely to support maximum economies without impairment of defense include Byrd, Chairman Glass of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Chairman George of the Senate Finance Committee, Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia; Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Representative Taber (Republican), of New York.

Aside from Secretary Morgenthau, who pressed for sharp economies when recommending the Administration 3½ billion tax bill, the seven other members are less definitely committed. The Treasury is reputed to believe the nondefense cuts are essential to its program of defense financing.

U. S. Never Will Accept Hitler Order, President Says

Copyright by New York Times

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 3.—President Roosevelt declared today that the United States will never accept Hitler's "new order" for the world, in a speech assailing dictatorship and citing the effective manner in which democracy works in the long run.

Even if this country should become an "oasis" in a world where dictatorships reign, it would maintain its own system of life, the President said in an informal speech before a Dutchess County teachers conference at the Roosevelt High School here this afternoon.

It was Mr. Roosevelt's first speech since the sinking last week while on Atlantic convoy duty of the United States destroyer Reuben James, but the Executive made no reference to the incident. Many of his auditors obtained a definite impression that he was thinking today in terms of defense rather than offense.

"I don't think we are ever coming to this 'new order' of the world in this country," President Roosevelt said, "and I hope very much that the rest of the world won't be forced into it. Because, if the rest of the world were forced into it, this country of ours would become a little oasis, where all the old things were still going on but were being pressed on all sides by this so-called 'new order' world."

The President recalled that the local school system had been consolidated only after a long period of discussion and made clear his belief that, in this matter, correct answers eventually were reached as a rule, whereas this was not at all true under a dictatorial system of government.

"Things in a democracy do take a long time," Mr. Roosevelt remarked, "and it is a mighty good thing they do. And I think that this town is a lot better off for having talked about whether it wanted a consolidated school district in place of 9 or 11 or 14 little school districts.

"I think it is better we talked about that for 10 or 15 years than if we had belonged to the kind of society where somebody way up on top—some dictator—had said to the Town of Hyde Park 15 years, 'You have got to have one.'

Neutral Policy Ended In U. S., Canadians Told

By the Associated Press

Ottawa, Nov. 3.—Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, after spending the weekend with President Roosevelt, told Commons today that increasing danger has brought the United States to the point where a nominal maintenance of official neutrality has ceased to be a part of national policy.

The trend of American opinion was to regard neutrality as a mask and to throw it off.

"These facts, in their cumulative effect, serve to show how rapidly the mirage of isolation has been disappearing and how completely the appreciation of the interdependence of free peoples has grown in the minds of all but a small minority."

Turning to the Far East, Mackenzie King said:

"Japan has clearly been uneasy at the prospect of taking military initiative in the face of the firm attitude displayed by the United States, Britain and the Netherlands Indies."

"It will be seen that developments of the past four months now have brought matters to a point where a very definite conflict of interest has developed between Japan as the Axis partner of Germany and Italy on the one side and the United States, Britain and Russia on the other."

King made no mention of his weekend conversations with President Roosevelt.

CORRECTING A WRONG IMPRESSION

The factory at Bendix, New Jersey recently taken over by the U. S. Army is not a part of BENDIX AVIATION CORPORATION

Recently, many newspapers have been carrying headlines that are unintentionally misleading, such as: "Strike Cripples Bendix Factory," "President Orders Bendix Plant Seized," "Army Takes Over Bendix Plant."

These newspaper reports have created an unfortunate and wholly incorrect impression that the factory involved is part of Bendix Aviation Corporation. It is not. Let us make that fact unmistakably clear.

The seized plant has no connection whatsoever with Bendix Aviation Corporation. It has been referred to, confusingly, in the press as a "Bendix plant" simply because it is located in the Borough of Bendix, New Jersey.

One of our plants is located there, too. In fact, the town was named after Bendix Aviation Corporation; but it contains other entirely independent business enterprises, including the aircraft accessory factory which the Army recently took over. There is no connection between that factory and ours, except their common location in Bendix, New Jersey.

Bendix Aviation Corporation has twenty busy plants, employing 35,000 men, spread across the face of America from the Atlantic seaboard to California. In every one of these plants, men are working—day and night, in nearly every case—to produce a vast number of devices vital to the operation of aircraft, tanks, trucks, ships and other military and naval equipment.

Not one of these Bendix Aviation Corporation plants is involved in any strike or other difficulties that might impair defense production!

At lathe and bench, at desk and drawing board, Bendix men everywhere are working at "all-out" speed to do their part of America's Big Job. In fairness to them, and in recognition of our responsibilities to Defense, we publish these facts to correct an unfortunate case of mistaken identity.

8 Fliers Tell Of Cheating Death in Crash

By the Associated Press

Georgetown, Calif., Nov. 3.—Eight death-cheating fliers told their dramatic story today of being spilled out of an Army bomber split open in a mountain storm in the eleventh crackup of a military plane in northern California within ten days.

The eight landed safely, narrowly escaping trees and huge boulders as they parachuted through a dense fog yesterday. The ninth and only unaccounted-for member of the crew, Lieut. M. H. Walker, was believed alive, too, for a parachute identified as his was found carefully wrapped around a fence post.

Fragments of the bomber were scattered over 50 acres of the Bassi cattle ranch in the Sierra Nevada foothills.

Substantially the same story was told by the airmen.

"I felt myself lifted and a second later was crashing through the glass of the gunners' turret and flying bodily into space," said Corpl. Sterling H. Isom, of Hurricane, Utah. "I pulled my ripcord. Stookey (Private A. H. Stookey, of Corning, Calif.) was whipped right out through a big hole in the fuselage."

In other Army plane accidents Sunday, two pursuit pilots were killed as their planes crashed and burst into flames, and a third was injured. They were from the same flight formation that lost five planes in another California storm ten days ago. One aviator was killed then. Another, Lieut. Richard N. Long, of Connellsville, Pa., is missing.

Two other lost airmen were hunted after they disappeared on a 30-minute flight Sunday from Stockton to Moffett Field, Calif. They were Lieut. Robert Agnew, 23, of Donalds, S. C., and Private Dan Fisk, star center of the University of San Francisco football team last year.

The 11 crashes have killed at least 7 airmen.

Most sensational of all was the disintegration of the four-motor bomber over the El Dorado National Forest near Georgetown. After fighting through rain squalls and snowstorms that disabled her radio and crippled one engine, the ship was caught suddenly between downdrafts and updrafts.

The huge craft was whipped about with such force she was turned over. Her tail snapped off and the bomber plunged from a height of 18,000 feet.

Two Cadets Killed

Miami, Fla., Nov. 3 (AP).—Two naval reserve aviation cadets were killed in the crash of a training plane today.

Officers said Benjamin F. Hoffman, 24, of Buffalo, N. Y., was the pilot and Oliver J. Heliand, 24, of Wisconsin Dells, Wis., a passenger in the plane.

They said the crash occurred about 14 miles northwest of the naval air station here while the cadets were practicing spins.

Airliner Pilot, Only Survivor, Describes Battle to Avert Crash That Killed 14

By the Associated Press

Moorhead, Minn., Nov. 3.—The dramatic story of how his 12-ton transport plane "started to flutter or shake," with the controls dead and speed indicators "out," was related here today by Pilot Clarence Bates, only survivor of the Northwest Airlines crash near here early last Thursday in which 14 persons lost their lives.

Disclosing icing conditions prior to the crash, Capt. Bates, from his hospital bed, gave a deposition for a formal investigation describing his futile fight to keep the big ship flying.

Bates and his copilot, Alden Onsgard, 25 began struggling to avert disaster after trouble first developed when they were 600 feet above the Fargo, N. Dak., airport. Fargo is separated from Moorhead by the Red River.

Bates said he yelled to Onsgard to "gear up," or lift the landing apparatus while he stepped up to maximum motor power. But, he continued, the huge plane acted "peculiar," began to settle and despite all efforts to keep it in the air, crashed, hurling Bates to the ground and free of the flaming wreckage that trapped the other 14.

With the de-icers working, Bates said he began picking up ice about 25 or 30 miles out of Fargo but that he noticed none on the wings. There was ice, he went on, on the projection that shields landing light glare from the cockpit.

He said he last checked for ice at about 1100 feet above the ground, when he was coming in for the Fargo landing. Right after he reached a level of 600 feet above the ground, Bates related that he began picking up "a lot more ice."

"It began building up," he added, "but there wasn't one quarter or one tenth the amount of ice I formed before and navigated before. So I still wasn't concerned about it very much.

"But we leveled out at 1500 feet, and, as the result, the air-speed indicator was 90 miles an hour, but I disregarded that entirely because they were inoperative. . . .

"The airplane began acting peculiar, and I knew something was the matter. I didn't know what, but it was right at the bottom of the descent. We had descended 400 feet, which was down to 600 (above ground), so I yelled 'gear up' to the copilot, the idea being to keep all the speed I could possibly get, and I increased to full horsepower to fly straight ahead . . . until I could find out what was the matter, but I didn't have any time to check for ice or do anything because the period didn't last very long. I mean the airplane started to flutter or shake and the controls worked hard. I had difficulty turning the wheel as it would go down, and thereafter I had difficulty bringing it back and the yoke worked hard fore and aft.

"About this time we must have settled, because I started seeing lights, saw all the lights on the horizon, and I knew we were in a level position from the instruments and from the fact that the lights were all on the horizon. It was just a few seconds after that that we crashed."

Reckord Relieves 3 Officers of 29th

One Ousted from Command for Going To Sleep and Holding up 3 Miles of Trucks

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Headquarters, Twenty-ninth Infantry Division in the Field, Nov. 3. After a blistering criticism of his division for an "unsatisfactory," "disgraceful" and "deplorable" convoy last night, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding, today took drastic measures to prevent recurrence of the conditions he attacked.

He ordered Lieut. Cassidy, of the Twenty-ninth Antitank Battalion, relieved of command on charges of "failure to perform his duty" placed against him for going to sleep in a vehicle in the road, blocking 3 miles of trucks.

He ordered the plans and training officer and the transportation officer of the 104th Medical Regiment relieved of command for "failing to obey orders" and leaving 30 minutes late.

He ordered four medical officers attached to the 104th Quartermaster Regiment restricted to camp for 48 hours afetr return from maneuvers for leaving the convoy on personal business in a town through which they passed.

He sharply criticizedd commanders of the 121st Engineers, the 111th Field Artillery, the Antitank Battalion and the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade for deficiencies in the conduct of their columns in convoy.

"It is quite evident to me," Gen. Reckord declared, "that many officers are still without a full realization of their responsibility and something must be done immediately to correct this deficiency."

Reckord said he found the road blocked for 3 miles by stalled trucks and, going to the head of the column, found the leading vehicle with driver and an officer asleep with a clear road in front of them.

"I cannot understand," he said, "why someone back in those 3 miles of trucks did not take the trouble to go, as I did, to the head of the column to find what caused the delay.

"What should have been a simple and satisfactory performance was, to me, most unsatisfactory. I remained up all night to see the job through. Gen. Sands (Brig. Gen. William H. Sands, commanding Fifty-fourth Artillery Brigade), remained up all night to see the last elements of his brigade in bivouac.

"In the case of the officers commanding the Fifty-eight Brigade combat team and division troops, you gentlemen and your staffs should have remained up all night to see the job through."

"I am not satisfied with the performance of the division. We are no longer in the kindergarten stage; the division knows how to do these things correctly and I expect it to perform properly.

The 111th Field Artillery was criticized for "deliberately" pulling into an infantry column with part of its vehicles. It was not the first time, he said, "the artillery has broken into the column of the Eighty-eighth Brigade."

The 104th Medical Regiment was reprimanded for leaving base camp "at least 30 minutes late, and I personally had to get the vehicles on the road. The order was explicit, yet the regiment's officers paid little attention either to the fact that you were to move at a certain time and in two serials. They went into the column promisciously after the word was given."

The 121st Engineers and division troops, he said, crossed the starting line five minutes ahead of time, but "with only part of the command."

Conduct of the antitank battalion into bivouac areas, Gen. Reckford said, was "deplorable." "Not one," he declared, "seemed to be in command, no one checked the column and no officer was at the critical crossroad to see that they moved into the bivouac area promptly and without delay."

All principal downtown streets are blanketed in under the new prohibition. On some thoroughfares the ban will extend to "fringe" areas and in the case of Sixteenth Street Northwest all the way to Spring Road.

The Commissioners announced that some scheme for special parking permits in emergencies is under consideration. The announcement followed a conference with labor representatives at the District Building.

John Locher, of the Central Labor Union, was concerned over possible difficulties of delivering materials vitally needed on construction jobs. He visited the Commissioners with Robert Lester and L. A. Trainman, of the Teamsters Joint Council and D. Avon, of the Central Labor Union.

Lenin, Trotzky Books Barred As Evidence

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Nov. 3.—The defense in the trial of 28 persons on charges of seditious conspiracy was upheld in Federal Court here today when Judge M. M. Joyce ruled the Government may not introduce books of Leon Trotzky or Nicolas Lenin as prosecution exhibits.

Prosecutors contending the 28 were members of the Socialist Workers Party and were bound by principles laid down by Trotzky, titular head of the party, and that inasmuch as the volume, "Lessons of October," on the 1917 Russian revolution, was offered for sale at Minneapolis headquarters of the party, the book could be used as an exhibit.

Albert Goldman, a defendant and defense attorney, objected that the Social Workers Party was not bound by all declarations of Trotzky and the party's declaration of principles is clear in the party credo.

Books by Lenin, which Judge Joyce also ruled out, are "The Revolution of 1905" and "State and Revolution."

However, Judge Joyce did permit the prosecution to use "Abc of Marxism," issued by the Socialist Workers Party, as a prosecution exhibit.

An article attacking courts, written by Goldman and published August 20, 1938, in the Socialist Appeal, formerly the weekly organ of the party, was introduced in evidence by the Government.

The article, entitled "Who Owns the Courts?" said, in part: "The function of capitalist courts . . . is to protect private property and in that is included the prosecution of workers for violating the rights of employers . . .

"Where there is a formal conviction of capitalists, their actual punishment is nothing in comparison to the punishment meted out to workers who are convicted."

Duce Revives Old Issues With France

By the Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 3.—Premier Mussolini broke his silence on Italy's scores against France today to declare that Italians "do not forget."

He was speaking to a crowd at the unveiling of a monument to those who died defending Rome against the French in the wars for Italy's unification.

Il Duce cautioned his listeners against drawing "arbitrary conclusions" from his "long and sometimes necessary silences," such as, presumably, the conclusion that Italy was abandoning her purpose to get a territorial settlement from France after the war.

(The Italian government has never published precise claims against France but agitation to obtain Nice, Savoy, Tunis, Corsica and Djibuti preceded Italy's entrance into the war. French efforts in "collaboration" negotiations with Germany to forestall Italian demands for territorial cessions have been reported.)

Mussolini spoke from the spot where cannons of the Roman Republic in 1849 fired their last shots before French troops overwhelmed them. He recalled that then, as in 1867, French troops fought against Giuseppe Garibaldi in the latter's struggle for Italian unity.

The Rome newspaper, La Tribuna, described the ceremony attended by troops, high Fascist officials and the public as "an ardent tribute of the people to the heroes who defended Rome against French aggression."

Spy Suspect Says Gestapo Hunted Him

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 3.—Hermann Lang, a former employe in the C. L. Norden Co. instrument plant, testified today he was harassed in Germany by the Gestapo and in America by an FBI counter-espionage agent in their efforts to get information on the famous Norden bomb sight.

Lang, a German-born naturalized citizen, said he told the Gestapo he had no information about the bomb sight and declared he gave the American counterspy, who he said threatened him, a few false figures on production.

Lang, one of 15 men on trial in Brooklyn Federal Court on charges of espionage conspiracy, said the counter-espionage agent, William G. Sebold, promised him money and the affections of a Viennese model, Lily Stein, who has pleaded guilty.

Lang testified that he was not influenced and then Sebold, posing as a German spy, declared, "If you don't work we have a nice way to make you work. Your people are on the other side."

"I asked him if he didn't have a little feeling—a little feeling like a human being," Lang said. "I didn't want to give him information."

He said Sebold came to his home seven times—each time to urge him to accept sums varying from $3500 to $20,000, to arrange for him to return to Germany, to "fix up a nice time" with Lily Stein, to force an admission of connections with Nazi or Gestapo officials or to threaten reprisal against the Langs in Germany.

Ex-Embassy Clerk Found Unconscious

cause of her loss of employment at the embassy, where she had served for five or six years.

Police records state that medical examination showed her to have taken 59 sleeping tablets during October 26 and October 27. Two notes, one addressed to the Department of State, and one unaddressed, were found in her one-room apartment by police. Police declined to disclose their contents, although it was learned that they were suicide notes.

She was found unconscious at 6 p. m., October 27, by Biagio Notargiacomo, chief petty officer of the naval staff at the Italian Embassy, who was Miss Volpi's next-door neighbor at 1717 Columbia Road. He said he persuaded the house manager, John Panetta, to let him open the apartment door Monday evening after he failed to see Miss Volpi go in or out for several days.

Notargiacomo stated that Miss Volpi quit her job at the embassy after she was transferred to other work which she did not like. Since then, she has been unemployed, although she expected to secure temporary work shortly with a Washington bookstore, he said.

Talked of Suicide Before

Mrs. Elizabeth Schermerhorn, a gray-haired dressmaker living at 1831 Ontario Place Northwest, and long a friend of Miss Volpi, said that the latter, had become despondent after she was refused work at employment agencies because she was not an American citizen.

To remedy this situation, Miss Volpi applied for her first citizenship papers, Mrs. Schmerhorn said, but became discouraged when she learned that obtaining citizenship was a long-drawn-out process.

On a previous occasion, Mrs. Schermerhorn disclosed, Mis Volpi had written three farewell notes in Italian—one to her mother who is living in Italy, one to a friend in New York, and one to a third party—and talked of taking her own life.

After that incident, Mrs. Schermerhorn kept in close touch with Miss Volpi to cheer her up.

Doctors at Gallinger Hospital report that she is still suffering from the effects of the drugs she took, but that she is not critically ill.

Miss Volpi entered the news six years ago when she sent President Roosevelt a $5 gold piece as a contribution to the United States Government in the midst of depression.

Loyalties Divided

Then she was living in Brooklyn, N. Y., and was unemployed. Shortly after publication of the story in New York and Washington she obtained her post with the Italian Embassy. Friends say she has been in the United States for 17 years, but has made no previous effort to secure American citizenship.

From her friends it was learned that one of Miss Volpi's problems has been conflicting loyalties—her allegiance to Italy, her native country, conflicting with her love of the United States, her adopted country. A complicating factor is the existence of relatives in Italy who might be harmed if she should "talk too much."

Friends said that she had earned money from time to time by writing magazine articles, but refused to capitalize on her "inside information." She also is reported to have refused an offer from the Federal Bureau of Investigation to work in their office handling Italian-American problems.

Hearing Resumes On Off-Street Parking Bill Today

A special Senate District subcommittee will resume public hearings on the off-street parking bill at 9:30 a. m. today in Room 301 of the Senate Office Building, with Frederic A Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Cimmission and President Roosevelt's uncle, as the first witness.

Director of Vehicles and Traffic William A. Van Duzer will demonstrate to the subcommittee a large-scale model of an off-street parking garage.

House Votes To Peg Rents At Jan. 1 Level

Control, local real estate interests, and labor and civic organizations, he said.

Pointing out that 20 per cent of income is believed to be a reasonable amount of annual salary for a person to spent on rents, he said that the many thousands of Washingtonians earning less than $120 monthly are spending approximately 32 per cent of their income on rents here.

The average for the $130 to $150 monthly salary group is 29 per cent and for the $180 to $220 group 24 per cent, he said.

"We arrived at the January 1 date because after that date occurred the majority of unjustifiable increases," he declared.

Strenuous opposition to the January 1 date as being too advanced was voiced by many Congressmen, including Representative Patman and Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan. The latter introduced an amendment placing the freezing date back one year to January 1, 1940, which he withdrew in favor of Representative Patman's amendment.

Stating he was definitely in favor of the principle of the bill, Representative Patman declared: "There must be some protection for the individual who has been paying too much rent. If he's paying too much, regardless of the costs faced by the landlord, he should be able to get relief."

Representative Herbert (Democrat), of Louisiana, a District Committee member, defended the January 1 date against requests to put it further back, explaining that insufficient data existed to give an administrator evidence in deciding cases.

Representative Patman's amendment, as finally agreed upon, allows the administrator to determine "a fair and reasonable rental" following a landlord's petition that the maximum rent ceiling is too high "compared to the investment value of the property and the value of services rendered."

As passed by the House, the rent control measure would continue in existence until December 31, 1943. The administrator, who must have been a bona fide resident of the District or environs for the last three years, would be appointed by the Commissioners. His salary would be $7500 annually.

Also passed by the House yesterday was a bill authorizing the Library of Congress Trust Fund Board to allocate one-half of the income of property at Sixteenth and I Streets Northwest to the Smithsonian Institution under terms of a will dividing the income between the two institutions.

At a House District Committee meeting yesterday action was deferred on measures amending the District Alley Dwelling Authority Act and raising the pay of District police and firemen.

It's an Old American Custom

Remember your first camera? We bet you thought it was swell. But cameras didn't stop improving. Think of your pocket-size "miniatures" today.

This quaint object was once the family bathtub. Few people thought it needed improving. But compare it to the porcelain beauties of 1941.

Making a good thing better is an old American custom! And it's an old custom of Kellogg's, world-famous makers of cereals. Over the last 25 years untold Americans have praised the goodness of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. But now a marvelous bran from one of the world's softest wheats gives ALL-BRAN new lightness, new crispness, new flavor!

Tie a string to your finger and ask your grocer for the improved "golden soft" ALL-BRAN. You'll find it just as effective and twice as delicious as ALL-BRAN has ever been. If you'd like to ward off constipation due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, eat ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water and "Join the Regulars."

Brief Strike Slows Work on War Building

Work on the War Department's 31-million-dollar office building in Arlington, Va., was slowed down momentarily yesterday by a short-lived strike of 91 A. F. of L. truck drivers and helpers.

The dispute, described by the War Department as a "sympathy strike" against the Potts & Callahan Contracting Co., was swiftly settled in conferences between company and union representatives.

The strikers, members of Local 639, Drivers, Chauffeurs and Helpers Union, are expected to return to their jobs today.

They walked out shortly before noon in sympathy with fellow union members employed by Potts & Callahan on a nondefense road project at Lansdowne, Md., where labor difficulties had arisen, according to the War Department.

Announcement that the strike had been settled came at 7 p. m.

Previously, Army officers characterized the walkout as a direct violation of the A. F. of L. Building and Construction Trades Department's pledge last July for a moratorium on all strikes involving national defense work.

Maj. Clarence Renshaw, construction quartermaster in charge of the project, said he was "keenly disappointed" in the union's action as the workers had no grievance against the War Department.

Union officials had no comment on issues of the strike. They declined at first to acknowledge that there had been a walkout but later confirmed a War Department announcement that workers would return to their jobs today.

The strike caused temporary curtailment of several phases of work on the building. Halted were relocation of the Pennsylvania Railroad line to Rosslyn, Va.; construction of a temporary by-pass for U. S. Highway No. 1, excavation operations for the building's foundations and work on the project's road system.

Three thousand men, working in three shifts daily, are now employed on the project. Land is being graded, piles driven and concrete poured.

Albert Spalding to Present Violin Concerto by Barber

Symphony to Give World Premiere Of 'Czech Rhapsody'

ALBERT SPALDING

Albert Spalding, who can count more fans in the United States than any other American violinist, turned out yesterday to be a fan himself, and an ardent one, too.

The current object of his enthusiastic admiration is Samuel Barber, the American composer, whose violin concerto he will introduce to Washington audiences tomorrow night with the National Symphony Orchestra.

"This concerto," Spalding told reporters who gathered in his dressing room at Constitution Hall following a rehearsal with the National Symphony, "is a thing that does full credit both to Mr. Barber and the country he comes from, which is the United States."

Then Spalding's eyes crinkled in the friendly way that brings a crescendo of applause when he bows before an audience, and he began to wax eloquent in the manner that is largely responsible for his unofficial sobriquet of "glamour boy of the Nation's drawing rooms."

"In musical politics" he said, "Mr. Barber is a liberal, a liberal with odd leanings toward lyricism."

The leanings are "odd," he explained, because this is a day and age when lyricism is said to be out of pattern.

"With this I do not agree, declared the master of the violin, his smile vanishing and a steely grint coming into his eyes.

"As a composer, Mr. Barber is essentially a singer, writing on a violin, which is an instrument of song."

Twice before Spalding has played Barber's concerto in public. In Philadelphia last year, he introduced it to the musical world and shortly afterward he played it again in New York City.

Spalding's glibness in the repartee with reporters gave a clew to his personal popularity, an idea of why he is probably the most lionized musician in the country.

With amazing elocution, he replied to one question by giving a thumbnail dissertation on the history of violin making, summing up by declaring:

"Unless violin making is revived as an art and not as a trade there won't be any more violins like those made in the twilight of the renaissance, when this sweet-throated singer made its appearance."

Spalding affectionately patted his rare Guarnerius violin, which is insured for $100,000, and remarked that it was an example of real violin making.

He also has several Stradivari, insured for $50,000 each, but the Gaurnerius is his pet. He plays the Strads while giving the pet a rest, which he said was necessary for the wellbeing of any violin.

Incidentally, he'll use the Guarnerius tomorrow night when he plays Barber's concerto and Mozart's A major concerto.

The National Symphony, conducted by Hans Kindler, will give the world premiere of Czec rhapsody by Jaromir Weinberger. The orchestra also will play Dr. Kindler's arrangement of Handel's prelude and fugue and Sibelius' symphony No. 1, in E minor.

Air Mosaics Give Bird's-Eye View Of Defense Areas

Bird's-eye views of 30 defense areas in the United States have been obtained by the cartographic division of the Soil Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture, through the use of the aerial mosaic.

The mosaics are put together as one of the defense activities currently carried on at the department's experimental center at Beltsville, Md. Resembling jigsaw puzzles, they are made of photographs fitted together to give a composite picture of many thousands of acres of land. Army projects in Florida, Kentucky, Texas, Oklahoma, Iowa and on the West Coast have been pictured in connection with the land purchase of the quartermaster department.

Just what the Army has planned for the areas photographed is not known. The exact location of the projects has been kept secret. It is thought that most of the land in which the Army is interested will be utilized as storage points for munitions, chemicals or other commodities vital to the defense program.

The aerial photographs are taken by private companies working on a contract basis for the cartographic division. The films are developed and the mosaics are made at Beltsville.

Although the term, aerial mosaic, sounds highly technical, the development of a composite photograph is relatively simple. The cameraman flies back and forth in parallel lines over the area to be photographed. The lines are 2 miles apart. At intervals of 1 mile, while flying up and down each line, a photograph is taken.

Each shot is identified by a project symbol on the developed film, a roll number and print number. The center portion, or about one-third of each photograph, is taken and the pieces are accurately pasted together on a large board by means of the identifying numbers. The composite picture that results is then made into one photograph which shows the entire area in which pictures have been taken.

As much as 18 square miles, or 11,500 acres, can be shown on one of the photographic units that goes into the composite picture, according to J. M. Snyder, head of the cartographic division. Mosaics showing as much as 100,000 acres have been made at Beltsville for defense projects.

Five companies are now taking mosaic pictures for the cartographic division, which expects to continue photographing defense areas for the Army. One hundred and sixty men are employed at Beltsville by the division.

The aerial mosaic is not to be confused with topographical photography done especially for the development of contour maps made with stereoscopic instruments, it is stated. The mosaic is merely a composite photograph on which Army engineers can outline different properties and their acreage.

Photographs of the same area taken from two different angles are necessary for topographical map making. When viewed from two angles through special stereoscopic instruments the land is given a three-dimensional effect which permits the computation of the heights of mountains and valleys.

Stereoscopic contour mapping is done at Beltsville by the cartographic division's map control and map compilation sections. The topographic branch of the geological survey at Clarendon, Va., is also equipped to do this work.

Why Britain Was Not Invaded

(October 31, 1940)

BERLIN, October 31, 1940.—With winter upon us, it is now obvious that there will be no German attempt to invade Britain this fall. Why has the invasion not been attempted?

In the first place, Hitler hesitated, and his hesitation may well prove to have been a blunder as colossal as the indecision of the German high command before Paris in 1914, marking a turning point in the war.

SHIRER

Many who followed the German army into France expected Hitler to turn immediately and strike at Britain while the iron was hot. The British were reeling from the titanic blows just struck them.

This was the situation when Hitler strode into the little clearing of Compiegne Forest on June 21 to dictate a harsh armistice to France. I recall now that at Compiegne there seemed to be no hurry on the part of the German military to finish up with Britain. Piecing together stray bits of conversation picked up here and there in Compiegne and Paris, I think the word had come down from Hitler that an invasion of Britain would never be necessary. Churchill would accept the kind of peace which the little Austrian was mulling over in his mind.

I believed Hitler really thought he would. And his certainty delayed and slackened the work which was necessary to prepare a devastating invasion force.

* * * *

(Later, 1941.—Some observers in Berlin were convinced at the end of June that Hitler was sincerely anxious to conclude peace with Britain so that he could turn on the Soviet Union—always his long term objective. The fact that during the last days of June and throughout the first three weeks of July one German division after another was recalled from France and hurriedly transported to what the Germans usually referred to as the "Russian front" would seem to bear this out. But it is by means certain.)

* * * *

It may well be that Hitler expected Churchill to make the first move for peace. Didn't an Englishman know when he was beaten? Hitler waited a month. All through the last week of June and the first three weeks of July he waited.

On July 19 Hitler spoke out in the Reichstag. He publicly offered Britain peace. I think the prompt and sweeping reaction in England came as a shock to him. He was not prepared for such a quick and unequivocal rejection.

I think he hesitated until the end of July—12 days—before he accepted that rejection as Churchill's final answer. By then a month and a half of precious time had been largely lost.

There is reason to believe that most of the generals of the High Command maintained grave doubts as to the chances of success of an invasion of Britain by a land army. The naval problem involved seems to have baffled them, for one thing. And though Goering, it is reliably reported, assured them he could knock out the R. A. F. in a fortnight, they seem to have had some doubts on this score too—doubts that in the end proved fully justified.

Throughout July the Germans had been gathering barges and pontoons in the canals, rivers, and harbors along the French, Belgian and Dutch coasts and assembling shipping at Bremen, Hamburg, Kiel, and various ports in Denmark and Norway.

On the night of August 5, Hitler had a long conference in the chancellery with his chief military advisers. It is likely that Hitler at this meeting made his decision to attempt the invasion and went over the final plans.

What were those plans? From what little has leaked out, I think we can deduce the grand lines of the strategy decided upon. A great air offensive against the British air force would be launched on or about August 13. The R. A. F. would be wiped out by September 1. And then, with complete mastery of the air over the Channel and over England, the invasion would be launched.

The main force would cross the Channel in barges, pontoons, and small boats. Other ships would set out from Bremen, Hamburg, and the Norwegian ports to make landings in Scotland. Another small expedition of ships from Brest would take Ireland. And of course there would be parachute action on a large scale.

The army would not move until the Royal Air Force had been annihilated. Goering promised a speedy accomplishment of this. He based his confidence on a very simple calculation. He had four times as many planes as the British. He had only to attack in superior numbers, and even if he lost as many planes as the enemy, in the end he would still have a substantial air fleet, and the British would have none.

What Goering and all the other Germans were incapable of grasping was that the British were prepared to see their cities bombed and destroyed before they would risk all of their planes in a few great air battles to defend them. To the British this was mere common sense and the only tactic that could save them. To the German military mind it was incomprehensible. It is primarily due to this error of judgment, so typically German, I'm convinced, that the plan to invade Britain this year had to be abandoned.

To destroy the British air force Goering had to get it off the ground. But try as he did, he never succeeded. The British kept most of their planes in reserve.

Why, many Germans here have asked, could not the Luftwaffe destroy the R. A. F. on the ground? The Luftwaffe's own answer is undoubtedly true. German airmen tell me that the British simply scattered their planes on a thousand far-flung fields. No air force in the world could hunt them out in sufficient numbers to destroy any sizable portion.

There is another aspect of Goering's failure which is not so clear to us here in Berlin. He tried for a month to destroy the air arm of Britain's defense. This attempt was made in daylight attacks. But by the third week of September the great daylight raids had ceased. At first thought there seems to be some contradiction between our belief here that the British preferred to see their cities bombed rather than risk too many of their planes in the air—between that and the fact that the R. A. F. obviously took such a toll of German planes that Goering had to abandon his grandiose daylight attacks.

Probably it is no contradiction at all. While the British never risked more than a small portion of their available fighters on any one day, they did send up enough to destroy more German bombers per day than Goering could afford to lose. For he was using them in large mass formations, more as a snare to get the British fighters off the ground, so that his Messerschmitts could wipe out Britain's fighter defense, than for mere bombing.

And here British air tactics played an important role. The German tell me that the British fighter squadrons had strict orders to avoid combat with German fighters whenever possible. Instead they were instructed to dart in on the bombers, knock off as many of the cumbersome machines as they could, and then steal away. On at least three separate days, British fighters shot down some 175 to 200 German planes, mostly bombers, and crippled probably half as many more. These were blows which the Luftwaffe could not indefinitely sustain despite its numerical superiority.

And so the first fortnight in September came and went, and still the Germans could not destroy the British air force. The great Nazi land army waited, cooling its heels behind the cliffs at Boulogne and Calais and along the canals behind the sea. It was not left entirely unmolested. At night, the British bombers came over. What losses in men and materials were sustained by these insistent British air attacks is not known. But from what I saw of these bombings myself and from what I've been told by German airmen, I think it is highly improbable that the German army was ever able to assemble in the ports or on the beaches enough barges or ships to launch an invasion in the force that would have been necessary.

The stories emanating from France that an actual full-fledged invasion was attempted on or around the middle of September and repulsed by the British seem to be without foundation. In the first place, the British would certainly have let the news out.

What probably happened is that the Germans attempted a fairly extensive invasion rehearsal. They put barges and ships to sea, the weather turned against them, light British naval forces and planes caught them, set a number of barges on fire, and caused a considerable number of casualties. The unusual number of hospital trains full of men suffering from burns would bear out this version, though we have no other concrete information to go on.

BERLIN, Nov. 5.—If all goes well, I shall leave here for New York a month from today. The very prospect of leaving takes a terrible load off your heart and mind. I feel swell.

U.S. to Double Toluol Output; Needed in TNT

The OPM is mapping plans that would almost double present schedules for the production of toluol, principal ingredient of TNT military explosives, it was learned yesterday.

The program for the expanded output apparently derives from stepped-up ammunition requirements, principally those of the British, it was believed. It is based on present needs, rather than future demands of a doubled "victory program" or the United States' involvement in a "shooting war," according to indications.

The program, which would increase a presently-planned production schedule of 800-odd million gallons annually to about 150 million gallons, has not been approved by the War Department. Although the final figure may be scaled down somewhat, substantial ultimate expansion is considered certain.

Erection of the expanded toluol facilities would take from a year to 18 months, it is calculated. Most of the new construction would be Government-financed, officials said.

The process contemplated is the extraction of the TNT base from petroleum in special oil refineries, with existing oil companies in charge of the work.

Conservation Program Rates To Be Smaller

By the Associated Press

Farmers will receive lower benefit payments under the Agriculture Department's 1942 500-million-dollar soil conservation program for all major crops except wheat and a minor type of tobacco.

The wheat rate is 10.5 cents a bushel compared with 8 cents this year. The rate for Virginia sun-cured tobacco was increased from 0.8 to 0.9 cents a pound.

Other rates announced yesterday compared with those in effect this year included (the old rate is given last): Corn (for the commercial area) 8 and 9 cents a bushel; cotton, 1.25 and 1.37 a pound; Rice, 3 and 3.5 cents per 100 pounds; peanuts, $1.45 and $2.25 a ton; flue-cured and Burley tobacco, 0.7 and 0.8 cents a pound; fire-cured tobacco, 1.4 and 1.5 cents a pound; dark air-cured tobacco, 0.9 and 1 cents a pound; Pennsylvania type 41 tobacco, 0.4 and 0.5 cents a pound; cigar filler and binder tobacco, 0.7 and 0.8 cents a pound; Georgia-Florida type 62 tobacco, 0.9 and 1 cents a pound, and potatoes, 2 and 2.3 cents a bushel.

These rates will be paid to farmers who plant within department acreage allotments and who carry out soil-building and soil conserving practices. The amount a farmer would receive for any crop would be determined by multiplying the normal production of his acreage allotment by the benefit payment rate. For example, a wheat farmer with a 100-acre allotment and a yield of 10 bushels per acre would receive 1000 times 10.5 cents or $105.

The soil conservation payments would be in addition to any parity payments that might be offered. Such payments are designed to make up the difference between what farmers now receive for their products and the purchasing power those products had in the base period 1909-1914. Parity payments are authorized when the market price average below the parity price goal for the crop. The parity payment rates in effect this year were 10 cents for wheat, 5 cents for corn, 1.38 cents for cotton, 20 cents for rice, 0.8 cents for flue cured tobacco, 0.2 cents for fire-cured tobacco and 0.7 cents for cigar filler and binder tobacco.

Although most of the conservation rates are smaller for 1942, the department explained that the total amount of money alloted for each crop was about the same as this year. The wheat rate was increased because the acreage allotments were reduced about 12 per cent due to a record surplus. Slightly larger acreages of other crops are expected to offset decreases in the rates, officials said.

In addition to payments based on these rates, farmers may obtain additional money for carrying out suggested soil-building practices. Rates for these practices were announced several months ago.

Judge Newman Ill, New Court Plan Delayed

Operation of the two-jury-courts plan for Police Court, scheduled to begin today, has been postponed until Thursday, November 13, due to the illness of Judge Hobart Newman, it was announced yesterday by Walter F. Bramhall, clerk of the court.

More than 800 cases are now pending before the jury court.

Bramhall explained he had been advised that Judge Newman, who is under a physician's care at his home, will not be available until next Monday. On that day, however, all "lockups" collected over the week-end are tried in the other branches of court, making it impossible to hold two sessions for jury trials. The next day, Tuesday, November 11, is Armistice Day and court will be closed. Usually all of the bond and collateral cases are heard on Tuesday, so that the next day, Wednesday, November 12 probably will be devoted to these cases.

All told, there are four branches in Police Court—the jury court, D. C. branch, U. S. branch and traffic. Also, there are four judges assigned to Police Court: Presiding Judge John P. McMahon, Judge Newman, Judge Walter J. Casey, who is conducting the jury court now, and Judge George D. Neilson, who yesterday conducted both the U. S. and D. C. branches.

Judge Newman is slated to conduct the jury court No. 2.

On Monday the "lockup" cases are so numerous that a single judge is needed to handle them. For example, yesterday Judge Neilson heard more than 180 cases in the D. C. branch. Most of the defendants were charged with being drunk.

Judge Neilson meted out a total of more than $5000 in fines and an aggregate 20 years imprisonment. His fines ranged from $5 to $100, and jail terms from 10 days to 125 days.

Since the court assignments for the two-jury court plan were made two weeks in advance, many of the cases will have to be reassigned when the witnesses appear in court, unless they can be notified in advance.

During the last two weeks last month Judge Neilson, on several occasions, resorted to night sessions in order to decrease the unusually large number of cases. He was able to clear about 200 cases.

During the weekdays, with the exception of Monday, a judge may easily handle both the U. S. and D. C. branches, due to the small number of cases.

Defense Perils

First Lady Sees Lesson In Sinking

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt yesterday cited the sinking of the destroyer Reuben James as an illustration of how close "the instruments of war" are to United States shores.

The First Lady summed up her reaction of the Nazis' attack on the American warship in these words:

"I think more people will gradually become aware of the dangers that are bound to come to us in our efforts for defense. I think it will make more people realize that if we are defending our shores up to a certain point, we run certain dangers and that we get the consequences of running those dangers.

"It might bring home more than ever before the nearness of certain instruments of war, which people have felt are very far away."

When asked if she thought the sinking would help reduce strikes and speed up production, she replied: "I should think it would help to speed up production."

Transferring her attention to the local scene, Mrs. Roosevelt said she thought Washington's increased crime problem could be laid to the city's rapid expansion and the resultant overcrowding.

Such a development always draws the criminal element into the field, she said. It is up to District officials to protect newly arrived Government workers by steering them to lodgings in neighborhoods not frequented by criminals and by tightening up on inspection of housing facilities, Mrs. Roosevelt asserted.

On the subject of her son, John, and his family being guarded by Secret Service because of some threat to them, the First Lady said she didn't think there was really very much to the story. She didn't know about it until she saw the newspaper reports, she said.

In the meantime, the White House became the first American residence formally pledged to the Government's campaign to save materials for defense through consumer conservation when Mrs. Roosevelt and the housekeeper, Mrs. Henrietta Nesbitt, took the "consumer's pledge for total defense" drafted by Miss Harriet Elliott of the Office of Price Administration.

The pledge reads:

"As a consumer in the total defense of democracy, I will do my part to make my home, my community, my country, ready, efficient and strong.

"I will buy carefully.

"I will take good care of the things I have.

"I will waste nothing."

The rest of the Nation's housewives will be asked to take this pledge on November 12, which has been designated as "war against waste day" in the Civilian Defense Week observance between November 11 and 16.

will be used because of a shortage of geared turbines, he said.

Questioned by members of the House Appropriations Committee, Robinson said revision of shipbuilding schedules in navy yards to handle the new program would slow up warship construction but not to any material degree.

Although this type of escort vessels has never been built in the United States the British navy has such ships. The latest of these run about 1200 tons, slightly larger than the older American destroyers of the Reuben James type, but smaller than the 1800-ton modern United States craft. The British escort ships are about 275 feet long carry a crew of 188, make about 20 knots and carry six to eight 4-inch combination antiaircraft and broadside guns.

The program will be financed under the lend-lease program. Vessels have been allocated to navy yards as follows: Mare Island, Calif., 24 ships; Boston, 12; Puget Sound, Wash., 8 and Philadelphia, 6.

Woman's $7000 Award for Traffic Injuries Upheld

Stating that "a mere deviation from the best court room standards does not constitute reversible error," the United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed a District Court jury's decision, awarding $7,000 in damages to Miss Grace Wood for injuries in a traffic accident.

William Gutshall, the defendant, had appealed, claiming that he was not negligent as a matter of law, and that the District Court justice, "by his remarks, showed partiality and bias."

The accident occurred at the intersection of Sixteenth and T Streets Northwest when Miss Wood was struck by an auto driven by Gutshall.

Price Officials For Any Bill That Will Pass

By Frederick R. Barkley

Copyright by New York Times

As President Roosevelt announced in Hyde Park yesterday that he will confer this week with party leaders on the attitude the Administration should take on House committee modifications of its price control bill, indications developed that Leon Henderson's Office of Price Administration would recommend adoption of any measure that can be passed quickly rather than risk further delay.

Henderson's office was studying yesterday the changes from Administration recommendations in the bill reported late Saturday by the House Banking and Currency Committee after three months of consideration. The chief of these was the adoption of what has been called a "rubber ceiling" on farm prices, which would permit them in some cases to rise to 130 per cent of the partity price of last July 15.

OPA officials, although declining to be quoted by name, indicated that they thought the reported bill was sufficiently flexible to permit a fair measure of administration control over unreasonable price increases even though the measure was considerably loosened up by the House committee.

The banking committee report on the bill is expected to be ready by tomorrow. Representative Steagall, committee chairman, said yesterday he hoped the House could take up the measure on Thursday, but some quarters thought it might not come up until next week.

The fact that Canada has just adopted a drastic bill of this nature, which was discussed at Hyde Park Sunday by the President and W. L. Mackenzie King, Canadian prime minister, brought out indications that Mackenzie King was hopeful of similar quick action in this country because the two nations' price levels are so closely tied together.

Wickard Opposes Going Above 110% of Parity

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard last night opposed a provision of pending price control legislation which would permit prices of some farm products to go higher than 110 per cent of "parity."

He said in a radio talk over the National Radio Forum of the Washington Evening Star that such a proposal would make price control "ineffective" and that agriculture stood to lose "a lot of good will if the people get the idea that farmers are insisting on too much."

"It has taken us a long time to sell the country on the idea of equality for the farmer," he said. "Let's keep it sold."

In reporting a price control bill late Saturday the House Banking Committee included a three-way formula for commodity prices. The ceiling would be the highest of three levels: 110 per cent of parity, the average price from 1919 to 1929, and the prevailing level last October.

(Parity means, generally speaking, the same purchasing power famers enjoyed in the 1909-14 period.)

Chest Advance Unit Collects 63% of Quota

The advance gifts unit of the Community Chest drive has already collected 63 per cent of its quota from 788 contributors, it was announced yesterday at a noon meeting Friday noon at Hotel Willard.

Richard H. Wilmer, chairman of Richard H. Wilmer, chairman of the unit, described the results as is obviously much more ground to be covered, with more than 1000 prospective givers as yet to be heard from."

The advance gifts unit solicits from large givers in advance of the regular drive which starts November 13.

Mrs. Raymond Clapper, a member of the unit, told the group that the differences between the Community Chest drive and the Nazi winter relief drive demonstrates the differences between the two civilizations.

Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, wife of the supreme Court Justice, presided at the meeting. Also seated at the head table were Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. Walter G. Distler, Mrs. Charles A. Goldsmith, Mrs. Charles J. Brand and Mrs. Donald Richberg.

The unit will wind up its efforts Friday noon at Hotel Willard.

Third Criminal Court Branch Opened Here

A third criminal branch at District Court, with Justice F. Dickinson Letts presiding, was begun yesterday to relieve the court's congested docket. Criminal courts Nos. 1 and 2, presided over by Justice T. Alan Goldsborough and James W. Morris, are also in session. The new court's opening schedule consists of 11 trials and three motions.

Long-Distance Phone Union Calls Strike

By the Associated Press

A strike of 15,000 Long Lines Telephone Workers was called last night for November 14, but union officials said it would be called off if the Defense Mediation Board intervened in the dispute.

John J. Moran, president of the Federation of Long Lines Telephone Workers (independent), said a walkout would "completely tie up the long distance wires, the Army and Navy communications systems, the wires of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, the country-wide radio hookup and the transmission of wirephotos and teletypewriter news services."

The union is demanding a 4 per cent wage increase. It said present scales ranged from $18 to $36 for men and from $13 to $31 for women.

Aircraft Welders Vote Strike

Meantime, a strike of welders which would hamper aircraft production was threatened.

About 300 welders at three aircraft plants—Lockheed Aircraft Corporation and Vega Airplane Co., both of Burbank, Calif., and Consolidated Aircraft Corporation, San Diego—voted to strike at midnight tonight unless the labor board authorizes a bargaining election. Now in the A. F. of L. Machinists Union, they want to be represented by the United Aircraft Welders of America.

Several hundred welders at West Coast shipping yards and at some plants in the South already are on strike protesting the refusal of the A. F. of L. to charter the United Welders Union. Welders now are included in various A. F. of L. metal trades unions.

Hillman Appeal Rejected

An appeal by Sidney Hillman, associate director of the OPM, for the welders to return to work was rejected yesterday by the Seattle Council of Welders and Burners. The welders reaffirmed their former stand that they must be given recognition by the A. F. of L. or be permitted to function as an independent union.

The California Shipbuilding Corporation, in Los Angeles said the strike has forced indefinite postponement of the launching of a Maritime Commission freighter, planned for this week. Union officials said all work was halted at the smaller Consolidated Steel Corporation yards, where three freighters and two Navy transports were under construction. Conosolidated officials said 1100 men were thrown out of work.

Bell Walkout Held Up

The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, which had voted a strike at Bell Aircraft Corporation's two plants in Buffalo, N. Y., decided to hold up a walkout and give the Mediation Board a chance to settle the dispute.

The union asks a general increase of 20 cents an hour for 10,500 employes, a 25-cent increase in the present 50-cent-an-hour minimum wage, and a union shop requiring all employes to become members of the C. I. O.-U. A. W.

A strike affecting the coal supply of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. was called off last night by officials of the A. F. L. Masters, Mates and Pilots Union. The boatmen, hauling coal from "captive" mines of the U. S. Steel Corporation to its subsidiary, Carnegie-Illinois, struck Friday night. The dispute involving wages and working conditions was referred to the National Labor Relations Board.

Mrs. Magoffin Stricken as She Testifies in Court

Mrs. Edith Magoffin, wife of Paul "Maggie" Magoffin, well-known football referee, was in Casualty Hospital last night, suffering from a stroke, after collapsing in District Court yesterday afternoon.

She became ill in court yesterday while testifying before Justice Matthew McGuire in a suit for maintenance against her husband. She asked to be excused from the courtroom for a moment, and a short time later collapsed in the corridor.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg was rushed to her aid, and she was taken to Casualty Hospital. Mrs. Magoffin lives in the 3400 block of Sixteenth Street Northwest. Her case was continued indefinitely.

Lewis, Steel Chieftains Testify As Coal Dispute Hearing Opens

By Alfred Friendly

Post Staff Writer

The Defense Mediation Board yesterday heard the opposing arguments of the steel industry owners of "captive" coal mine, and of John L. Lewis, seeking a union shop for 53,000 miners, but closed the first day of proceedings with "the basic conditions of both sides unchanged," according to Board Chairman William H. Davis.

"That's the trouble with basic conditions," Davis added at a brief press conference.

Agreement Rumor Denied

Yesterday's sessions on the controversial issue were begun by presentations of Irving S. Olds and Eugene Grace, heads of the United States Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel Co., respectively, and by other leading figures in the industry. Lewis replied in afternon sessions and will be "on the witness stand, so to speak," at today's resumption of the hearings, Davis said.

Davis took occasion categorically to deny press reports and rumors that through "some sort of agreement between the United States Steel Corporation and the United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) the steel corporation was not as free as the mine workers to reject" ultimate board recommendations.

Davis said he put the question directly to Olds and asked him whether "there was any kind of obligation, direct or indirect, which restricted" his organization's future course of action after a decision was handed down.

He received a negative reply, he said, and was also assured that no one had been authorized to enter into any such commitment.

The report to which Davis alluded declared that Lewis and Myron C. Taylor, a representative of "Big Steel" in previous efforts to negotiate the dispute, had promised to accept as binding the board proposals. Davis insisted, however, that both parties were free to accept or reject the findings.

Lewis Claims Support

Chary with details of the meeting yesterday, Davis explained only that Lewis had called on officers of his union to confirm that the miners were behind their president in wanting a closed shop.

"Lewis referred to the Gallup poll," Davis said, "and held one of his own."

The poll, printed Sunday in The Post, had implied that even among union members, there was support for strike-curbing legislation and opposition to the closed shop.

Counterpoint to yesterday's proceedings was growing Congressional rumbling over the strike situation and demands for a closed shop.

Representative Ford Seeks Action

Representative Leland M. Ford (Republican), of California, announced a resolution calling on President Roosevelt to take "appropriate action" to prevent labor leaders from "sabotaging" the defense program. At the same time, Senator Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, said the President had "sacrificed the welfare of the national defense program because he cannot bear to have the leaders of a labor machine of his creation feel unkindly toward him."

And Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, warned the House that it should not be "fooled" by any settlement of the coal mine dispute into thinking that this eliminated the necessity of strike-curbing legislation.

Fireman's Son Injured by Auto

An 8-year-old boy was unconscious at WalterReed Hospital last night after he had been struck by an automobile at Fifth and Farragut Streets Northwest, near his home. He was said to have suffered serious head injuries.

The injured child is Frank H. Lewis, son of Ethel Lewis and Frank F. Lewis, a fireman with No. 24 Engine Company, of 623 Far No. 24 Engine Company, of 623 Farsecond-grader at the Truesdale School.

The driver of the striking car was not held.

Action On Rents

Prompt passage of the rent-control bill by the House yesterday is a tribute to the careful spade work which had been done by the District Committee and by local sponsors of the measure. The urgent need for rent control in Washington had been established beyond question. A concise, clear and reasonable bill had been drafted. The House accepted the bill as written, except for one major and one minor amendment. The minor amendment would properly require the District, instead of the Federal Treasury, to pay the cost of administering the rent-control system. The major amendment, sponsored by Representative Patman, is an attempt to modify the whole purpose of the bill. As the bill went before the House, its sole purpose was to prevent the exploitation of tenants because of the acute housing shortage in Washington during this emergency period. Mr. Patman's amendment is designed to bring about the regulation of rental housing in the District as a public utility.

The emergency character of the committee's bill is underlined by the facts that it would freeze rentals at the level of January 1, 1941, and that all the power it would grant would expire at the end of 1945. It did not attempt to raise the complicated issue of whether rents were too high before the emergency developed. Sponsors of the bill knew that the injection of such a controversy into a plan for temporary control of rents would tend to defeat their real objective. But Mr. Patman was not inhibited by any such sensible restraint. He has attempted to load upon the proposed rent-control administrator the enormous burden of investigating property values as well as service rendered by landlords and of determining fair and reasonable rents.

No doubt the House was caught off guard when it permitted the insertion of that obstructive amendment into the bill. It remains for the Senate to restore the bill to its original purpose of preventing exploitation of tenants during the emergency. Fortunately, it can eliminate Mr. Patman's ingenious device by changing half a dozen lines. The desirability of restricting the bill to simple and effective emergency controls, without raising endless controversy over property values, is not open to reasonable question.

Adding To The Fleet

The transfer of the Coast Guard from the Treasury to the Navy Department is a blunt reminder of our war status and of the continuity of American naval procedure in time of crisis. Repeated attacks on American merchantmen, our consequent shoot-on-sight policy, and the sinking or damaging of our destroyers ought to have made our war status quite clear. But if there are those who look to historic precedent for confirmation of that status, they will find it in similar transfers during the World and Spanish-American Wars. Then the Coast Guard and its predecessors were placed under Navy control so as to provide unified direction of operations at sea. The difficulties of such operations in the present instance are, of course, enormously magnified. Attack from the air, often hundreds of miles from land, has added a new dimension to sea warfare. And while attacking surface raiders, judging from Berlin's own admission, are not nearly as potent a threat as in the World War, undersea raiders continue to be devastatingly effective along convoy routes.

Some Coast Guard vessels have already been put to work patrolling the North Atlantic. Presumably the transfer will enable still more seagoing cutters to help the Navy search out the enemy. Besides seven 327-foot cutters similar in offensive strength to some destroyers, the Coast Guard has over 100 smaller cutters capable of duty far at sea. Adding these to the Navy's complement of light surface craft should prove particularly advantageous at this time. For, like the British Navy, for whom we are presently to build 50 "escort vessels," our own Navy has found that patrol on the required scale calls for a truly phenomenal supply of small, moderately fast ships, equipped with at least some of the offensive paraphernalia of the average destroyer. The transfer does not mean dangerously lessened protection in American coastal waters. There are literally hundreds of privately owned craft which have been or will be put into active duty as part of the Coast Guard Reserves. But the transfer does mean increased coordination and a welcome stepping up of American naval strength where it is most needed—in the North Atlantic.

Sen. George's Warning

A platitude was once defined as something that deserved to be repeated over and over again. This is certainly the case with the theme of Senator George's statesmanlike statement on neutrality repeal. He warned the country, and particularly the Senate, that the greatest danger confronting the Nation today is the appearance of disunity, not any particular measure before the Senate. The warning would be accepted generally as a truism if the entire country were agreed on the nature of our national peril. The fact is that there is no such general agreement. The opponents of the President's foreign policy argue that the initiative in forcing this country into conflict with Hitler has been undertaken by Mr. Roosevelt. Every measure adopted under the name of defense is regarded as destined to carry this country into an offensive war. Supporters of the President, on the contrary, argue that it is Hitler who is actually making war on the United States, and that the menace is so acute that the President should be relieved of all shackles which prevent him from conducting a positive defense of this country against it. This happens to be the view of this newspaper. It feels that there can be no other conclusion from the record as it has been unrolled since the war started.

The record begins in Mein Kampf. Nobody will dare any more to say that Mein Kampf (My War) can be ignored. Most of Europe is now in chains because of the incredulity which greeted this remarkable book in Europe. A cursory reading made all Europe think that the aim of the Nazi Fuehrer was simply a greater Germany "purified" of so-called alien elements and enlarged to take in Germans outside the territorial boundaries of Germany. Racialism, certainly, is the first article of the Nazi creed. But there is another article in the Nazi creed which is connected with it: viz., the doctrine of leadership. Race can issue only in leadership, for there is no point in cultivating a Herrenvolk (master race) unless the elite have somebody to govern.

Nothing less than the civilized world will satisfy these Herrenvolk. And for this good and sufficient reason slavery will always be unendurable to civilized peoples as long as there remains such an oasis of freedom in the civilized world as the United States. Hitler knows that, and the strangest phenomenon about this German leader is that he acknowledges the fact publicly. He makes no secret, in other words, about his world design. No world conqueror till Hitler has been as barefaced as Hitler in bespeaking world conquest ahead of achieving it. It almost seems in this respect as if he had taken a leaf out of Bismarck's copybook. The Iron Chancellor's advice to diplomats was always to tell the truth because nobody would believe it. In Mein Kampf Hitler says that if his movement remains true to "the values of individual personality and race," it will establish a state which "must one day become ruler of the earth." This has been the theme-song of Hitler's henchmen since the publication of Mein Kampf. Dr. Robert Ley, who has tied all German labor to the Nazi war chariot, says, "We German men of the present must march as the standard-bearers of a new and better world." Reichminister Frank says, "It is necessary to think in terms not only of a national state but of a world empire." These men, it is true, were speaking to Germans. But Hitler raised his voice on high last December 10 when he declared to a still incredulous world that the war "in fact, is a struggle of two worlds."

If words are not enough, the subsequent deeds underline them for all to read. The countries that scorned the Viennese house painter are now prostrate under his heel. His swastika flies from the North Cape to the Straits of Sicily—across the very seat of our civilization. It has been flung across the Mediterranean into the darkness of Africa. It is within view of the anxious peoples of Asia across the Black Sea. The gates of Moscow may soon see the noxious standard. The achievements at arms of this megalomaniac are so fantastic that the very reverberation of those achievements brings him vassals. Latin America sees the choice of its future lying between Berlin and Washington. The Japanese have tied their destiny to a man who frankly despises their origins and their little pretensions. So the war—this European war!—runs around the world. Nazi legions are on the march across every route that every world conqueror has ever trod, indoctrinated and spurred by the Weltanschauung (world outlook) of this "master race." They will not be stopped till either Hitler is defeated or the world is brought low by what Hitler calls "the triumphant sword of a people endowed with a power to master the world as Germans."

Clearly the United States lies in very great danger. At present, perhaps, the imagination is strained by the notion of a physical invasion, though the logic of Hitler's fabulous record should extrude any skepticism. Still there is no need to argue the point. Hitler uses force only as a last resort, and hates to throw his Herrenvolk into the fray. The preference of this apostle of untruth is for the fomentation of internal dissension which would make an attack unnecessary. His success in this respect is written in bold type across the face of France and of a dozen other nations. He thinks that the United States will be just as easy to conquer from within. To him our free institutions are a "disintegrating poison" which have produced a "degenerate Yankeedom." He thinks we have lost the vision to see danger and the guts to sally forth boldly and remove it. For a time Hitler seemed to be right. We helped to put aggression into Hitler, to bring him closer to our shores, by our slackness in armament, by our waiving of our rights on the seas, by our declaration of neutrality at any price.

Mr. Roosevelt long ago had got the measure of Hitler, and sought to put our country—over the votes of the Senators who are against the repeal of neutrality—in the way of coping with him. His authoritative voice as our President, his watchfulness as our Commander in Chief, are the only reliance we have left against all-in physical conflict. But Mr. Roosevelt's authoritative voice can carry only the weight of the voice of the people. And if Hitler knows that all America is speaking when Mr. Roosevelt is speaking, then, as Senator George says, there is less danger of conflict. The Senate has an opportunity of beginning this all-American demonstration. It could not do any greater service to the country than to give the people an inspiring example of unity in freeing the President's hands for action against the ever-widening and encircling menace to our national security which comes from Hitlerism.

Disguised Propaganda

The virtue of the act requiring the agents of foreign principals to register with the State Department has been amply attested. For foreign propagandists in this country have found it much more difficult to work effectively since their identity has been exposed. If a properly identified agent of a foreign government makes a speech, the public knows precisely how much weight to attach to it. If he lobbies for a bill, his arguments can be properly discounted. The trouble is that he is not always identified properly. The mere fact that a foreign agent may be registered with the State Department does not mean that his disguised and anonymous propaganda will be recognized by the public. One Nazi agent now under indictment is believed actually to have been responsible for sending propaganda through the mails under Congressional franks. Such agents are at complete liberty to distribute anonymous pamphlets, circulars, magazines and so forth to the American public.

Accordingly Senator Wiley has prepared a bill which would fill in this loophole in the act calling for registration of such persons. It would require foreign propaganda to be labeled as the work of a foreign agent. Any photograph, motion picture film, newspaper, pamphlet, circular or magazine, published or distributed by foreign agents without any identifying label, would be excluded from the mails. Propagandists violating this rule would be subject to fines up to $1000 and five years' imprisonment. Certainly the public is entitled to know where malicious printed matter, paid for by foreign governments, is coming from. Thus the enactment of Mr. Wiley's bill appears to be an essential step to bring all the work of the foreign propagandists out into the open.

Simon Guggenheim

To most people the name Guggenheim conjures up visions of enormous industrial wealth. And so it should. For the Guggenheim brothers, originally from Philadelphia, built up in Colorado and elsewhere perhaps the world's most extensive mining and smelting interests. Yet the passing on Sunday night of one of the brothers, Simon, should also bring to mind the social benefits which may accrue to the Nation when the obligations of great wealth are meticulously observed. Much of Simon Guggenheim's life, which was of extraordinary compass, was devoted to worthwhile philanthropies which will live on long after his colorful career as a merchant, industrialist and political leader is forgotten. Among his works he built and endowed schools and hospitals. And his establishment of the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation makes possible the granting each year of suitable stipends for 50 or 60 gifted persons wishing to carry on original research or creative work in the fine arts. His was, indeed, a useful life in the true social sense.

THE SABBATH EARLY

It was the Sabbath early
And Jesus walked through the corn.
The morn like a bud lay folded,
The blackbird slept on the thorn,
Night still dampened the stubble,
A wraith moon hung in the sky,
But the wind first sensed a presence
And whispered the stalks, "He is nigh."
The bird shot up from her nesting,
The sun burst forth full born,
The earth sang under His footsteps,
And Jesus walked through the corn.

Home Life

After 50 years of dealing with the life of the home, private and general, I must confess my inability to locate the home, as at present, in comparison with the home of the past.

If we were to go in search of home life today I doubt very much, that we could locate it without a great deal of confusion, misapplication and definition.

I believe that many, if not all, will agree with us that the home life is so fractinated and variegated that it has become a matter of mere residence, however periodic; that all of the living virtues of the former home have woefully degenerated.

Is it not a fact that since the enfranchisement of our female citizenry, and in proportion to the spread of franchisement, there has been a decrease of the home values that are so valuable and indestructible?

We remember that our Nation could once boast of its great men in every walk of public life—men like Washington, Madison, Jefferson, Lincoln, Grant, Lee, McKinley, the Websters, Calhoun, Stevens and scores of others. These men had at heart the birth, baptism and consecration of home life. Ah! There were giants in those days.

I guess it is not possible, or likely, that we would return to the virtues of the home life in this day of national and international class and race disturbances, however much it might tend to revolutionize and, therefore, Christianize, our social order. Certainly we would have to pick up the lost elements, scattered here and there, some in tourist and transportation, some in the various marts of commerce, some in the general political career, some in the judicial departments, and thousands packed in roomless apartments for merely periodic existence.

If we could persuade our good women to "pull up and go home." Refounding the home will never be accomplished by subterfuges and substitution. It cannot be substituted for by any youth organization or child reform or any system of education, but must have its inception in the glorious principles of the old home.

'Fight For Freedom Ad'

Speaking of lying propaganda, the "Fight for Freedom" ad in The Post on October 28 is undeniably on a par with some of the best stuff dished out by Dr. Goebbels. Regardless of its stand on isolation vs. intervention, how can any honest newspaper print such tripe, even for money?

Why the apparent attempt to confuse the issue? Why pretend that the President has not abused his power as Commander in Chief of the armed forces by usurping the power to declare war, reserved to Congress by the Constitution? For President Roosevelt has declared naval war in no uncertain terms, and if we had a Congress alive to the Roosevelt menace to our cherished form of government, the President would be impeached forthwith. That a majority in Congress may be in favor of war is beside the point; our constitutional machinery is breaking down through the efforts of Mr. Roosevelt, leading inevitably to a government of men and not of law. And that is the exact antithesis of the American system. It is the method of Mr. Hitler. S. S. M.

To Outlaw Strikes

What the people of the United States want in regard to the present union labor strike situation is immediate action by President Roosevelt to outlaw, not to mediate, those strikes. That action is rightly his.

The gangstering of national defense that has been going on for so long, with such serious results, should have been stopped when it first reared its ugly, un-American head. We have had enough of it.

Stalin's Purge

There are sound reasons for disagreement with your editorial of November 1 to the effect that thousands of Americans "will find efforts to whitewash the Stalin regime a little nauseating."

Much of the attitude toward Russia is due to misinformation regarding conditions which exist there as well as an uncharitable view of Russia's aims because seemingly they differ so greatly from our own.

The main criticism seems to be directed toward the so-called "purge" of a few years ago when many of the leading citizens were shot. It was well known to many at the time that the condemned men had sought to "sell out" their country for German money and promises just as many prominent citizens did in the countries conquered by Hitler. It was the "Fifth Column" which aided Franco in his abortive revolution contrary to the expressed wishes of the Spanish people; it was Austrian traitors who helped the destruction of Austria and so on throughout all of the German-conquered countries. Bribery and promises to other nationals are an instrument of German national policy. Now if Russia discovered these traitors in advance and shot them for treason, could a practical government do anything else? The defendants were given trials before they were sentenced. "What kind of trials were they given?" is the logical question, and the equally logical answer is that they were given trials according to the law of the land. Their system of procedure might not be as unbiased and fair as our own, but such as it is, it is nevertheless, their system. But certainly our own system of trial procedure is so far from perfect that we can ill afford to lay the barbed hand of criticism upon the people of a far-off land whose customs, traditions and psychology are so utterly different from our own.

One of the peculiar traits of Americans is their penchant for criticizing other nations and other peoples, little realizing that we ourselves are a provincial and uninformed people and that our own beloved land and its inhabitants are just as full of faults and defects as any nation in the world.

The Russian revolution and the subsequent establishment of a communal government is one of the most remarkable political movements in recorded history. At the close of the revolution, Russia was flat on its back. From that position its new administrators erected a great system which has been the means of giving food, clothing and shelter to its people on a scale they had never before known; not great or desirable according to our standards, but infinitely more than they ever received or could have received under the Czars and their extravagant, selfish and dissolute satellites.

We Americans abhor the sanguinary purge. Our own country has been notably free from it, but we were reared with concepts vastly different from Europe's. The "purge" has always been a part of European history. There have been many and not the least of them was that of our own civilized ally in the last war—France, whose guillotining of her nobility during her own revolution was one of the great political purges of history. The French nobility were innocent victims compared to most of the men executed by the Russian government, as the French nobility had no treasonable intentions. They were products of their time who just happened to be in the way of the forces unleashed by the revolution.

Far Northeast

The letter to the Editor by Mr. Robert Dougan, an official of the Capital Transit Co., seeks to impute by inference both The Washington Post and the school officials of packing the loading platform for the picture which was taken. This charge of bad faith is absolutely without foundation.

The truth hurts. Three hundred and twenty-two children who live east of the Anacostia River are dismissed from Brown Junior High School at 4:45. The school is approximately three blocks from the car line and it takes these children 10 to 15 minutes to reach the car line after dismissal from their classrooms. The maximum congestion on the loading platform occurs about 5 p. m., and up to October 21, when the photograph was taken, it was necessary for children to wait 30 to 45 minutes before they could find standing room on eastbound street cars.

Many east-bound street cars that reached Twenty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast, in an overcrowded condition, discharged a few passengers and refused to take on any additional passengers. Other crowded street cars passed without stopping. East-bound cars marked Twenty-fourth and Benning Road switch back to the city empty in spite of the overcrowded condition of the platform for east-bound passengers, which is in utter disregard of the welfare and safety of patrons.

Mr. Dougan argued that since an average of 51.5 passengers were in cars into which 60 passengers can be packed, the children were at fault for not boarding these cars, and that transportation was available. The fact that the Capital Transit Co.'s conductors refused to take on any additional fares in many cases is proof that the cars were packed.

Several years ago the company was granted the right to increase the street car fare in order to secure additional funds to buy new cars. We have repeatedly asked for new cars on the Columbia line, but the company still sends us old, worn out, dirty cars from the other lines on which it places the new cars. There occurred recently on this line two serious accidents, one at Sixth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest and the other at Seventh and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

As a result of protest, conditions at both Twenty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast and at the west end of the Benning Road viaduct are improved due to the efforts of both the Capital Transit Co. and the Metropolitan Police force. There are, however, vast opportunities for improvement and to this end we invite Mr. Dougan personally to inspect the equipment and service on the Columbia line. Both the engineer in charge of traffic planning and the Capital Transit Co.'s public relations official, Mr. Wills, state that they had been uninformed as to the change in hour of closing Brown Junior High School prior to October 22.

Congressional Duty

Messrs. Vandenberg, Taft, Capper, Wheeler, Nye, La Follette the two Clarks, and other isolationist Senators, have declared in the Senate that the pending repeal of certain sections of the Neutrality Act "will remove the last barrier which stands between the people of this country and war;" that "when Senators vote upon this issue they will be voting upon the issue of peace or war," that it is "their last chance to pass on the question of war or peace." Then may we expect them now to desist from the charge that the issue of war or peace has been withheld from Congress, and after the repeal has been made by Congress to recognize that Congress has passed on that issue, and to govern themselves accordingly? The Post Impressionist

Saving Grace

"Save paper cartons," the radio voice admonished me as if suggesting something novel. "Cartons will become scarce. They are being deflected to——." I didn't catch whether is was to Britain or Alcoa, because I was trying to remember a time when possibly I hadn't saved cartons and most other things.

Under the tutelage of my grandfather who as a Yankee and a naval officer had a double abhorrence of waste, it seems to me that we have always saved anything that might possibly come in handy. That was the grandfather who ran all the family's finances so that though we readily recognized and almost felt at home in the depression, we were totally ignorant of the fact that it had been preceded by a boom.

Never since I can remember have I cut the string around a package, unless it came from another member of the family and was already so spliced and knotted as to be useless. First the string was untied and wound up and put aside for the string bag. Then the paper was taken off and folded, again the only exception being that it might be so re-addressed and worn as to be ready for the trash basket. Then the box was put away, the tissue paper smoothed against future use. Then, and not until then, the contents of the package were legitimately uncovered for admiration. When I was little I was impatient of this ritual, now it is a part of receiving anything by mail and I often spend some time over the former addresses on the package, wondering what it was that Mrs. Fenton, of Baltimore, sent my sister Anne valued at $50, or how Aunt Carrie came to buy something at Woodward & Lothrop when she usually goes to Garfinckel. For such habits are not thrown off when you grow up. At college, we were all the butt of mockers for our saving propensities until someone needed a nail. In fact, the only piece of thrift as inculcated by the old Navy that we don't still practice is that of cobbling our shoes, though I cannot now see a bit of leather without wanting to save it for grandfather. The habit is so ingrained that when I was traveling in the West a few years ago, my sister sent me a present done up with about five times the necessary amount of string—and new, at that—so in my thanks I naturally included the string, too—to which she replied that she had thought I might need it.

Christmas, of course, is the great harvest for this particular form of saving. When the presents had been unwrapped, my grandmother would mill about picking up tissue paper and winding ribbon—deploring the use of stickers that tore holes in the paper, remarking that Mrs. Blaine could always be counted on to use real silk ribbon. Her chagrin was great when cellophane was introduced, because that can never be smoothed or ironed for use again. Of course, some of these ribbons were so fine that we could never bring ourselves to let them go out of the family. For three years running, one of my mother's presents was always tied in an identical piece of three-inch wide satin ribbon. And the new blocked papers have never, under our roofs, seen but a single time of use.

It goes without saying that old sweaters and undershirts were kept for polishing, first silver and later automobiles; dish towels and overpatched sheets for scrubbing floors. Latterly, we do not race the engines of our cars any more than we have ever neglected to turn off all the lights before leaving a room. And if we don't save dress patterns for emergency use as toilet paper, it's because we don't make our own clothes, just as we don't cross our letters only because our penmanship is too poor. I have frequently watched my mother take out basting threads and rewind them on a spool. And, before the time of Kleenex, all old linen was saved for handkerchiefs when we had colds. Long before the invention of preschool toys, the babies of our family used to string buttons. There was always a large brass Navy button fastened at the end to prevent the others from sliding off. And my own child finds them, with their variety of shapes and materials and holes, vastly more entertaining than beads.

Saving didn't end with the household, by any means. Magazines and newspapers always went to the Salvation Army, books to seamen or whalers or lighthouse keepers. What bacon fat is not used for cooking still goes to an old dame who makes soap and gives us every year two bars of the white, sweet-smelling product that will take the dirt out of anything. We don't question what it does to our hands. All lead foil is accumulated and our cigarette smoking friends are afraid to come to the house without their contribution to the child's hospital bed it helps maintain. Silk stockings go to a woman who makes them into rugs.

Such pursuits take much time and a nice judgment, particularly in the matter of clothes. Round and round they go in a gradually excentric motion, from sisters to cousins to maids to a former mess attendant to the man who polishes the car, allotted not only with need and size in mind but coloring and opportunities for use. Baby carriages, little Toideys and kiddy kars travel from child to child losing paint and acquiring associations. One of my sisters has a maternity collection that we all call on in time of need, returning it to her with additions and replacements to be put away for the next person. This is the only saving I know of that is not for immediate use; and at that, in such a large family, it seldom has time to get moth holes. My little sister and I once had a reference wardrobe that worked on the same plan as a reference library. It consisted of large, important but not generally necessary items like riding boots and pants, ski outfits, dilapidated fur coats and exotic hats that came in very useful once in a while. But their long periods of inactivity finally wore on us so that we gave them all away.

So, ladies and gentlemen, by all means obey the radio voice and save your cartons; but unless you were raised by somebody like my grandfather, it will be a good while before you can catch up with my long effortless strides in defense or any other kind of saving.

KATHERINE DE M. HOSKINS.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The American Case

HITLER and the German Foreign Office are, of course, concerned to "establish the responsibility for the increasing gravity of German-American relations." They have much to gain by the claim that the United States has "attacked Germany." Their own people need to be convinced that the appearance of another powerful enemy is not due to Hitler's acts. Their Italian allies need to be convinced. The ground has to be prepared for invoking Japanese intervention under the Three Power Pact. And as far as possible they need to divide American opinion by fostering the idea that it is not the aggression of Hitler but the "subterfuges" and "trickery" of Roosevelt which have led to open hostilities in the Atlantic.

LIPPMANN

On the merits the Nazi argument is false and without foundation. But because the American case has been presented piecemeal, because it has never yet been argued thoroughly, the President has exposed himself, quite unnecessarily, to Nazi propaganda abroad and to misunderstanding at home. Though the policy of the American Government rests solidly on a foundation of law and morals and though American policy conforms squarely to America's vital interests, the case of the American Government has not yet been adequately stated. It needs to be stated. For a clear conscience is necessary to effective action and the whole truth is the mightiest weapon of a free people.

HOSTILITIES between the United States and Germany did not begin with the incident of the destroyer Greer on September 4, or with the Kearny incident on October 17, or with the sinking of the Reuben James on October 30. In allowing that misleading impression to go forth the President has quite gratuitously given the Nazi propaganda an opening which it has eagerly exploited.

Hostilities, in the sense of shooting, began on May 21, 1941, when a German submarine sank the Robin Moor about halfway between Africa and South America. The Robin Moor was an unarmed American merchant ship, not traveling in a convoy, bound for Capetown and other African ports. The Robin Moor did not refuse to stop and did not resist visit and search. When the Robin Moor was destroyed, the passengers and crew were placed in open lifeboats hundreds of miles from land, and the right to radio the position of their boats or to send an SOS was refused. Only after terrible exposure to the weather, and only by accident, were the survivors rescued without loss of life.

The action of the submarine commander has never been disavowed by the German government. In fact an effort has been made, in which some American Senators have joined, to justify the act on the ground that the Robin Moor was carrying contraband of war to the enemies of Germany. The nature of the ship's cargo was irrelevant. Under international law, under the London Naval Treaty to which Germany adhered on February 28, 1939, even under the German Prize Law Code promulgated September 3, 1939, it is the rule that "the destruction of vessels . . . is admissible only if the passengers, crew and papers of the vessels have been brought to a place of safety before destruction. Ship's boats are not to be regarded as a place of safety unless the safety of passengers and crew under the existing condition of the sea and weather is assured by the proximity of land or the presence of another vessel which is able to take them on board."

The Robin Moor, unarmed, not in a convoy, outside the American combat zone, outside the German war zone, was sunk lawlessly on May 21, seven weeks before the American occupation of Iceland, nearly four months before the American Navy was ordered to shoot at sight. The fact that the German government did not disavow the act, but sought to justify it, established conclusively that by May 21, 1941, Hitler had ceased to recognize in theory or to respect in practice any right of any noncombatant upon the seas. Thereafter, it became an American right and an American duty to assume that no American ship could rely upon the protection of international law or of treaties or of domestic American law under the Neutrality Act, and that any German war vessel encountered anywhere was an aggressor.

THE ROBIN MOOR was sunk some two months after the passage of the lend-lease bill, and the German government is entitled to argue that it began hostilities on May 21 because at that time the United States had ceased to be neutral. The American answer to this contention is that the Lend-Lease Act was passed only after it had become clear that the vital interests of the United States had become imperilled as a result of the military victories won by Hitler as a result of his violation of the neutral rights of Denmark, Norway, the Netherlands and Belgium.

For it must never be forgotten that France was conquered and Britain placed in mortal danger only because Hitler broke the law and his own pledges as well. Had Hitler observed the law of nations and kept his own solemn pledges, he could not have turned the Maginot Line, he would not have been in a position to threaten the destruction of British sea power. The whole military history of the year 1940 would have been different. For the situation which compelled America to go to the support of Britain arose out of the absolutely lawless violation of four small neutral nations.

THUS, whether the case be argued on the narrow ground of who fired the first hostile shot, or on the broader ground of why the United States and Germany have come to a collision, the conclusion is the same: the vital interests of America have been threatened by the lawless acts of Hitler's government. His lawlessness in Europe gave him the military victories which compelled America to enact lend-lease; his lawlessness at sea, his refusal to observe the laws he had himself agreed to, gave him a deadly but absolutely illegal power at sea which has led to the hostilities in the Atlantic.

The American intervention, the change from the isolationist policy of 1939-1940 to the present American policy of intervention, are due to the fact that as a result of Hitler's violation of law, Hitler's power has grown too great for American security. Hitler would not have conquered France in six weeks, and threatened Britain with invasion or strangulation if, despite the power of his armies and airforce, he had waged war only against his declared enemies, Great Britain and France. The indispensable condition of his military success was the violation of four neutrals, and without the success he won by this violation of law there would not exist the present situation as between Germany and the United States.

THE UNITED STATES has often proclaimed its conviction that the peace of the world depends upon the observance of law. The events of the past two years have demonstrated conclusively how impossible it is for the United States to defend its vital interests and yet remain at peace if the fundamental law of nations is challenged and destroyed. We should not be on the verge of war with Hitler if Hitler had observed the law on which the security of our vital interests depends.

It follows that we shall never again be at peace until the law among nations has been reestablished, and that no peace will endure unless there arises the will and the organized power to uphold, as against all who would challenge it, the authority of the law.

All-Out Fight On U-Boats

By Adm. Yates Stirling

United Press Naval Authority.

THE SO-CALLED Battle of the Atlantic actually narrows down to an all-out fight against the U-boat, which because it can disappear completely under water, making retaliation difficult and costly, is much more of a menace against shipping than bombing planes or surface raiders.

Some reports say Germany has about 300 submarines in operations, but this is probably too high a figure. These include 800-tonners capable of operating long distances from home bases, but a large proportion of the total are of about 250 tons each.

It is probably the larger type that has been operating near Iceland, attacking United States destroyers. These U-boats have been taking a considerable toll of convoys, following them for several days to pick off victims.

THE SMALLER U-boats can operate from German ports and the ports of conquered territory such as Bergen, Stavenger and Trondheim in Norway; Brugge and Ostend in Belgium; Brest, St. Nazaire and Bordeaux in France. They can cover the English Channel, North Sea, and in the Atlantic to points from 200 to 300 miles west of Ireland, where British convoys funnel in to make ports in the British Isles.

Of the submarines of the small type, at least one-third can be at sea at all times. The 800-ton type can be most of the time on station, provided the submarine bases chosen by Germany have been provided with the facilities of repair and upkeep to these vessels.

We know that Britain is using large numbers of antisubmarine vessels in convoy, and that some submarines are being sunk, so that all is not plain sailing for the Germans in attacking convoys. But just what toll is being taken is an admiralty secret. There is a reason for this. From the typical wreck of a submarine there are generally no survivors. The German personnel at home learns that such and such a submarine is missing. Many go out and never return, and this secrecy by the British is supposed to influence, adversely, the morale of the submarine service and cause the personnel to dread to leave port.

FOR THE FIRST eight months of the war the British gave out that 50 submarines had been sunk. Then no further reports of submarine sinkings were made. However, reports have leaked out from British personnel engaged in battles with the submarines that on one day recently three submarines were known to have been sunk by destroyers guarding a convoy in the Atlantic. Two were sunk by depth charges and one was rammed. From two of the submarines there were no survivors, while from the third 5 officers and 30 men were taken prisoners. In this latter sinking an ace submarine captain, who had been credited with several hundred thousand tons of merchant ships sunk, was captured. Experienced submarine men like this one are valuable to Germany, and it is upon them that Germany counts to bolster the morale of her submarine crews. Their loss is a great blow to the German navy.

The admiralty announced that up to May, 1941, 450 prisoners were taken from submarines. It is thus possible to piece together a fairly accurate estimate of the number of sunken submarines these prisoners represent. World War records show that no survivors were taken from about 70 per cent of submarines sunk.

Of the remaining 30 per cent the survivors averaged about 15 men per submarine.

USING THIS data, the 450 prisoners might represent 30 vessels. But these 30 vessels are only 30 per cent of a total sunk. Therefore, since the beginning of the war to last May, there may have been 100 German submarines destroyed.

When war broke out, Germany was said to have had 120 submarines, with 180 building. Germany must have completed most of these 180 by this time. This does not mean, of course, that Germany has 300 submarines available. Taking all factors into consideration the actual number probably is between 150 and 200.

It is likely that five a month at least are being sunk, in which case the sinkings are about keeping up with the production of submarines.

The task of Britain on the sea is to make the sinkings greater than Germany's capability of producing submarines; only then can daylight be seen in the Battle of the Atlantic.

The bombing of submarine bases is not gaining a commensurate toll on submarines. The German submarine bases are provided with bomb-proof shelters for these valuable assets. Therefore, it would seem wiser for the R. A. F. bombing planes to extend their operations against submarines at sea and not waste bombs on sheltered submarines in port. Most of the sinkings have been done at sea and that is where the greatest effort should be made.

Hitler Of The Tropics

By Joseph Driscoll

Ousted By Cooperating Ins And Outs

Another article by a member of the New York Herald Tribune staff who has returned from investigating conditions in Panama.

PEOPLE ASK: "Is President de la Guardia of Panama, anything like Mayor LaGuardia of New York?"

The answer is yes and no. Both men have Latin blood: Spanish in the case of the President. Italian in the case of the mayor. President la Guardia has a reputation for being a good administrator, for being incorruptible and for being stubborn, once his mind is made up. On the other hand, he lacks the fire and color and dynamic personality of New York's mayor.

Panama's most colorful personality is not De la Guardia, but Don Pancho Arias, a friend of the United States, who is no relation to and would not like to be confused with the little Hitler of the tropics, Arnulfo Arias, who was recently ousted as President after incurring the displeasure of Uncle Sam and his own colleagues. Don Pancho is leader of the loyal opposition in the present government headed by Ricardo Adolfo de la Guardia. In Panama the conservatives and liberals have split into ten parties. President de la Guardia is a conservative and Don Pancho is the most important liberal leader.

DON PANCHO would be a sensation in New York politics. Don Pancho is as stylish, as sympatico, as insouciant as was Jimmy Walker in his heydey. Stocky, square-jawed, bright-eyed, keen-minded, Don Pancho is regarded by his friends as "the best dam' caballero in all Panama."

An aristocrat and a scholar, independently wealthy and member of one of the most distinguished families, Don Pancho wears spotless white silk suits, dark blue silk shirts and rakish Panama hats, and drives like mad the latest model convertible coupe, painted an apple green and equipped with radio and all the gadgets. For this "suicide car," as he laughingly calls it, Don Pancho gladly paid the American price, plus the cost of transportation and 15 per cent ad valorem taxes. Everybody in Panama recognizes Don Pancho as he speeds down a narrow city street or a twisting country lane, gesturing freely with his right hand and swinging the wheel with his left. The barefoot peasants salute Don Pancho and he salutes right back, being nothing if not democratic.

Don Pancho was one of the intellectual authors of the coup d'etat that drove Arnulfo Arias from the presidencia into exile. Fellow conspirators in the good cause of Pan-Americanism included Dr. Augusto Boyd, former President; the latter's brother-in-law, President de la Guardia; Col. Manuel Pino, minister of public works, and Dr. Rios, Minister to Peru.

THE DECISION that President Arnulfo Arias must go was reached five months ago on the following grounds:

1. The Arias anti-American, pro-Axis policy was dangerous and would harm the best interests of Panama.

2. Arnulfo Arias was going crazy or mad with power. He was trying to convert a democracy into a dictatorship over night. He had a passion for putting Panamanians into uniforms or into jails; a zeal for interfering in private business and creating federal monopolies, for raising taxes, graft and the cost of living simultaneously. His once sharp mind was now subject to blanks and blackouts in which he would act recklessly without consulting his cabinet. He would call a cabinet meeting and dismiss the ministers imperiously without transacting any business.

Arias must go, but how? That was the question. Overconfident, arrogant Arnulfo supplied the answer by leaving his country without obtaining the permission of either the General Assembly or the Supreme Court, as required by Panama's constitution.

As soon as the news leaked out that the philandering President, traveling incognito as "A Madrid," had flown to Cuba to pursue a lady love, the conspirators realized their hour had come. Arnulfo Arias, boastful as he was that he would be President for life, must have sensed that plottings were afoot, but he never dreamed that underlings and outsiders would dare to risk their necks against their Hitler of the Isthmus. But they did, and, by a coincidence, they moved at a time when one of their number, Dr. Rios, was on post in Peru and another, Don Pancho Arias, was visiting a married daughter in that same country.

Had it not been for his filial visit, Don Pancho would have been home in Panama City to protect his equity in the coup d'etat and perhaps to become President himself, or, since he likes political office not for himself but only for his friends, Don Pancho might have put Dr. Rios into the Presidencia.

The United States has one Vice President. In Panama they order things better; they have three. What had happened was this:

The benevolent conspirators met at the town house of Dr. Boyd and progressed to that of swarthy, half-pint-sized Col. Pino, former police chief and a man of action. They voted Arnulfo Arias out of the Presidency, which then devolved upon the First Vice President, Jose Pezet, minister of education. However, they passed over Pezet for being missing at the time. (Actually he could have been found easily in the Panama City jail, as they well knew, since they had clapped him there on purpose.) The Third Vice President, Dr. Rios, also was passed over on the ground that he was absent from the country and without bothering to await his return from his Lima post of duty. With two Vice Presidents thus disposed of the Presidency went to the Second Vice President, Ernesto Jaen Guardia, who held the office only long enough to organize a new cabinet and to resign in favor of Ricardo Adolfo de la Guardia, elected by the new cabinet. After which former President Guardia was designated Minister to Washington.

THERE MAY yet be trouble over the succession to the Presidency, although the Supreme Court has ruled it constitutional. Dr. Rios sulks in Lima because he feels his constitutional right as Third Vice President was evaded. He has spurned the government's demand that he return home and resign. He fears that if he does return he is more likely to adorn the prison than the Presidencia.

Don Pancho, a fighting man among Panamanians, who are not a militant race, is still fighting and achieving results. He is so glad to see Arnulfo Arias out of the Presidency and Panama getting back to normal that he is almost willing to forget that he, one of the intellectual authors of the bloodless revolution, was not consulted about picking President de la Guardia.

Of course, Don Pancho bears no grudges and is on friendly terms with the new Chief Executive. Don Pancho respects De la Guardia as a man of integrity who was able to keep his skirts clean while associated with Arnulfo Arias.

Already Don Pancho has persuaded President de la Guardia to do a number of things, among them to pardon scores of political offenders who were fined, jailed, had their property expropriated or had to flee to the mountains of Peru. Don Pancho, jailed several times for his political opinions, was among those granted clemency. Not that it mattered to him, for the indomitable Don Pancho, facing a political trial in the future, never intended to attend court anyway. He is a busy man, and he has bigger fish to fry. He is a man to be looked out for as the struggle for power in Panama progresses.

If The Duke And Duchess Were Candid

Q. (of the Duke).—What do you think of America?

A. It's one of the greatest camera centers I ever saw.

Q. You came here once before, did you not?

A. Yes, but I didn't know enough to let it teach me a lesson.

Q. Has the country changed?

A. Oh, yes. The flashlights are much more constant.

Q. Are you and the duchess happy?

A. We were up to the time we got these typical American welcomes.

Q. How does it seem to be, in a a manner of speaking, back in private life?

A. If mine is a private life those Radio City penguins are isolationists.

Q. Did you like New York?

A. My view has been too obstructed to tell.

* * * *

Q. Would you mind telling the press what you had for lunch?

A. Why?

Q. The American public would like to know.

A. The duchess had scrambled eggs. I had toast and tea.

Q. May we quote you on that?

A. No! Just say credit it to a spokesman.

Q. Do you sleep on your left side or right side?

A. You newspapermen and photographers don't let me sleep on any side.

* * * *

Q. What do you think of American girls as compared to British girls?

A. That question was all right when I was single but you should know better than to ask it now.

* * * *

Q. Have you been in our subways?

A. No, but the duchess and I are sure there must be more privacy and comfort down there than up here.

Q. (to the duchess).—Are you glad to be back in your native land?

A. —Yes indeed.

Q. Has it changed much?

A. Yes. When I lived here the newsreel cameramen hadn't taken over the country.

Q. How do you like Nassau?

* * * *

Q. (to the duke).—Your Highness, do you wish to say whether you think Mr. LaGuardia or Mr. O'Dwyer would make the better Mayor of New York?

A. I think Roosevelt is handling the job well enough.

Q. Mayor LaGuardia recently said that you would make a fine mayor yourself. What about it?

A. I get around a lot, but not that much!

Hitler's Propaganda Hits America

OUR GREAT TROUBLE to date in this war is that too many Americans have been swindled out of their sense by Adolf Hitler's propaganda and therefore cast about for someone else to blame for every tragedy and inconvenience that befalls the American people and for the economic change, whatever form it may take, which will surely be the result of all our spending in the fight against him.

PEGLER

President Roosevelt didn't start this war but tried to talk Hitler out of his plain determination to start it. The British and French humiliated themselves repeatedly in their efforts to placate Hitler and induce him to be nice. Wendell Willkie had no part in making the war. He hadn't even been heard of outside his own limited circles when the war was making, or up to the assault on Poland. Nobody but Hitler and Stalin wanted the war, and Hitler was the one who was determined to have it, and touch it off as soon as he got Stalin's permission. Hitler had proclaimed his intention to establish the Germans as a super race of warriors and bosses who would live ever after on the toil of inferior peoples, and the same effort that he expended on the creation of the military machine which now serves him would have made Germany the most comfortable country on earth and, in the material sense, the most enviable. But he didn't want that. He wanted war and conquest and slaves.

Yet there are Americans who blame the Treaty of Versailles, the reparations bill, the British and French, the President of the United States, the impotent, degraded, persecuted, destitute Jews, and, some of them, even some mysterious spots on the sun, rather than recognize the plain, inescapable fact that this war is just another rampage of an anti-social nation which has kept the entire world in almost constant turmoil for more than 27 years. The Treaty of Versailles was the best peace that the empowered leaders of the victorious nations could devise by agreement, and the document's worst fault was its mistaken generosity to a vicious marauder whose own intention in the event of victory was to enslave Belgium and Holland, take over Northern France under a political protectorate and push over into Russia and down the Balkans according to a plan now revived and executed by Hitler. The Germans paid no reparations worth the mention, but stole incalculable amounts of foreign money invested in the country in good faith on the faulty assumption that the German veneer of civilization and manners indicated reasonably honest character. And if Germany hungered a while after the last Armistice, a matter of bitter yowling and self-sympathy for years, so did millions of other unfortunates in other lands who had no guilt in making the first war and thus certainly had first call on the food supplies of the world and the facilities for shipping the same. The damage for what the Germans were asked to pay, but never did pay, wasn't all military wear and tear. They had looted wherever they went, and any machinery they couldn't ship home as loot from the factories of conquered countries they wantonly destroyed so that France, for example, would be unable to get started again if France should win.

Certainly the British persecuted the Irish, and all the nations who staked out claims in Africa maltreated the natives, and certainly the United States double-crossed, deported and, in all possible ways, disgraced the white race in all our dealings with the native American Indians who, by all rights, owned the country. But if the British must expiate or undo their persecutions of the Irish and all the wrongs against the African savage must be righted before we may today recognize the atrocious peril of Adolf Hitler, then also we ought to give every inch of this country back to the Indians, complete with all modern improvements erected on land that wasn't ours, and accept such status as the few remaining authentic Indians care to grant us out of the goodness of their forgiving hearts.

Unless we want to backtrack that far and, perhaps, according to the letter of the law, restore the United States to the condition in which the white man found it, we must waive all other objections of the same sort and recognize the fact that right now, today, the enemy of the United States is Hitler and that every sacrifice that we are making has been imposed on the United States by him. The loss of time and opportunity offered by the soldiers, the disruption of personal domestic life, the multiple individual economic disasters suffered by little business and laid-off workers, the losses of homes and the loss of life, which in the end may amount to some horrifying total, are and will be all and entirely Hitler's doing, for he is the enemy who thought to conquer our world and degrade the American people and Nation.

It is wrong, pathetic and dishonest to blame any of this on the President of our own country, who would indeed have been a traitor or a culpable fool had he failed to recognize the enemy and accept the challenge.

Scientific Drill Will Take Off Those Humps

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU could be sure that a few daily twists and turns would really do lovely things for your figure, wouldn't you be able to overcome your aversion to exercise? Well, here's a promise: You can have as good a figure as any screen star.

Just as a conservative estimate, you can whittle one-half inch off your waistline in seven days, and the same amount off your hips in double that time. Of course, if you are ready and willing to work, you could do better.

Stretching, Twisting

The exact movements that will take inches off the waistline are stretching, twisting and sideward bending. The twist and bend must be concentrated at the waist, and that means keeping either your shoulders or your hips squarely to the front. One good way to anchor the hips is to stand with the back of hips pressed against a table, have a rod back of the shoulders and supported in the crook of the elbows, and then twist. Both shoulders and hips are immobile, so your waist gets the full effect of this exercise.

A less strenuous but almost as effective exercise is to stretch up the arms, hands clasped high overhead, and, holding hips still, circle the trunk.

When it is the midsection, and particularly the abdomen, that needs better muscle tone, pull up and in with the lower abdominal wall. The emphasis should be on the upstretch, rather than the inward pull. Sit on the floor with the back to the wall and as straight as you can get it. Sitting in this position for a few minutes every day will gradually strengthen your abdominal muscles and help you to a naturally flat front line.

Keep Knees Straight

For shearing inches off the hips, the best type of exercise is leg swinging, forward and backward from the hip. Keep the knee straight and swing high to reach the gluteous maximus muscles on the backs of the hips. Or, roll. Rolling is a form of massage and excellent for giving you smooth lines. Lie on your back on the floor hands out and down at the sides, and head and feet held clear of the floor as you roll from side to side.

The super arm and shoulder exercises are those in which arms are circled backward from the shoulders, elbows straight. This position brings into action the triceps muscles on the backs of the upper arms and firms these areas. Also, it tones the pectorals which supports the bust. Toning the pectoral muscles tends to raise the bust to a lovelier line.

Mirrors With Purpose

Large mirrors are being used today. They must be used architecturally to give effect of space and more light. They may be hung at the end of the hall, over fireplace and as panels. With mahogany furniture use mahogany frames on the mirrors. Frameless pictures are of the modern trend and go with contemporary furniture. Let mirrors serve a definite purpose; reflect something interesting and

Fringe for Evening

Fringe, beloved since the days of the early Assyrians, decorates the slim as a sheath white crepe dress above. It is worn by Miss Eleanor Phillips, daughter of Col. and Mrs. W. S. Phillips, who is one of the models in the benefit fashion show for the United Service Organizations, to be given this afternoon at Fort Myer, with the clothes from a local store. Wives and daughters of Army, Navy or Marines will serve as models. This gown, as well as the Russian ermine hip-length cape, will be worn in the show.

Shortages Need Not Destroy Home Comfort

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THERE'S no virtue in deciding to be abstemious in the present emergency, for business must go on as usual so far as that's possible . . . so that men can keep their jobs and industry won't be completely disorganized. Therefore, the homemaker's role is not to curtail her buying, but to be lenient about shortages and content with what the stores have on hand rather than petulant about what they don't have. For inevitably there will be a smaller selection of merchandise than we're accustomed to . . . but it would still look abundant to the Europeans right now.

But within the present limitations, there is still margin for plenty of charm, as a recent exhibition of new interiors proved. These rooms illustrated the present trend toward livable, homey decoration . . . there was no froth and little elegance, but plenty of fine comfort and a forthright distinction.

Scenic Wallpaper In Entrance Hall

The entrance hall, in mist blue and terra cotta, had panels of scenic wallpaper of Mississippi River scenes, while the chairs were covered in terra cotta glazed leather. A small library with yellow walls and a light beige shaggy carpeting had eighteenth century mahogany furniture, blue and white homespun upholstery and an interesting collection of framed bird prints.

In the living room an Oriental rug was the beloved possession around which the room was planned—the walls and woodwork were painted in a grey-beige, the draperies were in a striped brown and beige satin. In the dining room some Chinese patterned scenic panels were used for the walls with soft green woodwork, a green carpet, white novelty rayon draperies and chairs covered in lemon yellow matelasse.

Mahogany Furniture For Master Bedroom

The master bedroom had colonial mahogany furniture, walls of beige and blue striped paper, a crochet-type hooked rug in blues and beiges, a camellia patterned chintz in rose and pink on white for upholstered bed, spreads and draperies, beige damask for two easy chairs. A bedroom for two little sisters had a garden patterned wallpaper on a white ground, light green rug, plaid chintz for curtains and chairs, white muslin spreads, maple furniture.

A young girl's room had yellow painted walls, a yellow grey and white braided rug, yellow silk curtains, yellow flowered chintz for headboards and spreads of bed, dressing table and chair. French provincial furniture in butternut wood. A young man's room had beige walls, blue broadloom rug, plaid textural draperies and chairs, a brick red homespun bedspread, bleached modern furniture.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Registered Nurse, With 25 Years' Experience In Pediatric and Obstetric Work, Says Parental Neglect Breeds "Problem Behavior" in Youngsters

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It is with keen interest I follow your correspondence with readers of The Post. I like the highly intelligent way in which you handle the problems of your many clients. Sometimes I find your pronouncements a bit hard; and again, other times, a bit easy. But on the whole, I consider your department immeasurably helpful to everyone.

Although I have often had an impulse to contribute my opinions concerning one case or another, I have heretofore refrained, realizing that unsolicited correspondence is an added burden to any writer. But the "child behavior" problem of Bobby, aged 3, discussed in your column of October 27, went straight to my heart, and I trust you will accept my remarks in the friendly spirit they are offered.

I am a graduate nurse who spent many years in pediatric and obstetric nursing, and my policy was always to keep a "middle of the road" policy in child training. For a quarter of a century, I have helped solve problems of small Bobbys and Bettys—and, although I am now forced into retirement by progressive deafness, my children-by-proxy are many, and they still come back to me for help in guiding their youngsters.

But to return to the case stated in your column of October 27: The grandmother of a 3-year-old boy asks how to keep him quietly abed before breakfast and after supper so that his hard-working young parents may rest. In my opinion, it is neither the parents nor the grandparent who most need help, but the child himself. His neglected needs constitute the very crux of the problem.

I wish you had told your readers, first of all, that young people have no right to parenthood until they are ready—physically, spiritually and economically—to bear and rear children. The Bobby in this case owes his parents nothing (at his age). They owe him everything. (Am I right or wrong?) If young people will marry and have babies, and will thereafter concentrate on work outside the home, they should employ either a trained nurse, or a highly intelligent woman, to supervise the children's care. The next-best alternative is a day nursery or nursery school.

You are right in saying that the child in question behaves in a "normal" or "average" way in expressing himself in action when awake. There would be no problem if the parents would only give the child their wholehearted consideration. The grandmother has asked, on their behalf, for "good books on child training to read." However, such books usually do not treat the subject from a practical point of view. Those I have read dealt chiefly with ultramodern theories of "psychological" management and these theories are suitable for application only in schools or institutions where trained nurses and teachers are in charge. I have observed that most young mothers who attempt to employ such theories in the home end up by following the line of least resistance.

But more about Bobby: His health care should be supervised by a good pediatrician, which would mean that his diet is right. His daily routine should be as follows: Up at 6:30 or 7 a. m., for a visit to the toilet. Then, into his bathrobe, to have his orange juice. After that, dressed by his mother or nurse, who, having finished her own dressing, prepares hot breakfast for the family, in which Bobby is included. He should have breakfast with his parents, in order to learn table manners at a slow pace.

Outdoor exercise between 9 and 11 a. m., followed by bath, luncheon and nap. He should be fast asleep by 1 p. m., and never under any circumstances allowed to sleep past 3 p. m. I should be inclined to waken him earlier, until he establishes a good habit of falling asleep quickly for the night. From 3 to 5 p. m. he should be out of doors; then supper at 5:30, and ready for bed by 6:30 p. m. Following such a regime, the average child will go to sleep promptly after being tucked in. The very young child should have a last visit to the toilet when his parents retire—and, if quietly handled, he will go to sleep instantly again.

It is deplorable that Bobby's parents prefer to be unmolested by him, when at home. I know parents who go to business (and New Yorkers at that) who would not for anything miss intimate little visits with their babies in the morning. They count such visits well spent—and wise parents they are! I wish Bobby's parents belonged to this school of thought.

I suggest that they take turns getting up with him in the mornings. I consider this preferable to giving him toys to play with in bed, while waiting his parents' convenience in the matter of having his morning needs attended to. The practice of "amusing" children, for the supposed purpose of diverting their thoughts from their physical discomfort, is popular with many nursemaids and thoughtless parents—but, in my opinion, it is always a mistake and may be harmful, in some measure, to the child's development.

"Grandmother" mentions that Bobby's parents are thinking of "tying" him in his crib, after supper. You suggest (with some hesitancy) a sleeping bag as possibly the best method of anchoring him for the night. In my opinion, this contrivance is hardly suitable for a child of Bobby's age—but there is a very nice "crib harness" which answers the purpose admirably. It is made of heavy tape, and is washable. (I always made them for my "babies."

I must ask your pardon for this lengthy contribution—but, since you are a mother, perhaps you will understand the feelings which prompt it. Now that my "children" are nearly all grown, I feel a special tenderness toward childhood in general. In conclusion, you have my best wishes, and I beg you to think of me as one of your most interested readers, who simply had to "speak up" once. Cordially, R. N.

New Suit Called 'Secretary's Dream'

Into the well-dressed business girl's wardrobe has come a new type of suit, best described, perhaps, as "the secretary's dream."

It has been designed by Edith Head, Paramount stylist, for the film wardrobe of Margaret Hayes, who plays the role of a secretary in a coming picture.

It is a suit of bright navy blue wool, with slim, straight skirt and single-breasted cross-neckline jacket, that meets the needs of the office, the shopping tour and the cocktail hour. Made with concealed pique collar and cuffs. For shopping, a snap-on leopard collar, matched by a leopard muff, created a second ensemble. Worn plain, with three golden arrows pinned 'round the collar, the suit makes a picture at a cocktail party.

Eat Vitamins For Beauty

WEARINESS, tense nerves—these put a mask of hard tired lines across your face. How you can lift that mask, feel young and vital again, is part of the story of vitamins!

Vitamins were discovered not very long ago. Scientists, who are continually experimenting in foods and diets, had been plagued for years by such questions as these.

Why are people in the tropics bursting with health and energy on a diet of fruits and vegetables? Why do Eskimos thrive living largely on a diet of fish and game? The vitamins in their foods were found to be the answer.

You need not live on fish or vegetables, of course, to avoid fatigue, "nerves" or other ills resulting from vitamin deficiency. Ordinary American foods will give you your share of vitamins. Just choose those which have enough.

Vitamin B, which is so necessary to energy and steady nerves, is abundant in whole wheat bread, in milk, lean pork, chicken and liver. It's found also in fruits and vegetables, especially lima beans.

If you have colds you may need more Vitamin A, generously provided by all green and yellow fruits and vegetables. Or, if you have dental and skin troubles, you perhaps lack enough of C. D. and G.

Besides knowing what foods contain these vitamins you want also to know how to retain vitamins in cooking. Use little water, cook no longer than necessary and then, to get all the vitamins, keep the water for soups and sauces.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Vitamins for Health and Beauty," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

'Ghost Diplomats' Play Important Roles Here

Many Envoys Doing Phenomenal Work, Though Their Countries Are Nazi-Dominated

By Hope Ridings Miller

"When is a ghost not a ghost?" was a question I heard the other day across a Washington tea table. Sounded interesting. I leaned forward to hear the answer, and presently it came from the same person who had propounded the question.

Hope Ridings Miller

"A ghost is not a ghost," he went on, "when he's a 'ghost diplomat' in Capital conversation."

The speaker was an envoy from a European country now under Nazi control. Yet his government, functioning from headquarters in London, is playing a more important role in the international picture than ever before. The envoy himself is doing phenomenal wartime work in this country, and he is, therefore, slightly resentful at being considered nothing more than a shade—even though a diplomatic one. "If I am a ghost," he concluded with a chuckle, "I'm a mighty busy one."

His comments paved the way for a lengthy pro-and-con discussion, and before it was finished a good many so-called diplomatic ghosts had materialized in record time. Within a quarter of an hour envoys of Denmark, Norway, Holland, France, Yugoslavia and Greece had "come to life" after somebody had pointed out the type of first-rate job each one was accomplishing under extremely difficult conditions.

It was mentioned that the Norwegian Legation had enlarged its staff in recent months and was carrying on an enormous volume of work in this country. Norwegian Minister Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne arrived in New York on the Yankee Clipper Sunday afternoon and returned to Washington last night after five weeks in London, where he went for conferences with his government-in-exile.

Incidentally, no sooner had the minister set foot on American soil than he gave an interview pointing out that of the four Scandinavian countries, "Norway is the only one fighting on the right side."

Dutch Minister Going West

Minister Henrik de Kaufmann, of Denmark, another so-called "diplomatic ghost," was instrumental not long ago in helping the United States to obtain military and air bases in Greenland. The Netherlands Minister, Dr. Alexander Loudon, has turned the entire Netherlands Legation into offices—and moved his family to another residence—in order to have enough room to handle the enormous volume of business of the Dutch Empire. And the envoy himself has visited virtually every State in the Union to explain what the Dutch are doing to help the cause of the Allies.

Dr. Loudon, who has been in New York recently to attend the International Labor Conference, will leave there today, accompanied by Mme. Loudon, for Minneapolis, where he is scheduled for a number of speeches. Before returning to Washington on November 9 he will also make a couple of speeches in St. Paul; will be entertained at a number of dinners and luncheons given by organizations in the two cities, and will attend as guest of Gov. Stassen the Minnesota-Nebraska football game.

Back to the other "ghosts"—hardly in the realm of apparition, shades, or what-have-you, are members of the French Embassy staff, or representatives of the Free French forces, who seem to make front-page headlines with amazing regularity. The two staffs are, of course, not to be confused—as they were by a number of Washingtonians recently when some 80 telephone calls were received at the French Embassy inquiring if a "Free French" rally was being held there!

Yugoslav Minister Has Full Schedule

Yugoslav Minister Fotitch has hardly had a breathing spell from speech-making since his country was invaded. In fact, a good many persons who knew little about his homeland a year ago have been exposed to a liberal education, with a Yugoslav accent, in the past few months.

Members of the Greek Legation, headed by Minister Cimon P. Diamantopoulos, are full speed ahead with plans for the forthcoming visit of King George of Greece. Just when the latter will be here, nobody seems to know, but he is expected to arrive within the next few weeks. Meanwhile, Washingtonians by the dozens have been leaving cards at the Greek Legation the past few days.

Here and There Dept.: Here's news that should stifle a rumor making the regular rounds in Washington. Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg will spend Thanksgiving in New York with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Pfeiffer, the latter of whom is the former Betty Vandenberg, daughter of the Senator. Mrs. Vandenberg, who remained in Grand Rapids when the Senator returned to Washington several weeks ago, will start eastward on November 13, and after the visit in New York will come on to Washington to stay until after the holidays . . . Several Capitalites will find the forthcoming issue of Vogue magazine especially interesting. Included therein will be some choice candid camera shots of celebrities attending a recent "opening night" at the National Theater. Pictures of the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Danish Minister and Mme. de Kaufmann, and Mrs. Davies Walker are among those scheduled to appear . . . Reports around town that five newspapermen helped Helen Lombard write "Washington Waltz" are grossly exaggerated. Only two persons lent a hand—Constantine Brown, who assisted in organizing the material, and George Matthew Adams, jr., who edited the book.

Youngsters Win Guests at Tea

Two youngsters stole the show yesterday afternoon when Mrs. George Strawbridge was hostess at tea for members of the Fight for Freedom Committee, at her home on Kalorama Road. George, who is 4, and Diana, who is all of 2, were allowed to come in for only a short time, but made themselves the most popular guests for all that.

Assisting Mrs. Strawbridge was Mrs. Thomas Claggett, who poured. Among those who dropped in for a chat were Mrs. Albert Dewey, Mrs. Leon Henderson, Mrs. Henry Gwynn, Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, Mrs. Michael Straight, Mrs. Albert Friendly, and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim. Mrs. Clarence Goodwin, chairman of the committee, also was there.

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt has accepted the office of honorary chairman for the committee's patriotic revue, "It's Fun to Be Free," b Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, which will be presented at the Uline Arena. Vice President and Mrs. Wallace will attend the pageant as guests of the Donald Richbergs.

Among the boxholders are Senator and Mrs. Carter Glass, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. Elizabeth Whitney, Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim, Mrs. James Strawbridge, Judge and Mrs. Goodwin, Maj. and Mrs. Brooke Lee, Mrs. A. F. Fried, Rabbi and Mrs. Gerstenfeld, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wood Bliss, Mrs. James Stotesbury and Mrs. Frank Morrow.

Panama's New Envoy Is Host

Panama's independence anniversary was celebrated informally here yesterday. Since the new Ambassador, Ernesto Jaen Guardia, who has just arrived in Washington, has not had time to present his credentials, he is not officially here, and no formal entertaining could be planned. Then, too, his wife, Senora de Guardia, has not yet arrived in the Capital.

However, yesterday afternoon, between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock, the Ambassador held "open house" informally for the members of the Panamanian colony here, and for Panamanian students now in the Capital. Assisting him in receiving were Senora de Briceno, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, and Senorita Anita Ramirez-Duque, Attache of the Embassy.

Miss Adele Bunker Visits in Capital

Miss Adele Bunker, of New York, daughter of Arthur J. Bunker, is visiting in Washington and is the house guest of Miss Mary Parker and the latter's mother, Mrs. John Scott Parker, of Chevy Chase.

Miss Bunker is the daughter of Signora Rosso, wife of the former Italian envoy to Moscow and at one time Italian Ambassador to this country.

Aids 'All-American' Benefit

Underwood and Underwood.

Mrs. Leonard Townsend Gerow, wife of Brig. Gen. Gerow, chief of the War Plans Division of the Army, is chairman of the fashion show which will take place this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the post headquarters at Fort Myer, Va. An "All-American" show, it will feature American fashions by American designers, and proceeds will be used for the benefit of the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Club. Glamourous Ilka Chase will be commentator for the event and Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the chief of staff, will give a tea at the chief of staff's quarters following the show, for all the audience. Tickets are now on sale at all the leading hotels.

Mrs. Roosevelt Faces Crowded Week Schedule

Mrs. Roosevelt, who by her own statement, "practically lives in an airplane these days," has her usual crowded schedule planned for the next week or so. She is at Hyde Park for the elections today. Tomorrow and Thursday will find her in New York, where she will speak for the Town Hall Club. Tomorrow night she will be in Elizabeth, N. J.

Friday will find the First Lady back at the White House, where she will entertain at tea at 4 o'clock for a group of people whom she hopes to interest in the International Students Service work. This organization, which hepls refugee students and Latin American students, has recently been working with American students on campuses to aid them in developing a knowledge of democracy.

Saturday Mrs. Roosevelt will attend a meeting here of the National Women's Organization for Civilian defense. On Sunday she will speak for ORT, an organization formed for the furtherance of Jewish agricultural interests. The following day, Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt will attend a meeting of the Rosenwald Fund group which has as its interest the education of the Negro and, in some parts of the country, education of white people, also.

Monday night Mrs. Roosevelt will again speak in New York, Tuesday she will be in Detroit, Wednesday in Cincinnati and so on in usual First Lady form.

Miss Jane Nichols Is Engaged to Walter H. Page, 2d

Of wide interest in Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. George Nichols, of New York, of the engagement of their elder daughter, Miss Jane Norton Nichols, to Walter H. Page 2d, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Page, of Huntington, Long Island. Mr. Page is a grandson of Mrs. Walter Hines Page, of Boston, and the late Mr. Page, who was United States Ambassador to Great Britain during the World War.

Miss Nichols is a granddaughter of J. P. Morgan and the late Mrs. Morgan, who was Miss Jane N. Grew, of Boston. Her mother is the former Miss Jane N. Morgan. On the paternal side she is a granddaughter of Mrs. John W. T. Nichols, of New York, and the late Mr. Nichols. She was graduated from the Chapin School in New York and Bryn Mawr College.

Luncheon to Honor Mrs. Keyes And Birth of Her 19th Book

Frances Parkinson Keyes, whose nineteenth book, "All That Glitters"—a novel of Washington—has just been published, will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Wade H. Ellis at the Sulgrave Club on Friday. The event will follow Mrs. O. W. McNeese's review of the book, which is being widely read here.

Mrs. Ellis is among those mentioned in the "author's note," which makes up the final chapter of the book. Says Mrs. Keyes: "The term 'high particular' to designate the object of one's affections was new to me until I heard it used by my friend, Mrs. Wade Ellis."

The book is dedicated to Evelyn Dixon Dillard (Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard) "whose kindness has helped me keep on believing that while all that glitters is not gold there is after all much real gold still left in the world."

Set in Washington and including a variety of characters whose types are well known here, the book presents "the picture of Washington's evolution as old social dictates melt away and new ones triumphantly take their places." That is a quotation from the blurb, which also gives other interesting clews to the book contents as follows:

"Here, too, are the haughty dowagers who ruled Washington society with a rod of iron only to totter from their thrones, leaving their empty mansions to be turned into lodging houses or to be razed to the ground. Here are great heiresses whose fortunes have vanished in the depression, becoming social secretaries, enjoying vicarious triumphs and pretty revenges through the prerequisites of their positions. Here are the feted members of the Diplomatic Corps being gradually relegated to the background after the beginning of the Second World War when their presence becomes an embarrassment to the hostess."

Mrs. Keyes expects to leave later for New Orleans to spend some time gathering material for another book. Meanwhile, however, she and Mrs. Dillard are making plans for a wild game supper to be given at Mrs. Keyes' Alexandria home, Tradition, on Saturday, November 15. The invitations indicate that the fete is being arranged "in compliment to the collaborators in 'All That Glitters.'"

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

AMONG THE 50 riders who will make the opening meet at Piedmont Fox Hounds a colorful affair complete with pink coats and stylish riding attire this morning, will be Paul Mellon, who is spending ten days' leave at his home, Rokeby, near Upperville, with Mrs. Mellon and their small daughter.

Mr. Mellon, who volunteered for service in the Army about a year ago will leave shortly for Fort Riley, Kans., to join the Officers' Training School there for a three-month training course from which he will graduate as a second lieutenant in the Reserve Officers Corp. He will then serve on active duty with the Army for a year.

Mrs. Mellon and their daughter will leave soon for Kansas City, where they have taken a small house for the winter in order to be near Mr. Mellon. Almost every day since he has been in Virginia on leave, Mr. Mellon has been enjoying cub-hunting and will be riding one of his fine thoroughbred horses this morning when Piedmont Hounds go out.

The meet is to begin at 9 o'clock at Green Garden, the home of Mrs. William Fletcher and Mr. and Mrs. William G. Fletcher, jr., near Upperville. Piedmont Hunt, the oldest hunt in America, was started by the late Col Richard Dulany and has probably the most beautiful territory of any of the hunts in the country to gallop over. The rolling fields, all nicely fenced and panelled, wit hthe Blue Ridge Mountains as a backdrop, made it ideal for following hounds. A. C. Randolph is M. F. H.

A GOOD RAIN last week softened the ground and has made hunting conditions ideal. Other hunts meeting today are Old Dominion Hounds with Mrs. John A. Hinckley, M. F. H., which meets at the Kennels at 9, and Cobbler Hunt, which is meeting at Texas Gate at 9. Edmund Horgan and S. Prentice Porter are joint masters. Potomac Hunt will meet today at 1:45 p. m. at Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Horgan's home. Potomac did not go out on October 28 as planned on account of dry weather and hard ground, but Saturday they met at Cranford's Corner with about 22 riders in the field.

The opening of the duck shooting season yesterday saw the numerous clubs in Virginia and Maryland filled with sportsmen who will spend much time shooting before the season closes December 31. A popular meeting place for men from the "hunt country" is Jake's Duck Club on the Potomac near Widewater, Va., and among those who will be there from now on until the season is over are Frederick Haserick and Frank Doran, of Warrenton; Raymond Tartiere, Middleburg; Hubert Phipps, Rectortown; William H. Lipscomb, of Leesburg, and Dr. John Lyon, of Washington.

QUITE A FAMILY gathering resulted the past weekend when relatives and friends started arriving to see "Monk" as young Mr. Lyon is known to his friends. Arriving from Baltimore were Dr. and Mrs. Ferdenand Edme Chatard 4th—she was formerly Miss Connie Lyon, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Gleen Whitman, the latter being the former Miss Fanny Nelson Lyon. Mrs. Robert Bentley, of Pikesville, Md., Mr. Lyon's grandmother, motored to Virginia also for a visit. And with Miss Mary Owen Lyon, Miss Betty Lyon and Robert Lyon already at home, the family enjoyed a jolly time together.

A buffet supper party was given by Mr. and Mrs. George Benoit at their home, Snowden, near Fredericksburg. Arriving at 7 o'clock, the guests were served cocktails in the sun room and after a delicious dinner served from a long table, everyone went down to the "play room," where there was music for dancing—and the traditional Halloween decorations. The party was in honor of the Benoit's house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nichols, of New York. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Charles Lewis, Dr. and Mrs. George Alles, Dr. and Mrs. R. T. K. Cromwell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDonald Cowan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ruffin, Miss Irma Bell, Dr. Carter Rowe and others.

Leaving this week for training as a flying cadet at Parks Air College, St. Louis, Mo., will be Moncure Nelson Lyon, jr., who has been spending a few days' leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Moncure Nelson Lyon, at Black Oak Ridge, near Purcellville. He has been transferred from the 110th Field Artillery of Maryland, where he has been on duty for the past two years.

Capital Folk Hail Mrs. Bell In 'Junior Miss'

When "Junior Miss," that rollicking comedy of adolescents with problem parents, opened last evening at the National Theater, at least one couple in the enthusiastic audience were cheering on a member of the family. Barbara Robbins, the senior leading lady of the play is, in private life, Mrs. Robert Bell, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Charles J. Bell. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor (she is the former Miss Elsie M. Bell, niece of Mrs. Charles Bell) were present to give their little cousin a big hand, an example heartily followed by the rest of the audience.

Among the socialites who entertained before the opening was Mrs. Marion Warburg, who brought her dinner guests along for the play. Still others noted in the audience were Associate Justice and Mrs. William O. Douglas, the latter wearing a white cape over her black accordion-pleated frock; Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, whose velvet evening wrap matched her china blue eyes; Mrs. Frederic Atherton, Mrs. Amos A. Fries, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. James F. Byrnes and hundreds more.

Mrs. Ochs Leaves To Join Colonel At Camp Stewart

Mrs. Van Dyke Ochs, who has been visiting Col. ahd Mrs. Jess G. Boykin here for the past ten days, left last night to rejoin Col. Ochs at his station, Camp Stewart, Ga.

Col. and Mrs. Boykin will have another house guest in the next day or two. Mrs. Boykin's cousin, Mrs. Wilbur Elliott, will arrive here tomorrow or the next day for a brief visit from Fortress Monroe, Va., where Col. Elliott is stationed.

Leon Askin to Speak At Tea Here Today

A double role should not be too hard for a dramatic director to play. Leon Askin, director of the Washington Civic Theater, will find himself in one this afternoon, from 4 to 6, when he is guest of honor and main speaker at a tea in the Franklin Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

Also present at the tea will be Mr. and Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling. Mr. Walling is president of the Civic's board of governors. Miss Eileen Fowler, Mrs. James Whyte and Miss Evelyn Davis, faculty members of the Civic's Drama School, will assist, and Miss Grace Breiner Bradley, soprano, will sing a group of Shakespearean songs.

A group of about 40 English teachers and other educators from Washington schools and colleges is expected to hear Mr. Askin talk on the farcical strain in Shakespearian comedies, with special emphasis on "Troilus and Cressida," which will be the Civic's third production of the season, following Robert Ardrey's "Thunder Rock," which opens in the Wardman Park Theater tomornight.

Two Theater Groups Will Hear Sam Pearce

Sam Pearce of New York, will be heard in an informal talk on Richard Brinsley Sheridan's play, "The Rivals," at 4:30 p. m. Thursday before members of the theater Guild and the American Theater Society. The comedy is coming here soon with a distinguished cast directed by Miss Eva Le Gallienne.

Mr. Pearce, who has lectured a number of times for the theater Guild, is a popular speaker on the English classics of the stage and has played on Broadway with Maude Adams, Ethel Barrymore and Miss Le Gallienne. A Series of reproductions of rare old prints on colored slides will illustrate the talk.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., will entertain a large company at cocktails before the dinner. Her party will take place at her home, 2110 LeRoy Place. Also gathering in friends for cocktails will be Mrs. Frank West. The dinner will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

New York City Votes Today For Mayor

By Scott Hershey
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 3.—Slightly groggy from the hectic windup of a rough and tumble campaign, the city's voters were more than ready tonight to make their choice for mayor tomorrow between Fiorello H. LaGuardia, seeking a third term, and William O'Dwyer, the one-time Irish immigrant boy who is now Brooklyn district attorney.

Bitterness and name-calling marked the closing stages of the campaign, somewhat obscuring the issues. Most political observers believed the result would be close, although partisans on both sides claimed varying victory margins in last-minute statements.

The polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. (E. S. T.) and George J. Abrams, chief investigator of the Honest Ballot Association, said it was his personal belief the election would be "the stormiest since 1933," the year LaGuardia was first elected chief executive of the Nation's largest city.

President Reiterates Indorsement

There are 2,451,659 persons registered to name the man who will run the city for the next four years at a salary of $25,000 annually.

LaGuardia, Republican, American Labor, City Fusion and United City parties candidate, has the indorsement of President Roosevelt, Wendell L. Willkie and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey.

Mr. Roosevelt, who is virtually the only prominent Democrat not backing O'Dwyer, said at Hyde Park that there was not a vestige of truth in reports he had received that he had repudiated his indorsement of LaGuardia. He said he had received such word by telephone from two different sources.

Asked whether he cared to comment on the name-calling of the past week, the President replied in the negative and added that he had said he was taking no part in the campaign.

Active for O'Dwyer are National Chairman Edward J. Flynn, leader of the Bronx; State Chairman James A. Farley, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, Frank V. Kelly, Brooklyn leader, and Christopher Sullivan, leader of Tammany Hall.

The voters will elect also a city controller and president of the city council, as well as numerous borough and judicial officers. Proposals to eliminate the borough offices of sheriff and register in favor of city-wide officers for these posts also are on the ballot.

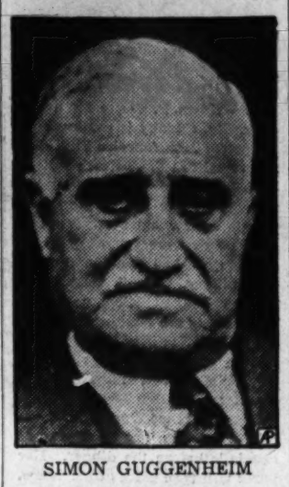
Forty-nine New York State cities will elect mayor.

Yale Club Elects

Charles G. Cooper has been elected president of the Yale Club of Washington, it was announced yesterday.

Other officers include H. W. Waldron Faulkner and Haven B. Page, vice presidents; Kent Legg, secretary; William W. Werntz, treasurer; Philip M. Fairbanks, assistant secretary, and Reeve Hoover, Gregory S. Prince, Justin Miller and John L. Newbold, directors.

Guggenheim, Ex-Senator, Dies at 73



SIMON GUGGENHEIM

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 3.—Simon Guggenheim, 73, former United States Senator from Colorado and internationally known philanthropist and indiustrialist, died last night in Mount Sinai Hospital.

Guggenheim and his brother Daniel, built up from their Colorado mining properties what was considered one of the world's largest mining and smelting industries.

He established many philanthropies, perhaps the best known of which was the John Simon Guggenheim Foundation, formed jointly with his wife in 1925 in memory of their son of that name.

The foundation provided a three million dollar endowment for United States and Latin American students to be used in advanced study at home or abroad in any of the sciences or fine arts.

Throughout Colorado Guggenheim provided extensive gifts for educational institutions and hospitals.

The former Senator died of pneumonia and complications shortly before midnight.

He served in the Senate for a six-year term beginning in 1907, then terminated 25 years' residence in Colorado to resume his affiliations with the mining and smelting concerns from which he had resigned upon his election.

Surgeon Fears New 'Dark Age'

Boston, Nov. 3.—Domination of Nazi influence throughout the world at the close of the war would mean a "recurrence of the dark ages" for education and science, Dr. Evarts A. Graham, of St. Louis, president of the American College of Surgeons, said tonight.

"The spirit of the Spanish inquisition would rear its ugly head again," he told the college's thirty-first congress.

"The atmosphere necessary for the growth of science and the spread of education would not exist. German surgery since Hitler came to power has been practically sterile."

And, regardless of the outcome of the war, he declared, unprecedented scientific advance made all over the world in the last two decades "is certain to be checked, if it has not already been . . ."

Already in the United States, declared Dr. Graham, defense-swollen taxes are reducing funds for research.

And, if a Nazi victory should force this country to remain on a war footing indefinitely, he said taxes would be correspondingly higher, contributions lower, with the result that "radical changes in the whole system of higher education and of the support of scientific research will probably be necessary."

Britain, U. S. Agree on Basis For a Free World Economy

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 3.—Eugene P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade Council, asserted today the United States and British governments were working in harmony toward the establishment of a future international economic order.

Referring to Article 4 of the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic Declaration, aimed at the enjoyment by all nations, on equal terms, of the trade and raw materials of the world, Thomas said:

"Virtual agreement on five basic points of policy was indicated in the messages sent to the recent national foreign trade convention by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, which were supplemented at the convention by Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, and by the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles."

Thomas summarized the present official views as follows:

1. Both governments hold that the freer flow of commerce across national boundaries is of vital force in promoting the well-being of individuals and of nations.

2. Therefore, discriminatory and excessive tariffs and other unreasonable trade barriers must be broken down by agreements among the leading trading nations opposed to Axis economic planning.

3. The governments of the United States and Great Britain will aim at the restoration of individual enterprise.

4. Complete understanding and cooperation in international commercial relations between the United States and Great Britain will be fostered after, as well as during, the present war.

5. The two governments consider that the present moment is the time to start building for the future international economic order.

An Earnest Young Fellow

Camp Davis, N. C.—The Army has lost it's "baby"—Prvivate Lonas L. Spitzer. He enlisted last April 1 in Knoxville, Tenn., and said he was over the minimum age limit—18. But, when he went to a hospital recently, he admitted he was only 14. His release was then ordered. His parting words:

"I'll be back just as soon as I finish high school."

Lessons as Usual

Armistice Day will be a holiday to the rest of Maryland but to the State's public school children it will be just another school day. Gov. O'Conor vetoed the bill providing for a school holiday, school officials explained. Patriotic exercises will be held in the schools.

Public Contracts Merger With Wage-Hour Rumored

A merger of the Wage and Hour Division and the Division of Public Contracts is being rumored at the Labor Department. The consolidation, it's reported, will take place after Brig. Gen. Philip Fleming is made Federal Works administrator. And it's now taken for granted that Fleming will be taken from Wage and Hours and be detailed by the President to FWA. Consolidation of the two divisions was recommended in a report several months ago by the House Appropriations Committee.

The Division of Public Contracts is seeking a deficiency appropriation of $116,000 to increase its inspection staff. It's possible that Congress will refuse the appropriation and order wage and hour inspectors to do the job of checking on working conditions in factories that have Government contracts of $10,000 and more.

Baird Snyder 3d, wage and hour deputy administrator, has potent support to succeed Fleming as administrator. Labor Secretary Francis Perkins, however, would make the appointment, and one of her favorites is L. Metcalfe Walling, who is chief of the Division of the Public Contracts. Organized labor can't agree on a man to fill the Wage and Hour job or on a person to head the merged divisions.

Reed Landis, son of Kenesaw Landis, the baseball czar, is an official in the Office of Civilian Defense . . . John Carmody, the ailing Federal Works boss, was to arrive in Puerto Rico today. Opposition has developed to his proposed appointment to the Maritime Comission and it may not go through, unless F. D. R. insists. It's argued that being a competent maritime commissioner in these times is plenty tough, and if Carmody isn't physically able to carry on at Federal Works that he'd crack just as quickly at Maritime . . . More than 450 United States housing employes yesterday took competitive promotion tests for junior and senior clerks jobs within the agency.

Moving Week at OPM

This will be moving week at the Office of Production Management. OPM is bursting at the seams—970 additional employes were hired during October and new workers are now being hired at the rate of 225 a week. More space just had to be found. Temporary Building E, the old World War 1 structure on the Mall, will be used to house the overflow for a few weeks. Among the divisions that will be moved into Building E this week are personnel, budget and planning, priorities and part of the administrative division.

A choice spot is being assigned to the Division of Information — the penthouse atop the new Social Security Building. Its only drawback is that you must walk up two flights. No elevator service. A lunch counter is now in the penthouse. The most undesirable OPM quarters . . . the old police headquarters . . . is being pawned off on the Division of Contract Distribution. And the employes of that division don't like it. Priorities employes now in the building will be moved to Temporary E.

A downtown clubhouse where Government girls could go for relaxation and entertainment is under consideration. A local woman's club is understood to be interested in underwriting such a project. Representativet of the club have talked over their idea with defense officials, who have given them encouragement. During World War 1 several clubs were established here for the thousands of new girls that were brought here to work for Uncle Sam. The proposed club would be similar to the USO clubs for soldiers.

Justice is trying to decide what can legally be done about its new personnel division, now that Congress has again refused funds for its operation. At stake are the jobs of Olive Palmer, personnel director; Robert Beers, employe relations chief, and Earl Gill, head of the classification and organization section . . . The new airport is in Washington, to the Post-office Department. It takes only a 2-cent stamp to mail a letter from the field to Washington. Virginia also claims the flying field . . . Federal Security wants $15,600 from Congress to hire additional lawyers to conduct Food and Drug hearings.

'It's Fun to Be Free'—and They're Not Kidding!

READY FOR CURTAIN CALL—The musical revue, "It's Fun to Be Free," a dramatization of the dangers threatening the American way, will be staged tonight at Uline Arena. Pictured last night at dress rehearsal were (at left) Mrs. R. E. Williamson, as Molly Pitcher and Phyllis Dorton, as Betsy Ross. Right—Gregory Robins, who portrays George Washington, puts the finishing touches on his make-up. The show is sponsored by the stage, screen, radio and arts division of Fight for Freedom, Inc.

Washington's "Fight for Freedom" committee announced last night that finishing touches had been made on the gala "It's Fun to Be Free" pageant expected to draw 8000 liberty-loving Americans tonight to Uline's Arena. But the sponsors were hiding something up their sleeve—a surprise. Wouldn't tell what it is. You'll have to go and see.

A score or more of stage and screen celebrities have already arrived for the affair. And Speakers Dorothy Thompson, columnist, and Ralph Ingersoll, New York newspaper publisher, will get in town today. Paul V. McNutt, Social Security administrator, will also address the huge gathering, and Vice President Henry A. Wallace told the committee he, too, will be on hand.

Several large blocks of tickets were purchased for the use of service men. Among the donors of these are Wendell Willkie, Evalyn Walsh McLean and Mrs. Cyrus McCormick.

John Burke, the No. 1 draftee of 1917, will be on the stage, sharing the spot with such theater stars as Burgess Meredith, Edward Matthews, Lou Holtz, Simone Simon, Martha Scott, Jessie Matthews, the Allisons and Fred Keating.

All will appear in a pageant written by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. It begins at 8:15 p. m.

Council Accepts Resignations From Pro-Lewis President And Vice President

The Industrial Union Council, assembly of C. I. O. unions here, last night accepted without comment the resignation of two pro-Lewis officers and then instructed its delegate to the national C. I. O. convention to fight for support of President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

Letters of resignation were received from Kathryn Lewis, council vice president and daughter of isolationist John L. Lewis, and Cecil Owen, council president and official of the United Construction Workers, whose chief is A. D. Lewis, brother of John, the United Mine Workers leader.

Both Miss Lewis and Owen excused themselves from council office because of increased work in their union posts, and neither they nor the council mentioned the question of isolation versus all out aid to the Allies.

Owen was president of the council for more than a year; and Miss Lewis was its delegate to the national convention last year. It is believed in C. I. O. circles that she will attend the Detroit convention November 17 as a delegate of United Mine Workers District No. 50, of which she is secretary-treasurer. The pro-Lewis forces, it is understood, may seek to have her elected secretary of the C. I. O. at this convention.

Miss Lewis has also resigned as head of the National C. I. O. Women's Auxiliary.

Sidney R. Katz, first vice president of the council and secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-District C. I. O., was elected delegate without a dissenting vote. He has long been a leading figure in the C. I. O. here. He switched from opposition to approval of the Administration's foreign policy shortly after Germany invaded Russia.

The council last night also voted to urge a peaceful settlement of the Currier case, in which a low-bidding C. I. O.-unionized builder was refused a Government contract by the OPM on the ground it might create a jurisdictional war with the American Federation of Labor.

In the interest of national unity, the council resolution read, a conference of all interested parties should be called and the problem solved by peaceful negotiation. This resolution was likewise unanimously adopted.

Other resolutions attacked discrimination against Negroes in defense work supported the United Federal Workers drive for one million members, and called for District suffrage.

A Sign of Shortage

NOT ENOUGH TO GO AROUND—On her way home from McKinley (Tech) High School yesterday, Marie Aue, 17, stopped to look at one of the new traffic signs banning parking during the rush hours. The ban goes into effect today, but will not be strictly enforced for some time because the traffic department doesn't have enough signs. The one shown is on Rhode Island Avenue at North Capitol Street.

Private Jobs Must Be Cut, Builders Told

Sullivan W. Jones, chief of the Defense Housing Division of OPM, yesterday warned that "because of defense priority needs, private construction must be materially reduced, if even to the vanishing point."

He addressed more than 200 members of the Washington Building Congress at their monthly luncheon at the Hotel Mayflower.

"There just aren't enough metals to go around," said Jones, "and first choice must go to Army and Navy requirements and to lend-lease supplies, being used to fight tyranny and aggression, and therefore fighting our battle.

"I fully realize," he went on, "that without metals, you cannot build a complete house. There is an acute shortage of copper right now, and we must find some substitute."

The OPM chief told the group that his agency is considering the use of glass pipes for plumbing purposes.

Jones advised the builders that the "Government will not guarantee deliveries of materials. All we can do is to assist you," he said.

"We must have the proper housing for defense workers," he stated, "and we are using a minimum amount of metals that will permit us to carry out our plans. That's all that we can promise."

Trade Board Favors Placing Airport in D.C.

Reversing a position adopted more than a year ago, the board of directors of the Washington Board of Trade yesterday voted to support long-pending steps to place the entire National Airport within boundaries of the District.

The board changed its stand upon recommendations of the trade group's aviation committee. It was contended that the airport should come under jurisdiction of the community which it serves.

It was proposed at yesterday's meeting that Virginia "cede" to the District one-third of the flying field now said to be in Old Dominion territory.

It was pointed out that several other large cities have found it necessary to build new airports where regulation was in the hands of other jurisdictions.

Specifically cited was New York's experience with the Newark Airport and the experience of Kansas City, Mo., with a field located in Kansas.

Consideration of the local problem was again taken up by the trade board after airline officials protested against the present system of double jurisdiction and taxation. Previously, the directors had approved Virginia control of the mammoth airport.

The group also approved recommendations of its traffic committee supporting proposed legislation to create so-called "fringe" parking facilities to be established by the city.

The directors voted against a suggested ban of all downtown parking and reiterated its stand for extension of parking meters.

While approving in general the traffic committee's suggestion that Mall areas be thrown open for Federal employe parking, the board declined to act on proposals that actual park land be used pending a report from its parks and recreation committee.

Department of Agriculture Orchestra Opens New Season

Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra on Monday night in South Building Auditorium. Program: "Aubade" and "Wedding Festival" from "Suite Romantique," Op. 31 (Victor Herbert), "Mandodari's Lament" from "Ramayana Suite," Op. 45 (Bertram Shapleigh), Symphonic Ballad, "Tam O'Shanter" (George Whitefield Chadwick), Symphony No. 9 in E minor, Op. 95 (Antonin Dvorak).

Standing room was all that was left for late-comers last evening at the first concert of the season by the Department of Agriculture Orchestra in South Building Auditorium, featuring music by American composers. Walter Bauer made very brief his usual introductory remarks from the conductor's podium because, as he said, the first numbers were to go on the air over a local radio station. But he neglected to inform the auditors that for the purposes of the broadcast the order of the first half of the program would be reversed.

BROWN

In "Mandodari's Lament" from the "Ramayana Suite" by the late Bertram Shapleigh was afforded a glimpse at the music of an American composer whose works are better known in England than in his native land. This injustice should be speedily rectified, for Mr. Shapleigh was an artist of fine perceptions and a master of expressive writing. The beautiful lament, harmonized with only a faint suggestion of Hindu ragas, is an excerpt from a suite based on a Sanskrit poem.

It is well to remember now and then that Victor Herbert composed other things than operettas, and Dr. Bauer did remind us with two extracts from the "Suite Romantique." These were the "Aubade," or dawn song invented by the trouveres of Provence to balance the serenade, and the "Wedding Festival." Charmingly melodic and nicely orchestrated, these pieces have a fine flavor.

Inasmuch as Antonin Dvorak lived in the United States for two years and six months, Dr. Bauer took only a mild poetic license in putting his ninth symphony on a program of American music. During his residence here, Dvorak composed ten works, from Opus 95 to Opus 104 inclusive, and Americans are particularly fond of three items: the ninth symphony, the F major string quartet, and the seventh "Humoresque" from Opus 101. If given the opportunity to hear them, they may grow to like equally well some of the other music which the homesick Czech wrote in his voluntary exile.

'Bombs Will Drop on D. C.' Dupont Circle Citizens Told

A declaration that "bombs will drop on Washington" yesterday turned a Dupont Circle Citizens Association meeting into a warmly worded discussion on the potentialities of Hitler's bombers.

William Clark Taylor, Washington attorney and chairman of the association's civilian defense committee, was urging upon the association's members the importance of the air raid warden service, in which the organization is cooperating.

Hardly had Taylor resumed his seat when Col. John P. Hains, a retired Army officer, rose.

"I'm in favor of the air raid warden service," he declared, "but I don't think we ought to panic these people, especially the ladies. I want to assure all these ladies that they're in no danger right now."

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, who was speaker for the meeting, said that from his talks with War Department officers he believed there was very little danger of a fleet of bombers carrying explosives invading Washington, but that a single, long-range bomber laden with incendiary bombs might set the city aflame.

Manor Park

A resolution requesting District Commissioners to seek a $25,000 congressional appropriation to equip air raid warden stations here was adopted by the Manor Park Citizens Association.

This resolution was introduced by W. H. Seaquist, chairman of the association's civilian defense committee.

The association referred to a committee a resolution disapproving the National Symphony Orchestra "pop concerts" at Riverside Stadium because of sale of beer there. School children have been urged to attend the concerts, it was stated.

Forest Hills

Forest Hills Citizens Association last night urged the District Commissioners to offer to the Park and Planning Commission the lot at Davenport Street and Linnean Avenue Northwest which has been used for the past year as a play area.

The action was taken because of reports that the Commissioners were planning to sell the lot for commercial development. The association strongly denounced such a proposed sale.

The unit opposed rezoning of restricted and semirestricted areas to allow establishment of professional boarding houses; and opposed any rezoning of Connecticut Avenue for commercial purposes.

The unit opposed rezoning of restand against increasing the gasoline tax more than one cent.

Kenilworth

The Kenilworth Citizens Association last night cheered the announcement that ten policemen have been added to the Eleventh Precinct force. The organization has long urged enlargement of the precinct personnel. Acting Lieut. J. E. Winters announced the addition in a talk to the group.

Charles Maize, president, and Mrs. Mabel Hubbel, secretary, were named to represent the association at the zoning commissions hearing on the licensing of apartments and boarding houses.

W. A. Roberts was indorsed for the vacancy on the Public Utilities Commission. A resolution directed to the Commissioners commended the appointments of Maj. Edward J. Kelly as superintendent of police and Richard Mansfield as assistant superintendent. Adolphe Columbus, deputy air warden for the area, announced the opening of a first-aid course in the Kenilworth Recreation Center November 17.

Progressive Congress Hts.

The Progressive Citizens Association of Congress Heights reelected its full slate of officers last night. The officers, all of whom succeed themselves, are Dr. E. E. Richardson, president; Rupert A. Sullivan, vice president; Mrs. Edna Sydnor, secretary, and Mrs. Edna Hoag, treasurer.

The group also indorsed the bill before Congress to add 100 policemen to the District force, but went on record against any increase in water rents.

Progressive of Georgetown

The Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown last night urged that all new employes of the tax assessor's office including the proposed new administrator be District residents.

The proposed change in the tax assessor's office which would replace the present three-man assessment board with a single administrator was indorsed by the Commissioners yesterday.

The citizens group also urged that the successor to Presiding Judge George C. Aukan who died recently be a District resident. Nineteen new members attended the meeting.

D. C. Abolishes 3-Man Board Of Assessors

Abolition of the three-man board of assistant assessors for personal property with replacement by a single administrator was announced by the Commissioners yesterday.

Action was taken upon recommendation of Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent. Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech was instructed to draft special legislation affecting the change.

The plan is in line with announced intentions of "streamlining" the tax assessor's office. In addition the Commissioners indorsed employment of three additional tax examiners.

Dent suggested the proposed administrator's salary be $4600 a year, leaving $9200 from present salaries paid board members to hire the extra examiners.

"Because of the existence of the Board of Tax Appeals," Dent told the Commissioners, "I see no particular reason or object for the continuation of the board of assistant assessors for personal property. This argument, I believe, is further strengthened because of abolition of the intangible tax."

Senate Group Urges Hankin For P.U.C. Job

The Senate yesterday received the recommendation of its District Committee that Gregory Hankin, Federal Power Commission attorney, be appointed to a District Public Utilities Commission post.

No action is expected on the recommendation and on two other local measures, which probably will be introduced today, until the Senate has cleaned up its present slate of pressing national legislation.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, today is expected to introduce the measure providing for 100 additional District policemen. He is chairman of the District Appropriations subcommittee which urged passage of the measure, sponsored in the House by Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri.

The Appropriations Committee concurred in the subcommittee's recommendation.

Also scheduled to be introduced today by the District Committee is the amended vagrancy bill, defining a vagrant in the District in accordance with changes President Roosevelt was understood to have favored when he vetoed the bill.

The District Committee's recommendation that Hankin be appointed to the P. U. C. was introduced by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho. The full committee, by a 4-to-2 vote, last Friday approved the findings of a subcommittee which investigated Hankin's qualifications for the job.

Prowler Defies Shots, Caught In Chase

A 29-year-old man was held in the Eleventh Precinct Station last night after two men had tried to stop him by firing pistol shots into the air.

CATES

The man was first frightened away from the home of Larry Cates, 31, House of Representatives librarian, who lives at 1525 Twenty-eighth east. Seeing a man's face through his window, Cates got his pistol and, raising the window, called for the fleeing man to halt. Then Cates fired into the air.

A few minutes later Cates heard another shot. It was from the pistol of Private R. C. Redding, of the Fifth Precinct, who was on his way to work. Redding had seen a man running, and called to him to stop. His command unheeded, he, too, fired into the air. Redding gave chase and caught the man in an alley. He was held at the Eleventh Precinct Station for investigation.

Cates, a former member of the Capitol Police Force, aided in dispersing an anticonscription demonstration a year ago on the Capitol steps. To ease tension he led the crowd in singing "America."

Metropolis View

A resolution urging the Budget Bureau and Congress to speed District of Columbia civilian defense appropriations was adopted last night at the regular meeting of the Metropolis View Citizens Association, held in the Crosby-Noyes School.

Vincent Boudren was named chairman of arrangements for a Christmas party scheduled for December 23 at the St. Vincent's Orphanage grounds.

Two-Department Merger

Whitehurst Cool on Proposed New Traffic-Control Setup

Reorganization of the city's complex traffic-control setup into a single unit headed by Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst—suggested yesterday by the Commissioners—received a cool reception last night from the proposed new motor vehicle chief.

"The whole idea," said Whitehurst, "is a complete surprise to me. I have not been consulted or even approached on the plan."

Informed that the Commissioners had informally agreed to the consolidation, Whitehurst waved aside further questions with the comment: "Ask them." He added, however:

"The highway and traffic departments have always cooperated closely. To all intents and purposes, they are now one division."

Under tentative plans reported by the Commissioners following a conference yesterday, Whitehurst would become "Traffic Coordinator," supervising both the Highway Department and Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, according to Commissioner Guy Mason, would remain as "sort of chief engineer."

The city heads emphasized that the projected consolidation is still in preliminary planning stages, and in any event all enforcement duties would be left to the Police Department.

Functions of the highway and traffic departments are closely related, explained Commissioner John Russell Young, and it is felt greater efficiency would result if both budgets were combined under a single head.

"It is obvious," said Young, "that traffic here is essentially an engineering problem. It should be closely tied in with the planning and building of streets and highways."

To affect the proposed merger, it was contended in certain official quarters last night that special legislation would be needed. Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech, however, said the Commissioners have authority to "juggle" their department heads and as long as no department was completely abolished, legislation would be unnecessary.

At 3 p. m. tomorrow the Commissioners will meet with the four Police Court judges. Discussion is expected to center around a proposed increase in collateral deposits for various offenses and the plan of Judge Walter J. Casey to require policemen to appear in court only once a month as witnesses in minor traffic cases.

The city heads and Corporation Counsel Keech yesterday conferred for more than an hour on forthcoming changes in collateral procedure.

$1000 Taken by Safe Robbers From 2 Washington Stores

Two safe robberies, one executed in a downtown hat store yesterday morning while the manager and helper were waiting on customers were being investigated last night by police.

The two jobs netted the thieves $1000.

A man walked into Brodt's, Inc., 50 Eleventh Street Northwest, about 10:45 a. m., asking for a cap. The manager of the store, William Paul Brodt, and his helper were busy and asked the man to wait. He walked to the rear of the store, where the safe is kept, loitering there while the men waited on customers. The safe was open, but the money compartment was locked. However, Brodt said, a key to the compartment was on a shelf in the safe.

"The man was dressed nicely and looked like a nice fellow," Brodt stated.

After a while he went to wait on the man, but he could not find a cap to suit him and wanted one made to order. He left the store and later Brodt discovered the theft. Missing was $400.

Using a crowbar, thieves cracked the safe of the Drew Construction Co., 1048 Thirtieth Street Northwest, sometime Sunday, making off with a loot of $600. Prior to making this entrance, the thieves broke into a junk shop at 1041 Thomas Jefferson Place Northwest, which backs up to the rear of the construction company offices, and stole an acetylene torch. The torch was found near the safe, but had not been used by the thieves.

'Ten Best' Poll Expands To Include New Fields

PITY THE POOR DRAMA DESKS. Always, if it isn't one thing, it's something else again, as if the designers of their duties might be sitting up nights devising ways to keep them out of mischief. And Time in its flight, taking on a velocity that practically reduces a year to the former dimensions of a week, doesn't help any, either.

ELLEN DREW

Take the day's mail, for instance. In it comes a hefty communication from inventive and indefatigable Mr. Vhester B. Bahn, editor of Jack Alicoate's Film Daily, not too gently prodding the memory with a reminder that it won't be long now until that national poll of a half-thousand or so motion picture editors, critics, commentators and columnists to decide the "Ten Best Pictures of the Year" will be coming up again. Heretofore that has been considered sufficient aggravation of the wear and tear on the critical nervous system. But not this year. Evidently feeling that his valuable publication should keep abreast of the multiplied worries of the defense effort, taxation, and priorities that are finally getting around to making it tough for the guy who wants to buy a new automobile, or maybe a cookstove, and whatnot, Mr. Bahn goes on to spring his jolly surprise:

"The twentieth annual survey of American critical opinion will have some new features, permitting you to nominate directors, players, writers, etc., for the year's honors."

That's just ducky! Now if we could only be permitted to estimate the probable mechanical stresses on the projection equipment and undertake a chemical analysis of the film on which the pictures are photographed, we would feel that there is virtually nothing left to live for. In fact, we suspect that what the Messrs. Alicoate and Bahn really are trying to do is to take the sting completely out of death!

Burgess Meredith, Louis Hayward and the other celebrities who formed the vanguard of the "It's Fun To Be Free" forces, at that cocktail party at the Carlton on Sabbath afternoon, were only the "front" for a larger army in town against the opening of the patriotic pageant in the Uline Arena tonight. Even in advance of them, a considerable detachment of mechanics, artisans and experts in stagecraft had arrived in the Capital to de-ice, decorate and otherwise adapt the capacious arena to the requirements of a huge variety show that will enlist the services of a roster of stars of stage, screen and radio longer than you have been in town. This constellation should even outshine that recent aurora borealis.

The Past Comes Back in the Present

Leona Roberts ("Candle in the Wind"), Walter Beck ("The Land Is Bright"), Alexander Kirkland and Barbara Robbins "Junior Miss"). It all sounds like a parade out of the past, of players who made a deep impression on Washington theatergoers years ago as members of the Rams Head Players, organized and operated with signal success by Robert Bell, later a New York commentator on the theater for this department of The Post. Not that Barbara Robbins was one of that old group—all of the others were—but in private life she is by way of being Mrs. Robert Bell. "Bobbie" Bell is expected in town this week to cast an eye over Max Gordon's "Junior Miss," at the National. So Bess Davis Schreiner and a few other kindred spirits are cooking up a Rams Head reunion for one night after the show. "Nostalgic" probably is the word.

Mr. and Mrs. Sy Bartlett are in town—perhaps permanently. Mr. Bartlett, as everybody must know, is one of Hollywood's foremost scenarists, with such items as the Bing Crosby-Bob Hope "Road to Zanzibar" to his credit, for example, and Mrs. Bartlett is Ellen Drew, who—as everybody does know—is one of the cinema's most attractive young actresses, with a long list of successful screen appearances to her constantly expanding credit. Sy is under commission for the duration and stationed in, or near, Washington. So they plan to make their home here, at least for the time being, with Miss Drew commuting to Hollywood as film assignments may require—which may or may not entirely fulfill the conventional notion of what constitutes a "honeymoon." Anyhow, we shall know more about it—we hope—after this afternoon's press visit in the Carlton.

'Junior Miss' A Soaring Hit At the National

By Nelson B. Bell

"JUNIOR MISS." Max Gordon presents a new comedy in three acts and five scenes, by Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields, based on the stories by Sally Benson. Staged by Moss Hart; setting by Frederick Fox. At the National Theater.

"Junior Miss" is the comedy Washington, and all the world, has been waiting for—a play so billowing with laughter, so fresh, so sprightly in movement and so charmingly and soundly human that any sane person must embrace it joyfully, warmly and gratefully as the perfect antidote for all the ills, real or imaginary, of these troubled times.

It is not a complicated or pretentious play that Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields have contrived from the New Yorker stories by Sally Benson. Its "plot" is no more substantial than necessary to support the social problems and domestic crises that arise in the modest household of a young law clerk with a priceless wife and two impressionable daughters, the one approaching the fringes of debutante social consciousness and the other enough younger to assume the complete direction of the destinies of her elders, "solve" their magnified economic difficulties and bring order out of the imaginary chaos of their personal relationships.

To retrace the sturdy steps by which such delightful havoc is wrought, and then rectified, would be to give the impression that Max Gordon has brought to the National Theater for its first metropolitan week only another story of meddling youth escaping by a hair's breadth from the disaster it has created. In some measure that might be true, but "Junior Miss," withal its familiar framework and adolescent gayety, has a foundation of deep human feeling, sympathy and understanding that marks it as something far removed from the usual farce of irresponsible youth and vindictive middle age. It is the living embodiment of a domestic scene that is as rational as it is hilarious.

A Cast of Superlative Balance

The piece has been cast with extraordinary acumen. The players, within the limitations of a script devised primarily to tickle the risibilities, strikes up a fine spirit of camaraderie between adolescence and maturity. None of the characters is misunderstood; only the direction in which their innocent lives are leading. Philip Ober and Barbara Robbins are thoroughly normal parents, wrapped up in their two daughters, interested in their friends and properly impatient at their gratuitous contributions to the complexity of living. The youngsters are prodigiously fond of their father and mother and confident of the superiority of their own abortive judgments. These qualities of juvenile naturalness and honesty in the comedy are wisely intrusted to Patricia Peardon, in the title role, and Joan Newton, as her slightly older sister. The blonde Miss Peardon is as near perfection in her dominant part as any role of such importance ever would have a right to expect. Her final scene is far and away the most captivating of the season.

In assignments only a shade less vital, Matt Briggs, as the explosive law partner; Francesca Bruning, his daughter, and Alexander Kirkland, a guiltless accomplice in catastrophic deeds, move emphatically and effectively through the devastating developments of the three acts and five scenes. Adding to the unfailing humor of shrewdly guided events is the amazingly facile comedy performance of Lenore Lonergan, the bosom friend of Judy Graves "ever since we agreed to be bosom friends the first time we met in the elevator." As "the girl downstairs," Miss Lonergan makes it appear extremely fortunate that she didn't live upstairs! In less important role, Paula Lawrence is no less potent, as Hilda, the maid. The young men who dances attendance upon the Graves girls form a rare gallery of comic portraits.

Moss Hart's direction and the single, living-room setting provided by Frederick Fox add to the power and the glory of such a play as causes strong men to throw their hats in the air and impulsive ladies to dance in the aisles.

MOVIES DEPARTMENT: John Garfield, who left last week in an Army bomber for a tour of the Caribbean camps, reminisced about his first trip to Hollywood. "Robert Taylor was on the same train," he related. "And I was so impressed. Gee—Robert Taylor. And he proved to be such a nice guy" . . . "Have the past three years made any difference?" Garfield was asked. . . . "Yes, of course," he confessed. "Robert Taylor is still a nice guy. But I'm not impressed."

LOCAL NEWS: Maxwell Anderson has written a new scene for his play, "Candle in the Wind," which opened week before last . . . George K. Arthur, the silent screen star, now is completing a commercial aviator's course at N. Y. U. . . . The New York Law Journal recently carried the legal ad announcing the formation of the Sinclair Lewis-Sam Byrd limited partnership for the production of "Good Neighbor"—the play which closed after one performance

RADIO DEPARTMENT: The Maxine Elliott Theater is being converted into a radio auditorium by the Mutual Broadcasting System. That theater, named after and owned by the most famous beauty of her day, lost all its attraction, as far as Miss Elliott was concerned, as soon as the WPA Federal Theater began to present its plays there . . . When, in her villa in France, Maxine Elliott was asked about her theater, she'd sigh and shrug: "Oh, the Reds have it now."

ART DEPARTMENT: At Conde Nast's home last week Salvador Dali, the surrealist painter, was introduced to some of the guests by Elsa Maxwell, the noted columnist . . . "This is Dali," Elsa told a young lady. "You know his work, of course" . . . "But, of course," the surrealist artist was told. "But I didn't recognize you—without that price of liver on your head."

EMPLOYMENT DEPARTMENT: Joseph Pasternak, the movie producer, whose Deanna Durbin pictures Saved Universal Films, is in town now. Wednesday night he was taken to the Copacabana by an agent who wanted him to see Estrellita, the Latin star . . . "She's wonderful, and is a great bet for pictures," the agent spieled. "She has the same qualities as Durbin—she's young and charming, shy and reserved. Wait, I'll bring her over" . . . Estrellita was brought to the table. "This is Mr. Pasternak," said the agent. "The great producer" . . . "'Allo, keed," Estrellita acknowledged. "Wot's keekink?"

40,000 Washingtonians AT ONE QUIET WEDDING!

It's true.

THIS particular "Quiet Wedding" was born in a shower of bombs at Denham Pictures Studios, near London. Margaret Lockwood, who was so mystified in "The Lady Vanishes" and so shocked in "Night Train," was finally achieving her ambition to play a nice, heart-appealing role.

DOWN came the bombs on five separate occasions, chasing not only Miss Lockwood and the rest of the company, but also the talented Mr. Anthony Asquith—the man who directed the notable "Pygmalion." Yet, nothing daunted, when quiet returned, everyone crept out of their shelters, and the wedding resumed.

"QUIET WEDDING," which has touched the hearts of 40,000 men and women in Washington during its two weeks here, will continue at the Pix Theatre, 13th and H Streets N.W. It has nothing to do with war. It has to do with the real enjoyment of life as it should be and will be.

MAYBE that's why Washington's critics have raved about it. "A comedy treat!" said Nelson Bell in The Post. "It will steal your heart!" said Jay Carmody in the Star. "Makes a profound impression," said the Times-Herald.

You will agree.

Hollwood, Nov. 3

Four years ago, Ted Weems was impressed by the singing of a little 13-year-old girl. In order to have her with his band, he took out legal guardianship papers. The 20 men in his orchestra, all happily married, became godfathers. Among them, they were responsible for her schooling, dancing and singing lessons, health, exercise and fun. One boy's wife made her a complete cowgirl outfit. Then along came Gene Autry, who wanted her for his pictures. So Ted, not wanting to stand in her way, turned her over. She's made nine pictures with Autry, and will now star in her own, "Shanty Town." Her name is Mary Lee, and on her seventeenth birthday last week, Ted and the boys gave her a surprise party with all the trimmings at the Casa Manana.

Didn't have a chance to speak to Lana Turner on the "Johnny Eager" set. She was busy playing dead, being carried by Bob Taylor and planted in the front seat of an automobile, which they did over and over again. I've seen girls go limp, but never one go limper quicker than Lana when she nestled in Bob's arms.

Joe E. Brown received a gift that gives him star billing in his own home—a waffle iron that burns his name on the top of each waffle. Says Joe, "This is the first opportunity I've had to eat my way through a billboard!" And his next picture will be "Shut My Big Mouth." (Make up your mind, Joe—you can't do both!!)

For the past week, Mary Pickford's given an imitation of the man on the flying trapeze. After that hospital checkup, she does another quickie to New York, and returns here for the weekend. Incidentally she and Buddy are talking about adopting two little girls.

Hear Judy Canova will marry Max Shewalter, New York singer, as soon as her annulment from the corporal is final.

Martha Raye overheard a 10-year-old boy telling his father that he'd sold his dog for $50,000. "That's an awful lot of money for a dog," said papa. "What did you do with it?" "Oh, I didn't get any money," said the kid, "I traded him for two $25,000 cats!"

Move Forecast To Oust Willkie From G. O. P.

By the Associated Press

Representative Short (Republican), of Missouri, forecast yesterday a move by some Congressional Republicans to read Wendell L. Willkie out of the party but the minority leader, Representative Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, said he would oppose it.

Short said in an interview that Willkie had angered many Republicans by his reported intention of campaigning against any who oppose the Administration's foreign policies.

"That's the quintessence of assininity," Short asserted. "It's all right for a political prostitute to join the church, but we don't want to see him leading the choir the first day. Let him serve his probationary period.

Comparing Willkie to President Roosevelt, Short said "they talk alike, they think alike and they're backed by the same crowd."

"We're fed up on personal charm," he added. "What we want is more candor, less chicanery."

Martin said he was not in favor of reading anyone out of the party.

"This is an American issue," he said, referring to the question of foreign policy, "and we've divided over it just like all other parties. We ought to be tolerant of one another."

In New York, Willkie was informed of the statements by Short and Martin and was asked if he had any comment.

He replied: "You may say that Mr. Willkie laughed and said both statements amused him very much."

Pullman Co. Antitrust Trial Opens

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—The Government charged today at the opening of its antitrust suit against the Pullman company and affiliates that through interlocking directorates the companies "virtually monopolized" not only the railroad sleeping car business but also the manufacture of all types of passenger cars.

"The size of the defendants, the financial power of the defendants, made this possible," Special Assistant United States Attorney Foster Hamilton declared.

Among the defendants—none of whom is expected to attend the hearings before next week—are J. Pierpont Morgan, George Whitney, Morgan partner; Alfred P. Sloan, jr., board chairman of the General Motors Corporation; Richard K. Mellon, Pittsburgh; Harold S. Vanderbilt, New York, and David A. Crawford, president of the Pullman company. All are directors of the company.

Hamilton began presenting a ponderous pile of documentary evidence before the special three-judge Federal Court and said it was unlikely that witnesses would be called before next week.

Defense attorneys said privately they expect the trial to continue for at least six months.

The Government is seeking dissolution of Pullman, Inc., a holding company for the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co., the Pullman Car and Manufacturing Co. of Alabama, and the Pullman Co., which operates the sleeping car service for 78 of the Nation's railroads.

Seth W. Richardson, one of a half-dozen defense attorneys, said at one point that the case "arose from the complaint of a competitor" to the Pullman company. Hamilton denied it.

Over the protests of defense counsel, Hamilton succeeded in having the court issue subpenas for documents of a six-director committee of the Pullman Co. which he said had been named to consider purchase of lightweight railroad cars. Hamilton said President Martin W. Clement of the Pennsylvania Railroad and President Frederick E. Williamson of the New York Central met with the committee.

U. S. Worker Kills Herself by Gas

The body of Miss Emily E. Hulick, 37, a secretary with the National Resources Planning Board, was found in the gas-filled kitchen of her apartment at 1750 Harvard Street Northwest yesterday. Two notes were found.

Police said they were told by friends that Miss Hulick had been despondent. The body was discovered by a friend, Miss Kathleen McCormick, and the janitor of the apartment house. Gas jets on the kitchen stove were open and all the windows had been pulled down.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Halifax Calls Production The Battle Cry

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 3.—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, said today that "this is a war of the workshops."

"Production, more production and still more production, that is the battle cry," he told a luncheon meeting of the Economic Club. "For too long we have had to make our plans fit the amount of material available. Now we see that we must accumulate so much material that we can make whatever plans the situation demands."

In England, he said "capital, labor and management recognized that they are partners working to a common end, and they now have the reward of seeing the stuff in a swelling stream beginning to roll off the production lines.

"Battle of the Shops"

"And to that stream is now being added the rising tide of the production of your great factories both here in Detroit and all through the United States.

"The productive strength and resources of your country and mine together are greater than anything the Nazis can muster in spite of their victories and all the territory that they have grabbed. You can rely on us to go on holding the front line until the battle of the shops has been won, and then with your help, we will have the arms and munitions to bring Hitler and his gang ot a final reckoning.

Reds Need Materials

He said that the Russians had inflicted huge losses on Germany, but had suffered severely themselves not only in men but in material. "And they now look to the workers of Great Britain and the United States to make those losses good, and I am sure we will not let them look in vain."

Of the German people, he said: "But, evil as is the cause, great as is the crime, there is still a large part of the German people in whom devotion to Hitler burns fiercely, and we shall only save ourselves, and give the chance of freedom again to the soul of the German people, if the fire of our own resolution can burn with a heat as strong as theirs."

Pine Dismisses Dupont Hotel Tenants' Suit

District Court Justice David A. Pine yesterday dismissed a bill of complaint brought by ten former tenants of the Dupont Circle Hotel Apartments. The tenants sought an injunction against their removal.

Justice Pine ruled that "nothing has been shown that the defendants were put out forcibly, and there is nothing in the leases which gives the plaintiffs the right to have the building's ownership unchanged."

Meanwhile, Mrs. Lee Wolverton, another tenant, who now has a $10,000 damage suit on file against the Dupont Circle Hotel Apartments, filed a new injunction to prevent her eviction.

Draft Shows Up 'Cheap Education'

A drama portraying the effects of "cheap education" in a democracy is being enacted in Washington every Tuesday night, according to one group of psychologists involved.

On those nights 30 or 40 men appear at Howard University, as "borderline" cases sent by Dsitrict Selective Service boards when their numbers come up. There they are put through a series of tests to determine their educational and mental fitness for Army service.

So far about two-thirds of those examined have been recommended for deferment.

"That's how we're paying for attempts in some States to save money by cheap education," Dr. Steuart Henderson Britt, chairman of a committee of psychologists conducting the examinations, said yesterday. "We are trying to save money by use of inadequate physical equipment, shorter school terms, underpaid teachers."

Dr. Britt, who is assistant professor of psychology at George Washington University, explained that these educational shortcomings are not found in the District. With proper education, he said, most of the men would have been eligible for Army service.

"In a modern mechanized army a soldier has to be more than just healthy," he pointed out. "That's why we give these tests, which are of a twofold nature—literacy and psychological tests to determine mental age."

The psychologists, regularly employed by universities, hospitals and Government departments, volunteer their services. Both white and Negro registrants are examined each week, with the majority being Negro, Dr. Britt reported.

BEATS 21 OTHER PICKERS—Floyd Wise, of Prairie Center, Ill., tears his way through a field of hybrid corn at Tonica, Ill., to win the national corn husking championship. Wise beat 21 other contestants, husked 45.37 bushels in 80 minutes

Tonica, Ill., Nov. 3.—The margin of 11 pounds of ear corn gave sturdy Floyd Wise, the local entry, the title of king of the harvest hands today.

He won the national corn husking championship with a net score of 45.371 bushels picked in 80 minutes of the toughest kind of hard work, even if it was regarded as a sporting event by a mud-trampling crowd estimated at 75,000.

Young Wise, a blue-eyed 31-year-old, won $100. He still has a lot of corn to pick on the farm he rents with a brother at Prairie Center, Ill.

Runner-up was Leland Klein, of Woodford County, who did the cleanest job of the 22 entrants in the world series of the cornland, scoring 45.21 bushels.

Wise fell short of the national contest record of 46.71 bushels, set in Iowa last year by Irvin Bauman, a neighbor of Klein. Third place winner for the second consecutive year was the Iowa champion, Ivyl Carlson of Madrid, who turned in a net load of 44.36 bushels.

A Minnesota farmer who lived in this vicinity until last spring was fourth. He is Donley Martin, of Buffalo, Minn., who picked 43.25 bushels. Iowa also picked up fifth money, which went to Cameron Krauel, of Gray, with 41.89 bushels.

Army Rejects 200 Tons of Canned Argentine Beef

San Fransicco, Nov. 3 (U.P.).—Army Quartermaster supply officers said today more than 200 tons of Argentine canned beef have been rejected here as unfit for human consumption.

The consignment of 434,000 pounds was returned to the contractor after cans began to burst and the odor of the spoiling meat was noticeable.

"The Army has rejected a small amount of corned canned beef whose origin was South America because of progressive deterioration, due to imperfect processing," Col. F. J. Riley, Quartermaster supply officer, said in acknowledging the rejection.

"The contractor is now removing the consignment from the Oakland storage point."

Bioff Boasted of Movie Shakedowns, Jury Told

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 3.—William Bioff, West Coast labor union leader, was pictured in testimony in Federal Court today as making a series of successful shakedowns of Warner Brothers Picture Corporation, and then boasting:

"If I go to jail Joe Schenck will be in the next cell, and some of the other big movie heads will be right along with him.

"I'm too big a fish to send to jail. And what if they did send me? Lots of big men have been in jail, like Stalin and Hitler and a few others."

The boast was attributed to Bioff by James E. Coston, Chicago theater manager for Warner Bros., who testified at the trial of Bioff and George E. Browne, president of the A. F. L. International Alliance of Theatrical and Stage Employes, on charges of extorting $550,000 from the movie industry in violation of antiracketeering laws.

Coston testified that his company had made payments totaling $71,700 since 1935 to Browne and Bioff and Nick Dean, described as Bioff's appointed representative in Chicago.

Dean is a fugitive under a similar extortion indictment.

Charles C. Moskowitz, a director and manager of Loew's, Inc., Metropolitan Theaters, who with Coston testified as Government rebuttal witnesses after the defense had rested, said he paid Browne a total of $200,000 in 1935, 1937 and 1938 in what he said was an effort to avert serious labor difficulties in the corporation's theaters.

In his testimony—the first at the trial concerning the actual payment of money to Browne—Moskowitz said he made two payments, one of $25,000 in cash and the other of $15,000 cash, to Browne in a restaurant, the first in the fall of 1937 and the other in the spring of 1938.

He told of a conversation he had with Browne, [illegible] ing:

"I told Mr. Browne that we were ready to make [illegible] demanded for the 1941 period. told him I had received a message from [illegible] after a trip to Chicago, and I told him that, in order to stop so-called [illegible] R. K. O. and Loew's were prepared to [illegible] in cash of $100,000.

Actually, the [illegible] payment [illegible] for Loew's end, including a payment of $105,000, plus income taxes, and $2,000 expenses for Mort Singer, of Chicago, in whose name the transaction was entered on Loew's books.

The trial [illegible] Wednesday, [illegible] might go to the jury [illegible] the next.

Berlin Writes Official Song For Red Cross

The American Red Cross yesterday announced an official song entitled "Angels of Mercy," written for the organization by Irving Berlin. It will be sung for the first time publicly on Armistice Day.

Berlin flew here Sunday to present the song to Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis, and in a large and empty Hotel Willard storeroom Berlin found a piano and sang the composition to Davis.

"It's the best thing you've ever done," commented Davis when he had finished.

"Well, it's all yours, and God bless you with it," Berlin replied "I hope it helps."

Davis disclosed that the popular songwriter had offered some time ago to "help the Red Cross in any way he could," and that since the organization had no official song, he was asked to supply one.

"I was panic stricken when I remembered the deadline was November 11," Berlin confided on Sunday to a Post reporter, "but the tune just fell out of heaven."

The tune is to have its first public audition on a three-network radio program.

Texas Jumps to Second Place

Out of 121 Votes Put Longhorns on Top; Fordham Third in Widely Voting

The University of Texas football team, which ... to begin play for the opening game ... season and hasn't been ... since today rolled into first place in the Associated press football ranking poll.

The awesome scoring machine which Coach Dana Bible has perfected in the ... year of his five ... an close second to Minnesota ... first two weeks of the poll. A ... ek ago the Longhorns moved ... n terms, and in this fourth ... ranking went out in front ... points (one point less, by ... than their average score ... games).

Of the 121 football experts throughout the country who took part in the voting, 73 made the Texans first choice, and one other split his ballot between Texas and Minnesota. The Longhorns were ranked first or second 110 ballots, and accumulated 1,148 points to 1,141 for the Gophers, points being awarded on the basis of 10 for a first place vote, 9 for second, 8 for third, and so on down.

Longhorns Hit Peak

Texas hit probably its peak of the year against Southern Methodist last Saturday, when Bible's boys won, 34-0. That gave them a total of 300 points for six games, an average of a fraction over 38 per game. On defense they are nobody's pushover, either, for they have allowed only 27 points while beating down Colorado, Louisiana State, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Rice and S. M. U.

Minnesota, rated No. 1 team nationally a year ago, slipped from the top after scoring what was perhaps the Gopher's most creditable victory—an 8-7 conquest of Northwestern, achieved in spite of the loss early in the game of Capt. Bruce Smith and injuries to other key men.

The next three places in the week's tabulation went to holdovers from a week ago—Fordham, third with 852 points and six first-place votes; Duke, fourth with 740 and seven, and Texas A. and M., fifth with 585. Beyond these there was considerable shuffling.

Dropped out of the first ten and almost out of sight because of their first losses were Penn and Vanderbilt. Navy moved up from eleventh place to sixth on its well-won

W. & M. Eleven On Harvard's 1942 Schedule

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 3.—Michigan and William and Mary return to the Harvard football schedule for 1942 to continue the Crimson's policy of playing an all-major list of opponents.

The other six opponents listed in the announcement by William J. Bingham, director of athletics, are traditional annual opponents of the Crimson.

Michigan, which will play host to Harvard at Ann Arbor, returns to the schedule after a year's absence while William and Mary last met Harvard in 1930, when the teams played to 13-13 tie.

The schedule:

October 3, Pennsylvania; 10, William and Mary; 17, Dartmouth; 24, Army; 31, Princeton; November 7, Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich.; 14, Brown; 21, Yale at New Haven, Conn.

Virginia Nimrods Flock to Marshes For Shot at Ducks

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3.—The hunting season for migratory waterfowl began at sunrise today and many hunters were reported in the marshes to which large numbers of ducks and geese have come during the past few weeks.

Federal Game Warden Atkinson was in the field early, with an eye peeled for baited blinds, guns carrying more than three shells, hunters in power boats, live decoys, all of which are prohibited by law.

Chief change in the regulations this year allows the killing and possession of one wood duck. The daily bag limit on ducks remains at ten and for geese at three.

Shooting must be confined to the hours between sunrise and 4 p. m.

Harvard Air Game Polished In Long Drill

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 3.—Harvard's first eleven was given a two-hour workout today instead of the customary Monday holiday and indications were that the Crimson plans an aerial attack against Army Saturday.

Eagles Take It Easy

Newton, Mass.—After a short blocking drill, the Boston College squad did five laps around the track as Coach Denny Myers gave the players a semiholiday as a reward for their impressive showing against Temple.

Ram Coaches Work

Cadets Are Warned

West Point, N. Y.—Army coaches, afraid of a letdown after the Notre Dame contest, spent the day warning the Cadet football team of Harvard's potent line.

Yale's Reid Returns

New Haven, Conn.—The gloomy Yale football outlook was brightened a bit by the announcement that Regular Guard Johnny Reid, who suffered a broken nose in the Brown clash, would be available Saturday against Cornell.

Violets in Shakeup

New York—Coach Mal Stevens shook up the entire New York University line-up and indicated further changes would be made before Missouri is met Saturday. It is likely both Joe Frank and Len Bates will be in the starting backfield.

Dartmouth Drills

3 Crusaders Work

Worcester, Mass. — Although Coach Joe Sheeketski granted a holiday to his Holy Cros regulars who played iron-man roles against Colgate, three of them appeared for practice as the Crusaders started drills for the Brown tussle.

Navy Coach Plans Surprise for Irish

Larson Hoping to Have Something Good For Notre Dame at Baltimore Saturday

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 3.—Canny Swede Larson, who likes to play a hunch, is at it again—packing surprise dynamite to throw at the Irish when Navy takes the field Saturday hoping to blast high-flying Notre Dame from the pedestal of football's unbeaten teams.

For the third straight year Larson is digging into the junior varsity grab bag to haul out another prospect for the Middie hall of fame, as if he didn't have enough already with his two-ocean plus fleet.

Two years ago Dick Shafer came up and ran Army right into the turf. Last year it was Bill Chip, a fancy blocking back. This time it's Teddy Gilliland, 174-pound speedster from Altoona, Pa.

So the nearly 65,000 fans who will jam Baltimore Municipal Stadium may see a new star born. Besides Gilliland, Casey Ploszay, a top-flight soph, will be back after being side-lined by an appendectomy, and Zeke Zechella is recovered from injuries and likely to see action.

Middies Face Tough Battle

But those boys will have to be be good to outshine Barnacle Bill Busik, the great Navy back who can do anything with a football but eat it, and who will be rested and ready.

"We've got to win this one, but it's going to be tough," Larson said, reminding of the Irish aerial circus featuring Angela Bertelli who's pitched 40 per cent ones for 581 yards; and of Steve Juzwick, running back, and Dove and Murphy at ends, among many under Frank Leahy's tutelage.

There'll be nerve-tingling action from start to finish with both teams unbeaten up to the fifteenth clash of their series in which Navy will be seeking its fourth triumph. Notre Dame has won 11. Each team has won five games and each has played one scoreless tie—Navy with Harvard and Notre Dame with Army.

Offensively they're even with 142 points rolled up apiece but defensively the powerful and numerous Middie linemen claim a slight edge, having yielded only a safety and one touchdown compared with 27 points against the Irish.

Ticket Scalpers Are Busy

The sold-out sign on tickets went up two weeks ago and scalpers were reported asking and getting $25 to $30 each for $3 pasteboards. Besides the football it'll be a grand show with the 3110 midshipmen parading traditionally onto the greensward, with 750 Notre Dame students in the stands, with bands blaring for both schools, with gold braid aplenty and officials and celebrities lost in the jam.

Yes, sir! it'll be quite a show.

Hard scrimmages were the order today and tomorrow and Navy will spend the rest of the week polishing up its offense and strengthening its pass defense. The Middies concentrated on their own attack and tomorrow will line up against the junior varsity and plebe teams which will employ Notre Dame plays.

Busik Vito Vitucci, guard, and others bruised in the Pennsylvania game Saturday, did not participate in today's heavy work. Barring further injuries this week Larson said his squad would be at full strength for the Irish.

Rudolph Ties Jimmy Caras For Cue Lead

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—Erwin Rudolph, Cleveland, fourtime winner of the title, entered a two-way tie for leadership in the 1941 world's pocket billards championship tournament tonight when he defeated Defending Champion Willie Moscini, Philadelphia, 125 to 70 in 12 innings.

The victory, the seventh against two defeats, enabled Rudolph to deadlock Jimmy Caras, Wilmington, Del., another former titleholder, for top position in the $10,000 Round-Robin Cue Classic which is scheduled to end Wednesday. Caras had temporarily taken a lead this afternoon when he defeated Onofrio Lauri, Brooklyn veteran, 125 to 47, in 13 innings.

Rudolph got the jump on Mosconi although he lost the bank. The Cleveland veteran ran 24 in the second inning before scratching to the lower left pocket. Mosconi gathered 19 in his half but Rudolph opened the third with 38, high for the match, missing on a downtable shot.

In the other afternoon match, Joe Procita, Gloversville, N. Y., beat Harold Baker, Los Angeles, 125 to 112, in 29 innings.

Rams to Play In Sugar Bowl, Report Says

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 3.—Although all efforts at confirmation failed, there were strong indications tonight that Fordham's Rams were invited today to participate in the New Year's Day Sugar Bowl football classic at New Orleans.

The strange silence of Jack Coffey, Fordham's graduate manager of athletics, was to be expected under the circumstances, as was the secretiveness of A. N. Goldberg, president of the Sugar Bowl Association.

Goldberg, however, had come all the way from the Crescent City to New York admittedly on a junket to consult "prospective participants in the bowl game." The presumption naturally was that he had not come here to talk to representatives of Columbia or the hapless New York University eleven.

Fordham chalked up its fifth victory of the season with a convincing 17-to-0 triumph over Purdue last weekend. Purdue was supposed to be a difficult hurdle but the Rams won with ease. This performance indicated that Fordham will knock off their remaining foes, Pittsburgh, St. Mary's and N. Y. U., in much the same fashion that you'd flick the ashes off your cigar, and thereby remain undefeated and untied.

Goldberg and Fordham officials naturally kept strictly to themselves any negotiations they may have had.

It is entirely possible, football being what it is, that one of the Rams' lowly opponents in the forthcoming weeks will scramble the maroon and gold beyond redemption for a bowl battle this season. On the other hand, Fordham easily could postpone a committal on the New Orleans proposition, and, on the basis of their performance, hope that the Rams will receive a bid to the Pasadena, Calif., Rose Bowl. The tournament of roses dishes out more financial sugar than the Sugar Bowl.

The only conclusion that can be reached at this juncture is that nobody should be surprised if a flash comes up that Fordham accepts Sugar Bowl bid.

D. C. Heavy Gets Early Advantage

Texan, Downed for 9 Count in Fourth, Comes Back Strongly But Loses Battle

By Tony Neri

Post Staff Writer

Jimmy DeChard, former local sandlot baseball pitcher and now Washington's leading heavyweight fighter, turned hitter last night as he pounded out an eight-round decision over Jay D. Turner, tough Texan from Dallas, at Promoter Joe Turner's W Street Arena.

Outweighed 25 pounds, DeChard tore into his foe from the opening bell and kept up a steady pace of hard blows that had Turner on the defensive until the fifth round.

The local boy sent Turner down for a nine count in the fourth round and on two occasions smashed the heavier Texan with rights that buckled the later's knees. The Texan was not without glory, though. In the sixth and seventh rounds he had DeChard in trouble. A right raised a mouse over DeChard's right eye in the seventh but the Washington boy came back to take the round.

The 1114 fans, who paid $1416 at the gate, were well-pleased with the contest and the preceding preliminaries. On The Post score sheet DeChad was given six rounds Turner one and the other was scored as even.

Paradoxically, DeChard, a 6-5 underdog in preflight odds, answered the bell as a 3-to-1 betting favorite.

In those opening heats, the 22-year-old local heavyweight connected many times with his double-barrage of leather. He kept shooting with his rapier-like left which bothered Turner no end. In the second and third rounds, Jimmy caught Turner with right smashes. The blow in the third staggered the Texan, but he came back fighting. Turner was hanging on in that fourth round. Jimmy's blows were swarming over him and he sought refuge by falling eagerly into a clinch. The hardest blow of the night came in the sixth round, which ended even. Turner was caught off balance by his younger adversary and consequently absorbed a terrific beating. But the Texan came back to pummel Jimmy's body with lefts and rights. Jimmy appeared hurt but the bell saved him from further trouble.

In the seventh, both principals came out fighting and engaged in a brisk exchange in the center of the ring. Turner caught DeChard with a left to the body and followed with a right that went wild and DeChard fell into a clinch.

The fight ended in whirlwind fashion but there was no doubt as to who was the winner. Manager Frankie Mann announced after the bout that DeChard had hurt his side last Wednesday in training and hadn't put on a boxing glove until last night. Mann said he didn't want to announce the injury until after the fight. Outside of the mouse under his right eye, Jimmy appeared none the worse after his fifth professional victory.

Last night's card marked the de-

Peru, Nebr., Nov. 3.—Peru and Wayne State Teachers colleges battled on a gridiron covered with 3 inches of icy slush, ending in a scoreless tie.

They not only failed to score, but each team had a net loss in "yards gained."

Coach Explains Gophers' 'Sleeper' Play, Called Illegal

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Lynn Waldorf, reviewing Northwestern's 8-to-7 loss to Minnesota Saturday, revealed today that "our observers in the press box thought Bud Higgins' 41-yard touchdown run on the 'sleeper play' was illegal."

Waldorf, who is not given to popping off, said he personally did not see the play "as I had my head turned toward one of my quarterbacks on the bench when the ball was snapped."

This game-winning play started without a huddle and caught Northwestern flat-footed, not a player laying a hand on the Little Gopher back as he sped down the sidelines.

"I understand that none of the cameramen at the game snapped the start of the play because it started so suddenly," Waldorf explained, "but our press box observers were of the opinion that Minnesota's players did not come to a second's halt before the play started as the rules prescribe."

Speaking before a downtown luncheon group of 1500, Waldorf said he had no intention of trying to alibi for the loss, but pointed out that the outcome of the game "did hinge on several decisions of the officials," and added:

"I don't even want to say how right or wrong the officials were, but in justice to my kids I want to point out certain things to you as I saw them. Frankly, I think the officials missed more things than usual.

"Technically, they were right in calling back our long touchdown pass because the pictures show that Leon Cook, our tackle, was beyond the line of scrimmage. But this happened several other times in the game and was permitted.

"Incidentally, Otto Graham improvised this play after he noticed how the Minnesota backs were drawn over to one side on a reverse. I never saw the play before he used it."

Waldorf paid glowing tribute to the power and might of the Gophers, describing their forwards as "the finest defensive line I have ever seen."

Judge Landis to G... Release From Hospital

Petoskey, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP).—Dr. Dean C. Burns said tonight that Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, ill since October 10 with bronchial pneumonia, would be discharged Wednesday from Little Traverse Hospital.

Landis, who will be 75 years old November 20, had contracted pneumonia after overexerting himself at his Burt Lake cottage.

A Rain-Created Pool at the U. of Florida

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Clark Griffith, who has a way with him in baseball's council halls, is now plotting a new piece of legislation for the big leagues. The old Gentleman of Georgia Avenue wants the majors to expand their night-game program to 14 home games for each club and, until they lick him on the vote, it is always folly to laugh him off.

POVICH

When the big leagues convene for their joint winter session in December, Griffith will be in his best go-to-meeting mood. In those meets he's a man to reckon with. Three years ago he jammed through that no-trade embargo against the New York Yankees at a time when the first suggestion of it was causing only a snicker. The year before he was persuasive enough to cause the American League to change its pitching rules and give the pitcher the latitude of one foot off the rubber.

And so, when those clubs who want more night games place their cause in the hands of Griffith, they are stringing along with the champion, in a sense. The owner of the Nats is the Number One man in getting legislation enacted. He has already lined up three other American League clubs on his side—St. Louis, Philadelphia and Cleveland. He's going into the meeting loaded.

Nats Owner Sees a Trend

As usual, Griffith is not pretending to be selfish in the matter, although he can't very well conceal the fact that night games at Griffith Stadium have been a sight more profitable than the unlit affairs. His seven night games last year averaged an attendance of 18,000, and more of the same would obviously be welcome.

This time, though, Griffith is plumping for the best interests of baseball generally, he says, when he recommends a 100 per cent increase in night baseball. "We've got to beat the trend," says the Nats' owner, who prides himself on sniffing out trends that affect the game. "We've got a situation to combat. It's this national defense work that threatens to keep fans from our parks in the daytime."

"I've gone through this kind of a situation before," says Griffith. "We had it in the last war when attendance fell off because work was so important to our customers. Baseball took a beating then, but it doesn't have to now. We have night baseball, and that is the solution, if we are bright enough to take advantage of it. More night games is the only way to combat conditions. It shouldn't be hard to sell the majors on that idea."

Plan to End Up in Landis' Lap

The man whom Griffith will have to sell, however, is Mr. Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who has the final say in such matters. It was Landis who last year refused the request of the St. Louis Browns for special permission to play 14 night games instead of the regulation seven. The Browns at that time pleaded poverty and pointed out to Landis that more night games might enable them to finish out of the red.

Landis' answer to the Browns' plea at that time was a ringing "No." He was taking into consideration the protests of the St. Louis Cardinals, who were doing very well in their attendance and were frightened by what might eventuate as a show-stealing policy by the American League club in St. Louis. Landis arbitrarily turned the Browns down.

Night baseball, incidentally, was not even a dream with the big leagues when Landis took office in 1921, and actually he has no specific authority to rule on such matters, but long ago Landis appropriated authority which for years has been unchallenged. Under the broad heading of "best interests of baseball" he can act on all matters, and the fate of Griffith's proposal ultimately rests with the Commissioner.

Griffith a Landis Favorite

That fact, incidentally, is not a bad state of affairs for Griffith and the American League clubs who want more night baseball. Griffith long has been one of Commissioner Landis' favorite persons. In Landis' battles against chain-store baseball and in other tiffs with the club owners, Griffith has always been one of the Judge's stanchest supporters. If any group had to choose a champion to carry a cause to Landis, it could make no better choice than the 71-year-old owner of the Nats.

Griffith is hopeful that Landis will listen sympathetically to his plan, particularly the national defense phase. The finger of self-interest points to Griffith, who is eager to capitalize on his new $130,000 lighting system, but the Nats' owner hopes to muster enough strength among the league to impress Landis with the league-wide interest in more night games.

And with his arc-lit games last year averaging 18,000 fans, and his day-time games at Griffith Stadium averaging only 4700, it is understandable why Griffith wants to throw more light on the subject of baseball—a lot more, around the league generally.

Terp Frosh Squad Boasts Strong Native Materia

Only 10 Players Hail From Other States; Georgetown Freshmen Next on Schedule

By the Associated Press

University of Maryland's freshman football team this fall is composed, as usual, mostly of boys from State high schools and from District of Columbia, with line talent appearing much stronger than greenie backfield material.

Only ten of Coach Bob Smith's frosh squad of 32 players are from points outside Maryland and Washington, two each from West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and New York, and one from Michigan and Virginia.

Young Byrd Outstanding

One of his backfield prospects is Bill Byrd, son of Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the university, and one-time coach at Maryland. Young Byrd came up from McDonogh School, Baltimore.

Another is Ralph Higgins, big tackle from Peekskill Military Academy, New York, whose father came to Wasington in an official position. Carlton Comper, jr., a guard from MacKenzie School, Detroit, is the son of a former Maryland track star, and the Virginia enrollee is Charley Dove, Alexandria, who attended Bullis, Washington.

Perhaps the outstanding prospect, in Smith's opinion, is Paul Flick, 202-pound center from Martinsburg, W. Va. Another backfield hopeful for next year's varsity will be George Hill, from Salisbury, Md., who tossed both touchdown passes Saturday against Navy's Plebes, who downed the young Terps, 45-12. One was to Byrd, the other to Halfback Jim Wissinger from Johnstown, Pa.

Maryland's frosh, with only eight days of practice compared with nearly five weeks for V. M. I., lost that season-opener, 32-6, and in their only other game, the youngsters tied the George Washington freshmen, 6-6. They meet Georgetown freshmen Saturday, and Washington and Lee frosh November 15, both games at Colle e Park.

Others who have seen duty include Bob Schnebley, a highly promising back from Hagerstown; Dick Metzler, 180-pound end from Roosevelt High, Washington; John Lookabaugh, a 208-pound tackle, of Ridgely, W. Va.; Howard Smedley, guard, who prepped at St. Paul's School, Baltimore; Tom Brandt, end, Baltimore City College.

We Believe Snavely Has Something Here

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 3 (AP).—Cornell Coach Carl Snavely, discussing mistakes made by his team in Saturday's 7-6 defeat by Columbia, had this wry comment today: "The more I analyze this game of football, I find there's a lot more satisfaction in winning than in losing."

Vikings Stop Tech, 19-0, in 39th Renewal of School Rivalry

Late Scores Give Central Series Edge

Denikos, Horton And Chacos Go Over; 3,500 See Maroons' Early Drives Fail

By Bill Burnett
Post Staff Writer

Central's Vikings are the 1941 champions of Tech, at least, they proved pretty conclusively yesterday when they took their most bitter grid rival apart, 19-0, before 3,000 boisterous fans at Central Stadium.

Some difficulty was encountered on the way, but the Vikings clearly dominated the clash which gave them to 17-16 edge in games won in a series started in 1902. They rocked on their heels before two dire Maroon threats in the first half, then braced and turned on the steam to win the thirty-ninth meeting of the teams going away.

The three winning touchdowns were spread evenly over the last three periods, with Mike Denikos, Maurice Horton and Nick Chacos on the scoring end. Central's charging line and fine blockers deserve a lot of credit, however. Almost three complete teams were used by Coach John Jankowski, in charge of the Vikings for the first season.

Denikos, who hung up Central's first score, was the favorite of spectators. When George Levinder, center, intercepted a Maroon pass late in the second stanza, little Mike took over from the Tech 44. He tore around left end for 15 yards, then faced off 14 more off tackle. A damaged leg was reinjured on the last play, but after Stan Valanos had picked up 5 yards to the 10, it was Denikos who was waiting all alone and lonely to take Stan's aerial in the end zone.

Punt Rolls Out

With the start of the second half Valanos got off a punt that rolled out on Tech's 8, setting up the next score. The Trainers were forced to kick back to their own 37, from which point another touchdown evolved.

Chacos and Denikos registered first downs as the Vikings moved to the 11, and then Horton went through tackle to score. No less than four foes had their hands on him, but couldn't hang on.

Finally a kick by Dan O'Connell was blocked, leading to the final score on the second play of the last quarter. Central recovered on the 23, sent Gene Dunn around end for a first down on the 10. Bob Troll's plunge moved the ball to the 2 as the last period started and then Chacos dived head first over the center. Jack Samperton, whose two previous place kicks for extra points were no good, finally got one between the posts.

The chances of an upset appeared bright soon after the opening whistle. Wingman Bill Demorey plowed in to block Valanos' first punt of the game, Earman recovered and the Maroon was set to roll from Central's 17. It rolled for just two yards, however, and then Sonny Morissett's field goal effort on fourth down was low.

More impressive was the Trainer advance late in the period from the opposition's 40 to the 6. Gilmore shared that advance with Bill Dellastatious. In the shadow of Central's goal, though, the Techs started substituting, suffered two penalties for delaying the game, and Morrisette was standing back of the 20-yard line when he unsuccessfully tried another field goal.

It's a Viking Touchdown—Despite a Persistent Tech Tackler

Though Ballos, of Tech, appears to have convincingly tackled Central's Maurice Horton in the third period of the high school feature yesterday, Horton escaped to run 11 yards for the Vikings' second touchdown. A 19-0 margin was amassed by the hosts in their thirty-ninth renewal with the Maroons

With CONSIDINE

WHAT INTERESTS YOU, PAL?

BOXING?—This is a magnificent day in the life of a 20-year-old Negro named Sidney Walker. With a trunk full of fawn-colored sports jackets, silk underwear, tailored slacks, pork pie hats and all the fancy accoutrements, Walker is going home to Augusta, Ga., to pay his old haunts his first visit since he broke into the New York fight picture a year ago.

CONSIDINE

During that year this jitterbug bootblack from Bobby Jones' Augusta National Golf Club has won six fights in New York, five of them at the Garden. He has become the ward of one of the South's most distinguished lawyers, Lansing B. Lee, of Augusta. He has been incorporated and his stockholders include Mrs. Tom Yawkey, Frank Crumit, Billy DeBeck, Grantland Rice and Mrs. Rice, Frank Craven, Bobby Jones, Henry McLemore, Richards Vidmer, Cliff Roberts, Distiller Slats Slater and a dozen others who chipped in the total of $1000 which launched Beau Jack, as he was known around the Augusta locker room.

Beau Jack, who now has a trainer and a rubber, cannot read or write. He confines his debauching to the wilder haberdashery shops. He is handled even better than Joe Louis. Half of the $850 he made Friday night at the Garden, where he beat Guillermo Puentes, was sent to Lee in Augusta, to be put away for him. Out of the rest come his training expenses, his room and board and his clothes.

Chick Wergeles, his energetic little manager, gave him a dollar after Friday night's fight and, as usual, Beau Jack blew it in on ten 10-cent Harlem movies.

Before each fight the stockholders get a scholarly letter from Roberts, written with the stiff fondness of a chairman of the board discussing a rising stock issue. The stockholders have dinner together before each of Beau's fights, and last Friday night they "had him in" for a soft drink at a Manhattan hotel dining room. They'll take no dividends, even though this black-browed dervish looks as if he might go on to the lightweight championship. Under the terms of their contract with him, all they'll get back is their grand, plus the fun of giving an orphan bootblack a chance to show that the talents he was wasting, shining golf shoes and participating in battle royals at the club functions, would be appreciated by the most sophisticated boxing audience in the country.

Beau Jack, nee Sidney Walker, is one fighter who won't leave the game broke. Not since Sherman has there been more discussion down South about a visit to Augusta, though Beau, of course, will be welcomed as a youth who reversed the general by marching through the North.

BASEBALL?—Frank McCormick, first baseman for the Cincinnati Reds, has heard from several quarters, all unofficial, that a deal is brewing which will send him to Brooklyn, along with Johnny Vander Meer, for Dolf Camilli and a bundle of boodle. Hard to believe, but you can be sure that Brooklyn will deal aggressively during the winter, for it will have to be a good 10 per cent better, we'd say, to stand off those Cards next year.

BOWLING?—The tremendous and almost unnoticed zoom of this sport is sharply brought to mind by some figures recently released by the business department of the Census Bureau. The figures are for 1939 and include billiards, but bowling is responsible for most of the digits. In 1935 this country spent $43,271,000 for the use of bowling drives and billiard tables in 12,412 establishments. By 1939 interest had quickened so much that we spent $87,450,000 in 17,644 places. That's a $44,179,000 increase. And the ceiling is rising dizzily, with thousands of new academies ready for the new season.

When you consider that these enormous sums of money include only the fees paid for using equipment, and do not include the thumping cost of the equipment and the structures housing it, nor the money spent on refreshments, bowling clothes and shoes and other by-products of the game, you begin to realize why, in the entertainment field, only the movies take more of America's money. The 1939 payroll of bowling and billiard establishments totaled $23,239,000, not including pinboys. It is estimated that there are 850,000 bowlers in the New York City area alone.

Georgia Ave. Bowlers Led By Wootton

The Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring found Norman Wootton, Sherer's Men's Shop, with high single for the night of 167 but his team lost the odd game to Corc's Sport Shop. Al Cissel, Arbaugh's Restaurant, posted top set of 392 and aided in a two-game win over Coffman Realty as well as team highs of 628 and 1,792, the latter a season record. Fred Heine's 386 aided Steve's Barber Shop to a sweep over Valdenar Landscapers.

ICE PALACE

The Ice Palace Ladies' Commercial was led by Marguerite Hannigan, of J. C. Flood, with a 143 single and 342 set. The Syrian Washington Club won all three games from Essex Construction. The Hot Shoppes quintet leads the league with 14-7, one game ahead of the Ice Palace girls.

MOUNT RAINIER

The Jewelers League at Mount Rainier was led by Henry May, A. Kohn, Inc., with a 136 single and 356 set. Viedt & Son and Galt Bros. shared in the team highs, the first with a 579 game and the latter with 1545 for set.

PENN

The Kilowatt League at Penn Recreation found that Joe Overend, Transit, was top man for the single with his count of 147 with Meredith, Sub-Station, taking set honors with 338. Transit and Survey won the team highs with respective totals of 611 and 1742, McManus' 352 and Edwards' 130 aiding the latter team.

TAKOMA

Bill Caul, of the Physicists team in the Bureau of Standards League at Takoma Recreation led with individual highs of 140 and 379, although he had to share the game honors with R. G. Valore, of Industrials. Te Industrials had 580 for high team game while a 1617 count won the set honors for B. T. U.

BROOKLAND

Sam Gimble, of Covenant, and Harold Hodges, of Golden Rule, with a season record 396 set topped the Odd Fellows at Brookland Recreation with the latter's count aiding his team to a record game of 619. Gimble's count helped Covenant to high team set of 1719 with Maro Fonoroff, of the same quintet, totaling 97 for a season record flat game. Mount Pleasant won three from Lolaty, while Golden Rule was whitewashing Amity No. 2. Eastern leads the league with 17-7.

FRIENDSHIP

ARCADIA

A 153, 381 by Joe Kuttner, of Hydrographic, and Andy Price's 362 set helped their mates post team highs of 619 and 1741 in the Navy League at Arcadia as Jim Falck, Navigation, was rolling top set for the night of 393 to tie the league high. Supplies and Accounts won all three from Field Service to remain in first place.

Richmond Loses First-String Vet

Richmond, Va., Nov. 3 (AP).—Coach Glenn Thistlethwaite of the University of Richmond said today that Dave Robertson, 225-pound first-string tackle, probably would not be able to play against North Carolin here this weekend.

Robertson was out of Saturday's game with Hampden-Sydney because of a leg injury.

Eagles Hope To Complete Roster Soon

Special Dispatch to The Post

Montreal, Canada, Nov. 3.—Coach Redvers Mackenzie today entertained high hopes of rounding out a full 15 man representation for his hockey playing Washington Eagles within the next 24 hours.

The Eagles currently have 11 players signed to contract: Leith Dickie, goal; Len Burrage, Art Lessard, Keith Allen and Rolly McLenahan, defensemen; Les Hickey, Roland Bleau, Art Thompson and Jimmy Wilson, defensemen, and Paul Courteau and Kenny Ullyot, centers.

A 19-year-old Michigan goalie, whose name is withheld at this time, is one player Mackenzie believes will be brought into line. The as yet unidentified net minder and his father conferred with Mackenzie at some length in Kingston, Ontario, last Friday night and are favorably considering his bid.

In the even the Michigan lad is signed he will alternate at goal with Leith Dickie, the Saranac Lake, N. Y., youth who ha simpressed favorably in exhibitions to date. And the Eagles would boast something of an innovation in alternate American goalies.

The veteran redhead stands around 6 feet and weighs in the vicinity of 190 pounds. He is one of the best skaters in the Province of Quebec and would contribute much toward steadying a young team.

Grid Giants Spurn Amerk Charity Game

New York, Nov. 3.—The New York Giants, of the National Professional Football League, tonight declined a challenge from the New York Americans, of the American League, to play a charity game here November 30 for the benefit of the United Hospital Fund.

Giant officials failed to give any reason why the challenge was spurned.

President Bill Cox of the Americans wired the challenge to President Tim Mara of the Giants and observed:

The Giants have an open date November 30, while the Americans, scheduled to play the Cincinnati Bengals in a league game, would set this contest back to Thanksgiving Day, November 20, and play it at Cincinnati.

Many Ex-E. A. H. L. Players Now in Canada

The Washington Eagles soon expect to sign their second American-born goalie. . . He is 19-year-old Carl Howell, who took his first breath in Muskegon, Mich., and now is with Oshawa. . . In order to exact Howell's promise to play with the Eagles Washington Coach Red Mackenzie, a persuasive gent for all his shy demeanor, had to convince the boy's father that the Eastern Amateur League wasn't too fast for him. . . . Ross Knipfel, colorful defenseman with the Eagles 1940 flag winners, is now with Port Colborne after a trial with the Pittsburgh Hornets. . . There are many other former Eastern Amateur players now with Canadian clubs. . . Among these are Jack Riley, Baltimore's fine forward of last year, and Kenny Partis, who played with the Eagles in 1939 and with Baltimore last year.

Partis plays for Cornwall of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, and played against his former teammates, the Eagles, Thursday in Cornwall. . . Guy Roach, the gangling former Oriole, came within a few hours of opposing the Eagles for the Cornwalls. . . Roach, now in the Canadian army, was transferred from Kingston to another part of the Ontraio province the afternoon before the night of the Washington-Kingston exhibition. . . According to reliable sources in Montreal the $25,000 that the Washington Amerks claimed to have paid for the players they bought from the Les Canadiens was slightly exaggerated by about $23,500, to be exact, according to our informant. . . The Philadelphia Rockets had only seven players two days before they opened their season Saturday night, but worked fast enough to put a club on the ice. . .

The Eagles may not repeat as Eastern Amateur champions, but chances are strong that they'll continue to be a tough club to best in the art of fisticuffs. . . Still very much with the team is pugnacious Paul Courteau, who has had ring experience as a welterweight, and a welcome addition to the punching brigade is Bob Lessard, former Quebec amateur heavyweight champion. . . Standing over six feet and weighing about 185 pounds, Lessard is tremendously broad-shouldered and, incidentally, a promising defenseman. . . Norm Burns, who established an Eastern Amateur scoring record with the Eagles last year, cannot get out of Canada to join the New York Rangers, but will play with that National League team whenever it plays in Canada. . . Burns also will play with other Canadian teams. . . JACK MUNHALL.

Philadelphia Rockets Buy Cleveland Center

Philadelphia, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Philadelphia Rockets of the American Hockey League announced today the purchase of Walter Melnyk, 21-year-old centerman, from the Cleveland Barons. He played last year for the Portage Terrors, a senior amateur club in Canada.

Deacon's Work For Boston Game

By the Associated Press

Wake Forest, N. C., Nov. 3.—Boston College's offense and defense were studied today as the Wake Forest Deacons began drilling for their game in Boston Saturday.

There was no rough work in the long practice, during which the freshmen ran Boston College plays in a dummy scrimmage and the Deacons tried out their own offense against the Eagles' offense.

Coach D. C. Walker expressed the opinion that his defense would be weak against the Boston College "T" formation because of the loss of Jim Copley, end, and an injury suffered by Pat Geer, end, in Wake Forest's loss to Marshall last Saturday.

Copley is out with a broken ankle, and Geer missed today's practice because of a bruised foot, though he is expected to be able to play some next Saturday.

Caddie, $15.70 Shot, Wins Battleship 'Chase at Pimlico

Boojum II Beats Out Chuckatuck

Faultless Fencing Brings Scott's Entry Safely Home By Five Lengths

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Pimlico, Baltimore, Md., Nov. 3.—The Battleship Steeplechase Handicap, feature of Pimlico's first washday card, brought out one of the classiest fields of leapers seen in Maryland this year. It was only fitting that the race, run in honor of Mrs. Marion du Pont Somerville scott's once-great jumper, Battle ship, should be won by the prominent owner of steeplechasers. Trainer W. G. Jones sent Caddie out in the silks of Mrs. Scott and the 3-year-old son of Link Boy made good by five lengths. He was an easy winner over Boojum II and the favored Chuckatuck.

For the first mile it appeared that Caddie, which had just graduated from the maiden ranks, was a little over his head, but when Jockey H. W. Clements called on his mount, he left very little doubt as to his superiority. The 3-year-old gelding, a mere child among his rivals, fenced in faultless fashion and once he gained the lead, it was easy to see that there was nothing to match his speed. His most important rival, Chuckatuck, was just beginning to make a menacing move when he landed poorly at the thirteenth fence and lost practically all chance of winning.

Epindel is Fourth

Trainer Jack Skinner, who had saddled the winner of the race in two of its three last runnings, sent out Epindel today but the best he could get was fourth money.

The winner, by racing the two miles in 3:56 2-5, brought $15.70 to his scattered backers and the tidy sum of $2,585 to his proud owner. The crowd of 8,000 which braved a cloudy sky and chilly weather to turn out for the card, made Chuckatuck almost an even money favorite but today just wasn't his day.

The card was opened with a dash of six furlongs for 2-year-old maidens and the Babylon-Bryson entry of Calatan and Marksman dominated the running throughout and finished in the order named. Calatan, a son of Carlaris, reached the wire a length in advance of his stablemate, which was four lengths better than Miss Sungino, a rank outsider.

Pays Backers $9.20

Jockey Mannie Berg brought his mount around the leaders on the turn and was never threatened in the stretch run. He won in very easy fashion in the creditable time of 1:15 2-5 over the good track. The Babylon racer returned his backers $9.20 for the usual $2 investment.

Twelve cheap sprinters made up the field in the second event and the winner turned up in C. Stern's Poindexter, a 3-year-old son of Halcyon. He was brought around the leaders on the turn and held sway from there to the wire to score by three parts of a length over War Smoke, a 171-to-1 shot. Perlette was up for the show award. Bet down until he had reached the favorite's role Poindexter toured the six panels in 1:15 and was responsible for a $6.60 mutuels. He also completed a $27.70 daily double for those coupling him with Catalan, half of the winning entry in the first race.

FLYING REIGH alternated with the winner in setting the pace, held on gamely and just missed. LOCH RAVEN raced very wide while making his move and showed a good race. TRIPOD tired after moving to the leaders entering the stretch. BILLS RITTA raced on the rail from the start and was shut off repeatedly.

BANKER JIM was not hurried when outrun early, moved into contention on the outside, came between horses to take command entering the stretch and drew clear to be an easy winner. JIMSON BELLE was always close to the leader, responded to pressure, but was no match for the winner. SLY TOM sprinted into the lead at once, held on gamely until entering the stretch and then faltered.

FIFTH RACE—Two miles. Purse, $2500 added. For 3-year-olds and upward. Steeplechase Handicap (15 jumps). Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:11. Off at 3:11. CADDIE, fencing well and under a strong grip for a mile, trailed the field until making his bid, went around the leaders to take command and won as his rider pleased. BOOJUM II was rated for a mile, was hard ridden thereafter, but could not reach the winner. CHUCKATUCK was moving to the leaders when he made a bad landing at the thirteenth fence. He recovered well, but could make up no ground. EPINDEL fenced well while setting the pace and then faltered.

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

The Pimlico track today puts on one of its better known races when it presents the sixteenth running of the $10,000 Riggs Handicap. In recent years, this race, run over the familiar mile and three-sixteenths distance, has been captured by such turf greats as Roman Soldier, Seabiscuit, Aneroid, Challephen and Rough Pass, winner of last year's renewal. Some Riggs eligibles showing good trials here Monday were R. S. Clark's Abbe Pierre, which went an easy mile in 1:46 2-5, G. Ring's Ringie turned in a seven panel trial in 1:32 3-5 and H. C. Hatch's Filisteo, winner of the Exterminator Handicap, turned in the creditable time of 1:05 for his five-furlong test. These moves may not seem so impressive, but when you consider the track was slow, it would make them look a little on the fast side. Maryland fans saw a new figure in action yesterday when Ken Force, for many years the outrider on all New York tracks, took over the task of assisting Happy Gordon as outrider at this point. Albert Sabath, husband of the owner of Alsab, and Sarge Swenke, trainer of the champ, have announced that their charge would be a supplementary entry in the 1942 running of the Belmont Stakes. Jockey Freddie Smith, who for several seasons was the contract rider for Col. E. R. Bradley, suffered a cracked shoulder when thrown from a horse he was galloping Sunday morning. It is probable that this accident will keep him on the shelf for the remainder of the year. The two-year-old filly, Barbara Childs, which raced in the colors of E. R. Bradley during the Laurel session, went to a new barn yesterday morning when she was purchased by Trainer Johnny Forbes. H. M. Woolf's Contradiction, winner of the Pimlico Futurity Saturday, came out of the race with a very sore left front foot, and will not be seen on the track for some time. It was the opinion of Trainer Ross Higdon, that his charge had either spread his hoof or suffered a very severe bruise on the heel. This naturally eliminates the possibility of a meeting between Contradiction and the mighty Alsab. The Woolf color-bearer was a bang-up second to Alsab in the Washington Park Futurity and it was the opinion of many that he was the only real threat to the Sabath racer. Devil Diver and Chiquita Mia, second and third to Contradiction Saturday, will leave here this week. The former will travel to the farm while the Howard racer will be sent to the coast to await the Santa Anita session. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—CRYSTAL, if able to run back to that one race at Laurel, would be a cinch in here. BOLA MOWLEE was never better and figures to give the top one most trouble. EL JELIS has turned in some corking trials and may go well.

Second race—BEAUZAR is strictly the class of this field and I'm going to string along. CANDLE ENDS is fairy consistent and may take a share. LOVE MARK has always liked this track.

Third race—If JACKET stands up in this field I see nothing that can get close to him. GLEN-NA-MONA is a cheap sort but is a factor. Something has to be third and it may be FLEMAR.

Fourth race—COERCION was a double winner at Laurel and both races were in good time. Should lead every step of the journey. DARK IMP was second to the top one last out and may again be runner-up. SILVESTRA is a classy sprinter.

Fifth race—RAMESES was out of the money here opening day but that race was better than it appeared. SHERIFF CULKIN has disappointed several times but I'm giving him one more chance. BIRCH ROD is dead fit but I believe he prefers a little more ground.

Sixth race—HALTAL showed such speed and gameness in the Special that I'm going to give him the call over these high-class routers. PICTOR was never better but that 123 pounds may stop him. CORYDON was a clever winner here over a cheaper field.

Seventh race — LANDLUBBER won his last by six lengths and is trained by Hirsch Jacobs. That should be enough said. HISTRIONIC had class at one time and has always preferred this strip. GOURMET showed improvement last out.

Eighth race—MAECLOUD is another sore-going plater with a touch of class. Should handle a field of this caliber. PHARA FROST has been going good of late and should be no farther back than second. MY ONE may wake up and show plenty of speed.

Best bet COERCION.

Redskins Reaching Peak for 3-Way Eastern Title Battle

Giants, Bears Start Over After Upsets

'Skins Face Dodgers With Only 29 Men; Todd Wins Suit Vote; Team Back to Work

Like a man who just inherited a million dollars but had four million in debts, the Redskins looked skeptically at their new Eastern Division lead of the National Pro League yesterday while contemplating the four toughest consecutive games of their season.

All four will be under terrific pressure for the Chicago Bears and New York Giants have proven vulnerable to defeat and their expected run-away of the Western and Eastern pennants have developed into down-the-stretch battles with the Redskins and Green Bay Packers as proven contenders.

Where are the dopesters who said the Giants would breeze into the Eastern championship in unbeaten style? They're probably trying to figure how the Giants lost to the Dodgers and Chicago Cards in a row. And so are the Giants.

How About It, Boys

How about the power-conscious Monday morning quarterbacks who had conceded the western crown to the Chicago Bears and were feeling sorry for the Green Bay Packers, a pretty fair team, but outclassed.

They are probably all on the Redskin band wagon by now. Forgotten are the four narrow victories of the Redskins, termed lucky by some, in favor of their impressive triumph over the Pittsburgh Steelers in their No. 1 exhibition of the year.

Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty's earlier suggestions that possibly the Giants and Bears reached their peaks too early and would falter while the Redskins and other teams were coming to the front are being recalled.

Perhaps the injuries to the Redskin squad which has reduced it from 33 to 29 available men for the Dodgers will be a concealed blessing as over-confidence is out with Bob Hoffman out for the year with an undisclosed ailment; Wilbur Moore on the sidelines with a broken collar bone, Bill Young among the missing for at least another week with his banged-up leg and Ed Justice probably unavailable against the Dodgers with his torn leg muscles. Moore will undergo a tonsilectomy some time this week.

Dodgers Shake Lethargy

Coach Jock Sutherland's Dodgers have snapped out of that three-game slump. They need Sunday's game more than the Redskns for a defeat will definitely end their championship hopes while a Redskin defeat would leave them still very much in the running.

The Dodgers have won four and lost three but their path from here through the season's finale is not too tough. They play the Giants and Redskins but have an open date when the former teams are meeting and have two games left with the punchless Pittsburghers. The Dodgers could conceivably slip in while the 'Skins and Giants were cutting each other up and losing to their western opponents.

Following Sunday's Dodger game, the Redskins have easy pickings on the sixteenth. They just meet the Bears. Their third consecutive road game will find them in the Polo Grounds against the Giants and then they come home to meet the Green Bay Packers, five-time pro champs, who by that time will need every point that can lay their hands on.

The football writers voted Dick Todd the most valuable player in Sunday's Steeler game at the weekly luncheon meeting yesterday and he will receive the suit of clothes awarded after all home games. Wayne Millner, Wee Willie Wilkin and Wilbur Moore were remembered in the voting.

The Redskins will return to Griffith Stadium today with about the same practice program as the preceding weeks. They will work for two or more hours today through Thursday, taper off Friday and just limber up Saturday morning before leaving for Brooklyn late Saturday afternoon.

Fido Learns Who's Boss at the Capital Dog Training Club

Three-Year-Old Organization Thriving At Military and Glover Roads

If there's doghair on your davenport despite your most determined preventive efforts, you're a setup for the Capital Dog Training Club, which meets in Rock Creek Park every Sunday afternoon for the express purpose of teaching man's best friend to obey.

Started three years ago, the club has expanded to take up several acres of open field at the corner of Military and Glover Roads on the edge of the park. And what's more, its members unwittingly are playing to packed galleries; several hundred idle motorists make invasions every Sunday to watch the fun. Most of them think there's a dog show in progress, but are even more interested when they find that there's a canine school in session.

On a far off hill, ten pooches of varying ages and sizes take elementary lessons from Jack Mullock, who instructs their owners in the proper method of training. Age, incidentally, makes no difference; there is one 7-months-old terrier and another 9-year-old Scottie.

While the novices learn to sit, lead properly, and obey other simple commands, half a dozen veterans of the club are engaged in more advanced work that fascinates the watchers. It's all patterned after obedience classes in recognized dog shows, and most of the old-timers have won their preliminary "degree"—that is, companion dog title—on the basis of work done in class.

Three of the degree winners are owned by instructors in the class—Mrs. Harvey Brown's handsome Doberman pinscher, Faust von Brickley; Claire Crawford's Rajah of Varek, an imposing Great Dane; and Mullock's Welsh terrier, Rebel, who has earned his "companion dog excellent" rating.

With other experienced show dogs these must go through much more difficult routine; they must locate and fetch their masters' bloye or key cases from a large pile of other objects; they must jump fences on command; they must follow and "stay" when they are ordered to; and they must permit strangers to handle them.

Prospective canine members must be 6 months old or over, and although the emphasis is on purebreds, they are not a requisite. Membership is $10 a year, payable quarterly.

Biggest problem facing the club at his point concerns winter quarters; all armories are occupied with defense work, and no one seems to have an empty riding arena.

St. Albans' Bob Bondy Keeps Scoring Lead

Jim Sprinkle Moves into Second Place With Two Touchdowns for Generals

Despite an inflamed eye which kept him idle last weekend, Bob Bondy, St. Alban's stellar back, retained the individual scoring lead among District schoolboys. His 51 points proved too much for rivals to overcome.

Biggest advance was made by Washington-Lee's Jim Sprinkle, who moved into second place over Jim Kurz, of Central, and George McGowan, of Devitt. Two touchdowns against the hapless forces of Fredericksburg (Va.) High gave the lanky scorer a total of 37 points. Kurz saw only a few seconds of action against Tech yesterday and McGowan could not improve on his 30-point total as Devitt dropped a 37-0 decision to Parkersburg (W. Va.) High.

A new threat to Jack Samperton as extra-point kicking champion resulted when "Tiny" Lamb, Wilson's 280-pound specialist, booted four perfect ones in five attempts as the Tigers whipped Georgetown Prep, 34 to 0. Each now has seven placements.

Elmer Raba, Gonzaga triple threat, is far down the list in points scored, but his eight touchdown passes are tops in that department. Earle Elliott, who hasn't scored a point for St. Alban's this season, rates second with seven tosses that accounted for six points apiece.

victory over Penn. With 500 1/3 points, it was given the edge for its game with Notre Dame at Baltimore Saturday, which ranks as the week-end's outstanding contest. The Irish, held to a scoreless tie by Army, slipped a notch to seventh.

Michigan Drops

Michigan dropped from seventh to eighth and Northwestern from ninth to tenth, while Stanford, apparently back on the Rose Bowl track, climbed into the select group in ninth position.

Besides the Navy-Notre Dame game engagement, the week's games involving first-ten teams will send Texas, which should be able to protect its clean slate at least until the Thanksgiving Day game with Texas A. and M., against Baylor; Minnesota against twice-beaten Nebraska. Fordham against sub-par Pitt; Duke, which also looks to have a clear road to a Bowl bid, against little Davidson; the Aggies against S. M. U., Stanford against Southern California and Northwestern against Indiana. Michigan has an open date.

The standing of the teams (first-place votes in parentheses, points figured on 10-9-8-7-6, etc., basis):

First ten:
1. Texas	(73 1-2)	1148
2. Minnesota	(34 1-2)	1111
3. Fordham	(6)	852
4. Duke	(7)	740
5. Texas A. and M.		585
6. Navy		500 1-2
7. Notre Dame		378 1-3
8. Michigan		368 1-2
9. Stanford		353 2-3
10. Northwestern		196 2-3

Second ten: 11.—Army 158 1-3; 12.—Duquesne, 89; 13.—Alabama, 70 1-2; 14.—Tulane, 53; 15.—Mississippi State, 24; 16.—Mississippi, 22; 17.—Missouri, 18 3-3; 18.—Syracuse, 11; 19.—Penn; 4 3-3; 20.—Ohio State, 3 3-3.

Also ran: Oklahoma 3; Vanderbilt and California, 1 each.

Beware the Invisible Ball Play, Opponents of N. C. State

Quarterback Sneak Which Beat Tarheels Is Coach Newton's Secret

By the Associated Press

Raleigh, N. C., Nov. 3.—Coach Doc Newton, a football magician who in the past has veiled such plays as one named after Sally Rand, has a secret.

It is that quarterback sneak which spelled victory for Newton's N. C. State Wolfpack over North Carolina last Saturday and finally convinced Tarheel partisans that they are building character, rather than playing football at Chapel Hill.

If is such a secret that pictures showing how it happened were taken from the State's movie of the game before it was shown to the squad today.

"We'll have to show it so much," Newton explained, "that we thought we ought to take the play out."

The play is a real puzzler. It fooled the fans, most of whom, doubtless, looked the wrong way when it was pulled. It fooled the Tarheels, too, and they also did what Newton hoped they would do—looked the wrong way while Bob Cathey traveled 16 yards unhindered, to the score that won the ball game and gave State its first victory over North Carolina since 1937.

It was the third period of the game, and State was trailing, 7 to 6. North Carolina had scored first, in the opening period, and State had fought back in the second with a touchdown, but failed to add the point.

In the third period, however, State got into scoring position by blocking a punt. Cathey went in with instructions for the Wolfpack to try a pass and then the quarterback sneak.

The pass was incomplete and then came that play—which you can call "the little ball that isn't there play," or anything else which will convey the idea that nobody knows what's happening except those who are making it happen.

Newton won't discuss it freely. He's got a tough string of opponents ahead of him—Virginia Tech, Georgetown, Duke and William and Mary—and he'll certainly need it again.

The way the sneak works seems to be simplicity itself. It looks like this:

The ball seems to go to the spinning back, who spins and hands it to the tailback, who in turn hands it to the wingback.

The only trouble is that as a mass of tacklers brings down the wingback it develops that he doesn't have the ball at all. Neither does the tailback. Neither does the spinning back.

And by the time the opposition finds out who doesn't have the ball, Cathey, the blocking back, has taken it 16 yards for a touchdown and is grinning in the end zone.

And how did Cathey get the ball without anybody seeing him? Well, Newton's not talking, so ask the Tarheels. They ought to know by now.

Jenkins Ready To Give Up Title After a Dispute

By International News Service

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 3.—Lew Jenkins, world lightweight boxing champion, disclosed tonight he may forfeit his title because of dispute with the New York Boxing Commission.

Jenkins admitted the commission had declined to postpone his physical examination in New York to November 7.

The fighter declared he had forwarded to the commission X-ray photographs showing that the third vertebra of his neck is cracked. He declared he would not "try to train with a broken neck." A broken right rib is also still painful, Jenkins said.

The injuries were received in a motorcycle accident before his most recent fight.

"I don't want to lose my title," Jenkins explained, "but I refuse to go into a ring again unless I am in perfect shape and I must have time for my neck to heal."

Koverly Returns To Arena After 4 Years on Coast

George (K. O.) Koverly, who a few years ago one of Joe Turner's big drawing cards, will make his first appearance at Turner's Arena in almost four years on Thursday night's show.

Koverly is remembered for a number of riots he set at the Arena in bouts with Jack Hader, Laverne Baxter and Wee Willie Davis.

Mildred Burke, the recognized feminine champion, will risk her title against Carole Starr, of St. Louis, and Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch" king, will meet Paul Boesch in double windup matches.

Promoter Turner also announced that Babe Caddock would face Maurice LaChappelle in a 30-minute bout.

Heurich Amateur Court League Meets

Nineteen applications have already been received for play in the Heurich Amateur Basketball League which holds its annual meeting tonight at 7 p. m., it was announced yesterday. All managers are requested to show up tonight when all but 12 entries will be eliminated.

Notre Dame Subs in Drill, Varsity Rests

By the Associated Press

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 3.—Notre Dame's varsity gridders were given a rest today while Coach Frank Leahy sent the Reserves through a scrimmage as his staff readied the Irish for Saturday's clash with Navy at Baltimore. The 100-piece university band will accompany the team on the jaunt.

Indiana Drills

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 3.—Coach Bo McMillin stressed Indiana's offensive, especially its running attack, today as his football team began drilling for its Big Ten game at Northwestern Saturday. Russell Deal, Bicknell, Ind., sophomore, replaced Al Bragalone, regular right guard, who hurt a knee in the Iowa clash last week.

Spartans at Purdue

Lafayette, Ind., Nov. 3.—A number of regulars were excused from practice today as the Purdue football team went through a light limbering-up drill for its final home game, against Michigan State Saturday. Co-Capt. Tom Melton, right guard, and tackle Pete Timperman are expected to face the Spartans after vacations with illness and injuries.

Iowa at Work

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 3.—Iowa's Hawkeyes got no rest today despite the fact that they returned to the Western Conference football win column with their triumph over Indiana last Saturday. Dr. Eddie Anderson drilled the team hard on offensive and defensive play. John Maher took over at Bill Parker's end and George Frye filled in at center for Capt. Bill Diehl but Anderson indicated the changes were temporary while Parker and Diehl recovered from minor injuries.

Cyclones Pass

Ames, Iowa, Nov. 3.—Passes filled the air today as the Iowa State College Football team drilled on the best offensive weapon it has shown so far this season in preparation for Oklahoma. Howard Tippee, brilliant sophomore who three for three of the touchdowns the Cyclones scored against South Dakota last Saturday, and Ellis Alexander alternated at the passing chores.

N. Y. U. at Missouri

Kansan Out

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 3.—Don Ettinger, fullback, will be unable to play with Kansas' football team against West Virginia at Morgantown, W. Va., Saturday. Ettinger suffered a back injury in the game with Oklahoma last weekend. The Jayhawkers also will be without the services of Hub Ulrich, left end, whose right knee is sprained.

Illinois Idles

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 3.—Illinois gridders enjoyed a respite from work today before beginning preparations for Saturday's battle with Iowa.

Jim McCarthy, varsity end, was one of the few casualties of the Michigan game, suffering a badly turned ankle. Wes Tregoning probably will replace him. Elmer Engel, tackle, and George Wilson, guard, who were idle against the Wolverines, are expected to be ready for the Hawkeyes.

Movies for 'Cats

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 3.—Northwestern's bruised and shaken football team got a day of rest today after assembling to look at pictures of the 8-to-7 loss to Minnesota Saturday.

All the players escaped serious injury in the game and should be ready for the Indiana test Saturday, Trainer Carl Erickson said. Tony Samarzia, tackle whose knee injury kept him out of the Gopher contest, is expected to be idle two more weeks.

Mrs. Torlinski, Williams Win In Golf Final

Mrs. M. J. Torlinski and Mrs. F. L. Williams divided Class A and B honors in the final competition of the year for the District Women's Golf Association members yesterday at Congressional, a post season Bonus Tournament. Prizes were purchased from a surplus entry fee fund from the past season.

Mrs. Torlinski, the spring tournament champion at the Army and Navy Club, posted a 91 minus 11 handicap strokes for a net 80 while Mrs. Williams, of Argyle, led the higher handicapped bracket with 104-19, 85.

Three tied with net 83s for second low net in Class A and won out in the following order by matching cards: Mrs. D. H. Henderson, Congressional, 94—11—83; Mrs. W. L. Weible, president of the association from Kenwood, who won her first District medal-play prize with 100—17—83, and Mrs. Leo Walper, Indian Spring, 88—5—83.

The matching-card method was also used to settle ties among the net 85s. Mrs. F. W. Evans, Kenwood, won fifth with 94—9—85, and was followed by Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood, 94—9—85; Mrs. Ed Widmayer, Argyle, 98—13—85; Mrs. J. T. Powell, Manor, 97—12—85, and Mrs. Henry Goodman, Woodmont, 97—12—85.

Mrs. George Goetzman, Kenwood, completed the Class A winners with 99—13—86. Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor, missed out with a 90—4—86.

Nine additional prize winners trailed Mrs. Williams in Class B, in the following order: Mrs. G. K. Heiss, Army and Navy, 108-21, 87; Mrs. D. E. Stuart, Indian Spring, 112-25, 87; Mrs. R. Thornburg, Kenwood, 108-20, 88; Mrs. W. L. Patterson, Indian Spring, 112-24, 88; Mrs. L. A. Wells, Kenwood, 118-28, 90; Mrs. K. D. Daub, Indian Spring, 120-29, 91; Mrs. J. Y. York, Army and Navy, 113-20, 93; Mrs. W. E. Baker, Washington, 117-24, 93 and Mrs. F. McCarthy, Argyle, 130-36, 94.

No gross prizes were awarded.

Nominating Group Meets Tomorrow

Mrs. Theodore Peyser, chairman of the nominating committee of the District Women's Golf Association, will be hostess to the club representatives tomorrow to choose the 1942 slate of officers.

No opposition is expected for the present slate, headed by Mrs. Walter Weible, whose nomination for a second term is expected to be only a formality. The only anticipated replacement will be for Mrs. H. J. Cooper, who for business reasons will be unable to continue as secretary.

The annual meeting and election will be held Thursday, December 4, at a club to be named sometime this week. Nomination is tantamount to election in the association.—M. M. W.

G. W. Starts Drills for Game With Furman

In preparation for the quest of their second triumph of the season, against Furman on Saturday at Greenville, S. C., George Washington Colonials went back to work yesterday.

The Colonials had more sparkle and pep than in several weeks as they set about polishing their offense against Furman's defensive organization. George Washington scouts report that the South Carolina club, which has thrashed Davidson and played ties with Citadel and North Carolina State in its last three engagements, is coming along at a fast clip now and will be in top form for the Colonials.

While ordinarily little satisfaction can be gained from a 19-0 licking, the Colonials were so much improved in every department of play against the strong Clemson outfit that Coach Bill Reinhart and the entire camp is heartened.

Line Improves

The improvement in the line play was particularly noticeable. The Colonial forwards were practically shoved out of the park by William and Mary but they rallied against the Tigers to put up the stoutest kind of resistance for 60 minutes. Harry Ledford and Al Romasco, two converted halfbacks, were singled out for especial praise because of their play at end. At the same time, Reinhart pointed out, the move that forced Stan Ziobro to resume his old guard post also was effective.

In the backfield, Stub Martinson, Johnny Pollock and Jimmy Graham showed to advantage. Martinson's steady play at the defensive left halfback post and his signal calling were noteworthy. In Pollock the Colonials may have uncovered a running back who will be of great assistance in the games remaining with Furman, Bucknell and Wake Forest.

May Solve Problem

Pollock's shortcoming in punting and passing thus far have prevented him from getting much duty in the Colonials' left halfback slot, which demands equal ability in all three talents. But Reinhart may solve this problem by pairing Pollock with Graham, using the latter at right halfback and letting him handle the punting and passing chores. Pollock appeared to great advantage in running the ball against Clemson.

The Colonials have yet to win a Southern Conference game and hope to break the ice against Furman, or in their finale with Wake Forest here on Thanksgiving Day. Thus far, they have tied Washington and Lee, and lost to Clemson and William and Mary in loop encounters.

Chicago Hawks Option Wingman

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—The Chicago Blackhawks, who open their National Hockey League season here Thursday night against the New York Americans, optioned Wingman Bob Carse to their Kansas City farm club today.

The Hawks have obtained Dempsey Klun, 17-year-old high school boy, from Eveleth, Minn., home of many hockey stars of past years. Klun probably will spend the season with Kansas City although Manager Paul Thompson considers him a real comer for the Major League.

The Hawks lost to Kansas City, 1 to 0, last night in an exhibition game, last of three between the two teams. Klun was the goalie for the Hawks and Sam Lo Presti, Hawk regular, was in the nets for the Americans for the night only.

Marquette Backfield Man Enlists in Army

Milwaukee, Nov. 3 (AP).—Bobby Dams, Marquette blocking back, leaves the football squad tomorrow to enlist in the flying cadets.

The varsity looked at Detroit plays as exhibited by the freshmen today. The Hilltoppers, who meet the Titans Saturday, have never defeated a Gus Dorais coached eleven.

Miami's Grid Hurricane Is 'Little Giant' of Week

Coral Gable's Amazing Outfit Compiles Brilliant Record Among Smaller Schools

By William J. Tucker,
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Nov. 3.—Batten down, Florida, South Carolina and Alabama because the big wind is headed your way, the same big wind that blew Texas Tech off its undefeated perch to qualify the University of Miami Hurricanes as United Press "Little Giant" of the week.

It's a phenomenal football team that Jack Harding has developed down at palm-lined Coral Gables. Undefeated and untied, the Hurricanes have won from Elon, Tampa, Rollins, Howard and Texas Tech, rolling up 104 points to a paltry 6 for their opponents. The rest of their schedule includes the aforementioned three State universities, and if the Hurricanes can blow by those they will prove themselves giants of a stature other than "little."

Harding, product of Pittsburgh, '26, abandoned his Warner and Sutherland upbringing this season in favor of the frills and furbelows of—but, of course—the Shaugnessy Model T.

Miami Proves Best

Texas Tech used the T-formation, too, and it had carried the Red Raiders successfully through five games. But in the "T-TA-T" at Miami last Friday night Harding proved more apt than Del Morgan, of Texas Tech, among the many borrowers of the Stanford offense, as Miami won, 6 to 0.

T-system teams usually concentrate on outscoring their opponents but Miami has a stiff defense as well as a touchdown punch. In protecting their lead against the Texans, the Hurricanes surrendered only 4 yards in four plays from the 8-yard line, then Fullback Howard Plasman kicked out 61 yards to end the last Tech threat.

Plasman, brother of Dick Plasman, former Vanderbilt and now a professional star, is only a sophomore and first-year men predominate on the Hurricane squad, presaging strong teams for the next two seasons.

A Great "B. O." Team

The Hurricanes' winning record has caught Florida's fancy at the box office. They have pulled in a total of 72,183 fans—24,525 for Texas Tech—and are led only by Tulane, Louisiana State, Duke, North Carolina and Georgia in attendance for home games in the South. Tennessee and Alabama, two of the titans of the territory, have drawn less paying customers than Miami this year.

Miami U. was founded at Coral Gables 15 years ago. The first enrollment was 100, but now it has swelled to 1304. The school did nothing in a football way until Harding came along in 1937 after coaching at Scranton U.

In 1938 he fired a few shots heard around the pigskin circuit by leading the Hurricanes to eight victories against two losses, but had only fair success until this year.

George Tech In Rose Bowl? Yes—as Fans

By Romney Wheeler
Associated Press Sports Writer

Atlanta, Nov. 3.—It won't be official for a while, but the University of Georgia is taking on the University of Pennsylvania in football, starting either in 1942 or 1943—Mississippi State is getting some help in its campaign to require Southeastern Conference members to play at least six intra-league grid contests . . . Mike Conner, athletic commissioner of the "Big Twelve" is expected to recommend adoption of the plan at the federation's December meeting in Lexington, Ky.

Minute meditations: Would it surprise you to learn that Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets definitely will be in the Pasadena Rose Bowl next New Year's? . . . It's a fact! . . . the Jackets play California at Berkeley on December 27, and Coach Bill Alexander has arranged for the entire squad to see the Rose Bowl game five days later.

Cuff stuff: Miss Johnnie Tucker, who sponsored the first Vanderbilt-Sewanee football game 50 years ago, will attend next Saturday's game at Nashville . . . The surgeons have taken a big chunk of color out of Furman's hurricane . . . Billy Lavender underwent an appendectomy and is out for the season . . . Duke partisans are booming Steve Lach, Blue Devil halfback, for All-America . . . McComb (Miss.) football fans wonder whether there are only two scores possible for the local high school this season . . . In four of seven games the team made 27 points, in the other three it rolled up 40 . . . Mississippi isn't the only Southern team that's air-minded . . . the University of South Carolina will fly to Manhattan, Kans., this weekend to play Kansas State.

Cheer corner: This story is told by golf writer Al Sharp, of the Atlanta Constitution. An Atlantan, disgusted with his poor play, said to his caddie: "John, I guess I'm the worst golfer in the club" . . . "Naw, suh," replied the caddie comfortingly, "I think there's wuss. Mr. Papy, they tell me, is the wuss." . . . So E. S. Papy went on playing, keeping his identity to himself.

Note to Duke University: There are more where Capt. Bob Barnett came from . . . Sonny Barnett, Bob's kid brother, is going great guns with the Albany (Ga.) Junior High football team . . . He hopes some day to be an All-Conference star like Bob.

Slugger White Defeats Leto

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 3. — Slugger White, Negro lightweight, of Baltimore, pounded out a unanimous decision over Jimmy Leto, of Hartford, Conn., in a ten-round bout at the Coliseum tonight.

White, 136½, and Leto, 144¾, both centered their attack to the body in ten terrific rounds of pummeling without a knockdown.

but of Washington newspapermen as boxing judges. The first three preliminaries were judged by Bob Ruark, of the News, and Shirley Povich, of The Post. The latter received a real baptism when a second spilled a bucket of water on him and some commission officials.

In the semiwindup, Earl Lowman, 206, former New York heavyweight, gained a 6-round decision over King Kong, of Baltimore. The big fellows fought a little, rassled a little and clowned a little. King Kong was outclassed all the way.

The second prelim between Johnny Yelavich, 147, of Paterson, N. J., and Billy Washington, 146, of the District, ended with Yelavich the winner by a kayo in 2:24 of the third round. The Paterson boy came from behind to take the nod. He punished the local Negro's body and then centered his attack on Washington's head, adding a one-two to the chin which floored Washington for the count.

Washington was a last-minute substitute for Mexican Jackie Sena, who failed to put in an appearance and was suspended for 90 days in N. B. A. territory.

In the curtain-raiser, scheduled for six rounds, Roscoe Perry, local lightweight, scored a technical K. O. victory over Tom Riley, of Greensboro, N. C., when Referee Charlie Reynolds stopped the fight between the third and fourth heats because of a gash sustained by Riley under his chin. The fight had the fans in an uproar. The North Carolina boy's antics added an unexpected comedy touch which even had Perry laughing. Both boys weighed 138 pounds.

Georgetown Prep Midgets Win, 7 to 6

Georgetown Prep's midget grid team hung up its fifth straight triumph of the season yesterday at Garrett Park, winning by 7-6 over a Cleveland Clipper eleven which had previously been unbeaten.

An 82-yeard dash by Connie Harrell in the second quarter gave Prep its touchdow, after which Harrell rushed over the extra point. The Clippers scored their touchdown with 3 seconds of the game remaining. Por Conant hurling a pass 30 yards to brother Bill. The latter's buck for the extra point was short.

Douglas Earns $17.89 a Share In Nine Months

By the Associated Press

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 3.—Record profits amounting to $17.89 cents a share on common stock and a new peak in unfilled orders were disclosed today by Douglas Aircraft Co. in a report covering the nine months ended August 31.

The company's backlog, involving orders for planes and parts amounted to $653,094,006, of which $530,477,614 was in United States Government orders under cost-plus-fixed fee contracts.

Net profit for the nine months was $10,733,046 after various charges and provisions of $10,844,243 for Federal income and excess profits taxes. In the corresponding period of the preceeding year net was $7,288,335 or $12.15 a share after charging off $2,063,831 for Federal taxes.

Under impetus of the defense program the company turned out $110,520,731 worth of aircraft in the nine months period, a jump of 87 per cent over the same period last year.

The report explained that "as in the preceding year, net profits reported in the first nine months of 1041 were derived principally from sales to others than the United States Government although certain unprofitable Government contracts resulting in losses in previous periods are rapidly nearing completion and will cease to be a factor in the near future."

Comparison of the nine months figures with the first half of the fiscal year indicated net profit of $6,533,254 or $10.89 a share for the quarter ended August 31. This compared with indicated net profit of $2,380,257, or $3.97 a share for the May quarter and $1,819,535, or $3.03 a share for the February quarter of this year. Indicated net profit for the quarter ended August 31 last year was $3,899,478, or $6.50 a share.

Nine-Month Sales Of Autos Display Gain of 744,873

Detroit, Nov. 3 (AP).—R. L. Polk & Co., statistical agency, reported today that retail sales of new passenger cars in the United States for the first nine months of 1941 numbered 3,230,964, compared with 2,489,091 in the same period of 1940.

Retail sales of new trucks for the nine-month period show a gain of 29.6 per cent, with a total of 557,609 in 1941 compared with 430,235 last year.

For September alone new passenger car registrations totaled 125,293, a decrease of 49.19 per cent from the August total. New truck registrations in September totaled 43,892, a decrease of 21.88 per cent from the preceding month's total.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP).—Although grain prices spent most of today's market session at higher levels, they closed with little net change compared with Saturday, and in some cases showed small losses.

Soybeans, which rose more than 2 cents early in the day, fell better than 4 cents from the highs.

Grain men attributed much of the early buying to house committee approval of legislation which would permit cereal prices to rise considerably above current levels. However, realization that the price control bill might be changed materially before passage and Washington reports that opposition already has appeared caused much uncertainty. Gate profit-taking appeared in all pits, particularly in wheat and soybeans, and there were some hedging sales which contributed to weakness.

Wheat was up more than a cent early in the day, but later showed small net losses and closed ¼ lower to ¼ higher compared with Saturday: December, $1.14⅛@1.14; May, $1.19½. Corn rose as much as a cent and closed ⅜-½ higher; December, 77⅝@77½; May, 83½@83⅜. Oats closed ⅛-¼ higher; rye unchanged to ⅛ off, after having been ⅜-1¼ higher earlier in the session; soybeans 1⅝-2⅜ lower. Lard finished unchanged to 7 cents lower, reflecting late weakness of grains and a downturn in hogs.

Copper Restrictions Eased in Building Industry

Heavy restrictions against the use of copper sheets and copper strip and screen in the building industry were eased yesterday by action of the priorities division of the Office of Production Management.

The restrictions, scheduled to become effective November 1, would have frozen in the hands of manufacturers, distributors and consumers their stocks of fabricated copper materials and made them accessible to Government requisitioning.

A series of amendments announced yesterday revoked the "freezing" order and permitted the manufacture of copper sheet, strip and screening at a reduced rate and the use of those materials for non-government purposes until January 1, 1942, after which their manufacture is prohibited.

Hereafter a manufacturer may adopt one of two methods of curtailing production of articles used in building construction. He may use 70 per cent of the copper used by him in the manufacture of each such article in a 1940 base period, or as an alternative he may use 50 per cent of the amount used by him between July 1 and September 30, 1941, plus the amount of copper necessary to manufacture articles which are excepted from the restrictions because of their defense necessity.

"This will assist a defense industry which is operating at a higher rate than in 1940, but still requires a drastic conservation in the use of copper," a statement by the priorities division said.

Several addiitions were made to the list of excepted articles. The most important permitted the use of copper "for use for repair of replacement purposes in plants employing chemical processes and in plants processing food where the existing installation is copper or copper alloy, and where * * * that chemical action makes the use of any other material impractical."

Also added to the list of general exceptions were hospitals, in cases where physical and chemical actions would make the use of substitute materials impractical insecticides and fungicides, such as copper sulphates, and the use of copper where essential in the storage, transportation and industrial processing of food.

Three More Oil Tankers Released by British

Petroleum Coordinator Ickes announced yesterday three more United States oil tankers had been released from the British shuttle service, making 15 returned to normal American service during October.

Ickes previously announced the return of 12 tankers and said 25 more would be released by the British government during November under an agreement reached between his office and Britain.

Conservation Payments Cut, Excepting Wheat

Wheat farmers, asked to cut their 1942 acreage, will receive higher rates of conservation payments next year while those for other crops are reduced.

Because of a reduction from 65 million to 55 million acres in next year's wheat acreage allotment, the Agriculture Department announced yesterday, the conservation payment for that crop will be increased from 8 cents a bushel to 10.5 cents.

Department officials explained the higher wheat rate would mean lower payments for other crops such as corn, cotton, tobacco, rice potatoes and peanuts since the total amount of funds budgeted for the program in 1942 is expected to be about the same as this year, $500,000,000.

The 1942 acreage allotments for most of these crops are substantially the same as in 1941. In the case of peanuts, however, the allotment is somewhat larger because the department is encouraging their production for oil as a defense move.

The payments, which are in addition to the price received for crops, may be earned by farmers planting within acreage allotments and carrying out soil-building practices.

U. S. Exports to Soviet Treble in August

While withholding the exact nature of shipments, the department said that goods sent to Russia during August totaled $9,038,000, compared with $3,133,000 in July.

This increase was given as one of the reasons why United States merchandise exports set a record for the war period of $455,000,000 in August. The gain in shipments to Russia, for instance, more than offset the loss of Japanese business due to the freezing of Japanese assets on July 25. Shipments to Japan declined from $3,346,000 in July to $1,362,000 in August. Even the August figures, the department commented, represented mostly delayed reports on shipments actually made in July, since "exports to Japan have been negligible since the freezing of Japanese funds in the United States."

Delivery to the British Empire continued to dominate exports. British Empire countries, including Egypt, took a new record percentage of 71 per cent of total American exports in August. Latin-American shipments, also on the upgrade, accounted for 19 per cent, and the other 10 per cent was distributed around the globe.

The British Empire received $290,000,000 from his country in August, about the same as in July, but about $64,000,000 more than the monthly average earlier in the year. These shipments include, to a large extent, lend-lease material.

Imports also increased in August, the department said, mostly because of larger shipments of lumber, wood pulp and nickel from Canada and of nonferrous ores and metals from Latin-America.

Bank Loans Continue Dip During Week

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks declined for the second straight week in the period ended October 29.

These loans have been rising steadily since the beginning of the defense programs, and officials said they believed the downturn was temporary and due to special factors.

In 101 leading cities, these loans declined two million dollars to a total of $8,554,000,000 in the week ended October 29, by were still $1,782,000,000 higher than a year ago.

Business loans increased in most parts of the country last week, but these gains were more than offset by a decline of 17 million dollars in New York.

The board's 10-city member bank condition statement today gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on October 29, together with the increase or decrease since the previous week and the corresponding week last year (in millions of dollars):

Steel Payrolls Show First Dip In 17 Months

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Average employment in the steeel industry in September dipped to 652,000 persons compared with the August record of 654,000, the first decline in 17 months, the American Iron & Steel Institute said today.

The smaller employment, the Institute explained, "primarily reflects some shifting of demand from certain highly finished steel products requiring large amounts of labor to relatively greater production of plates, shapes and other products needing proportionately less labor in manufacture."

Except for the previous month's total, the September employment was the highest in the history of the industry.

Steel payrolls in September were $110,392,000, compared with $112,757,000 in August, a longer month, the Institute said. In September last year payrolls were $82,068,000.

The Outlook

By Merryle S. Rukeyser, Post Special Writer

Few Industrial Mobilization Leaders Of Last War Assist in Current Effort

Although most of the major business personalities who served President Wilson in the last war are still alive, the current effort at Washington has brought forth new names and new faces.

I have had an opportunity to discuss the present defense techniques with some of the outstanding leaders in the industrial mobilization in the last war.

In making their apparisals of the contemporary situation, the old-timers stress the subjoined points:

1. Under President Wilson, a meticulous effort was made to characterize every board and agency that interfered with peace-time business freedom as "emergency" instrumentalities.

2. In World War I, committees were set up early and were selected industry by industry without interference by Government officials. This time, it was pointed out, there have been delays in appointing such committees, and Government officials, it is alleged, have eliminated some proposed names, depriving the committees of their purely voluntary and autonomous character.

3. This time there has been delay in getting up a requirement board.

4. In the last war, instead of seeking to build up a statistical record on defense materials through issuing long-term contracts, the Government relied more on allocations, which gave each unit in an industry a chance to contribute to the defense needs in proportion to their productive capacity.

The older men assert too that this system obviated the need for forward buying of raw materials by the successful contractors, who thus exaggerate the appearance of shortages. Last itme, they say there was better timing of actual production with inventoried military requirements.

5. Last time, the old-timers assert that there was very sparing use of priority orders, which tend to make far-reaching dislocations and to throw men out of work in civilian occupations.

6. There has been comment on the indisposition to use civilians who had experience in doing similar jobs in the economic mobilization 24 years ago.

7. Some of the old-timers complain of thealleged failure this time to give the people leadership, to which they can voluntarily respond, rather than regimentation. By way of illustration, it was pointed out that gasless Sundays were accomplished during the last war as a means of conserving gasoline simply by the device of making a patriotic suggestion to the people.

Of the major dollar-a-year men who served in the last war apparently only Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board under President Wilson, has been actively consulted this time. Mr. Baruch has been called upon for advice, but apparently the Administration has been slow to come around to the patterns worked out under Wilson. There are known to be a few other consultations, but the big jobs on SPAB, the OPM and the civilian posts in the War and Navy Departments are filled by new personalities, rather than by the veterans of the last war.

Defense Bond Questionnaire

Q. What relationship does the purchase of defense savings bonds have to the threat of inflation?

A. The more bonds bought, the stronger will be the brake on runaway inflation which results from a shortage of consumer goods, increasing purchasing power and consequent rise in prices.

Q. Is the Treasury Department satisfied with the results to date of the defense savings program?

A. Purchases have exceeded the unofficial advance estimates of sales, and the Treasury believes the country is well sold on the idea of voluntary lending for national defense.

Note—To buy defense bonds and stamps, go to the nearest postoffice, bank, or savings and loan association; or write to the Treasurer of the United States, Washington, D. C. Also stamps are on sale at retail stores.

Chain Drug Stores Report Sales Dip

Sales of chain drug stores during September, as reported to the Commerce Department by 44 companies operating 2047 stores, amounted to $22,564,000, a decrease of $179,000 from the August total, but an increase of $3,008,000 over September, 1940. The department's seasonally adjusted index for September stood at 118 per cent of the 1935-1939 average, a drop of two points from August.

The department commented that the August index level "was the highest on record and a drop of approximately only two points in September indicates that chain stores maintained a relatively large volume of business during the month.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 3 (AP).—Cotton futures prices gave up early gains of as much as $1.45 a bale today to close 10 cents a bale higher to 15 cents lower compared with Saturday.

The flurry of buying in early hours quickly absorbed accumulated hedging orders. The buying accelerated on favorable interpretation of the House Banking and Currency Committee's change of the price control bill to permit higher prices for farm products.

Profit-taking, additional hedging and speculative selling were blamed for the decline. Indications of opposition to the price control changes tempered buying enthusiasm, traders said.

Worth Street sources reported gray goods sales were light. Port receipts Saturday, 25,177 bales; port stocks, 3,385,325. Range follows:

If you're the kind of person who wouldn't give a cent for some very fine bargains—in entertainment as well as in merchandise—I don't suppose there's much point in telling you about this.
Literally, it has to do with a one-cent sale.
And to be more specific about it, it has to do with the one-cent sale being conducted throughout the country this week by the Rexall Drug Stores.
In order to call your attention to the fact in a pleasant sort of way, they've engaged time on WJSV today, Thursday and Saturday and have also engaged some superior comedy talent to take care of the job.
Therefore, from 9 to 9:15 this morning you'll be able to hear Comedian Ken Murray being quite funny and incidentally saying something about the one-cent sale; Singer Ken Murray being quite vocal, also funny, and also here and there mentioning you know what; Meredith Willson's orchestra playing some popular airs, and Announcer Harlow Wilcox, who certainly won't be outdone in telling you about the s-a-l-e.
You'll hear the same group again on Thursday, from 9 to 9:15 a. m. and on Saturday they'll be back on the air from 11:45 to noon, with different gags, different songs, different patter—but the same purpose.

'Miss Defense' To Be Crowned Here Tomorrow

Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, will lead in the ceremonies at tomorrow night's Victory Coronation Ball at the Willard Hotel in honor of Miss Dorothy Shorb, recent winner of the "Miss Defense" contest conducted by Bundles for Britain in connection with the Miller's All-Star benefit circus which ended last Friday.

Miss Shorb, who lives on Grace Church Road, Silver Spring, Md., had her candidacy sponsored by the American Legion Post, No. 45, of Commerce Department. The legion will form a special guard of honor.

Russ Smith, orchestra leader at the Rockefeller Center Rainbow Room, will fly down especially to dedicate his new number, "Miss Defense," to the pretty Silver Spring girl. Gertrude Neely, who once played in the "Student Prince," will sing "There'll Always Be an England." Lucille Perkins and Helen Grivakas, who finished second and third, respectively, in the contest, will be among the others to be honored at the ball. Miss Shorb accumulated 766,550 votes as against 700,215 for Miss Perkins.
